Police search office of Toronto editor

TORONTO (CP) — Peter Worthington, executive editor of The Sun, refused Friday to surrender a copy of a controversial letter to four RCMP officers, sent from Ottawa to search his office.

But after a 4½-hour search, the officers found the letter and left without laying any charges.

The Sun used the letter as the basis of a copyright story published Wednesday. The story alleged that the RCMP stopped security screening of separatists in the federal civil service — required by government guidelines — because of interference from Prime Minister Trudeau.

Worthington said the RCMP arrived at his office about 9 a.m. Friday and began the search after he told them he would not surrender the letter.

He said the officers searched books and opened his morning mail, but did not extend the search to other areas of the building.

When he refused to hand over the copy, Worthington said the officers told him he could be charged under the Official Secret's Act.

The act, written in the First World War language, refers mostly to maps of earthworks and trenches or military installations. It contains one

'Out to destroy my reputation'

OTTAWA (UPI)— Prime Minister Trudeau says someone is out to destroy his reputation, and he is determined to find out who it is.

The Toronto Sun in an editorial alleged Thursday that Trudeau had ordered federal police to stop running security checks on Quebec separatists in the federal civil service. The editorial was based on a letter between two of Canada's top security officials.

Trudeau told the House of Commons Friday "The editorial in the Sun . . . is obviously scurrilous, inaccurate and venomous." He said it was "designed to destroy my reputation and credibility."

He said the letter between Gen. Michael Dare, head of the RCMP security service, and Robin Bourne, head of the federal security advisory committee, should not have been leaked to the press.

"I am obviously still distressed that a letter between the highest security officer and the second highest should be leaked that way."

When told by the opposition that the offices of the Sun had been raided, Trudeau exclaimed "I cannot believe my ears."

As both city hospitals prepare

Now strike leaders lean toward VGH

By HUBERT BEYER
Colonist Reporter

Implementation of emergency plans began Friday at both major Victoria hospitals in preparation for a strike which may hit either or both on Monday.

All elective surgery has been cancelled at both Victoria General and Royal Jubilee hospitals.

Urgent admissions are being deferred until further notice.

Preparations are underway for the evacuation of patients who may be safely transferred to levels of care other than acute.

The emergency measures went into effect shortly after the Hospital Employees Union served strike notice on both hospitals.

It was learned that Victoria General may be struck first, rather than the Royal Jubilee which was believed to be the union's initial target.

This last-minute change in strategy was attributed to a more decisive vote in favor of strike action by Victoria General employees.

Meanwhile, hospital officials were in an all-day huddle Friday with the Labor Relations Board to determine how many employees must remain on the job if a strike occurs and how many beds they must maintain.

The board's decision wasn't expected to be known until sometime this morning.

It was also learned Friday that Gorge Road Hospital is next on the list of the union's targets. A strike vote is to be held in the near future.

A union official said Friday while Victoria General may be the initial target for strike action, the strategy may even-

Drink age going up

REGINA (CP) — The Saskatchewan legislature gave final approval Friday to a bill that will raise the minimum legal drinking age to 19 from 18.

A last-minute amendment changed the effective date of the bill to Sept. 1, 1976.

Persons who become 18 before Sept. 1 will be allowed to continue drinking legally, but those turning 18 Sept. 1 or later will have to wait until their 19th birthday for a legal drink.

Enough oil under B.C. —Bennett

VANCOUVER (CP) — Premier Bennett said Friday that British Columbia could become self-sufficient in oil if the federal government allows the price to rise to world levels.

Bennett told a news conference that allowing the price of level of $13.50 a barrel from $8 would encourage exploration in B.C. (See also Page 6)

"We're not self-sufficient but we could be if there was an encouragement to find more oil," he said. "All of our people in the department suggest it's there but has to be sought and found."

Bennett said B.C. has asked the federal government to eliminate part or all of a federal 10-cent tax at the pump to soften pending increases.

House summons ex-MP for mass-bribes charge

OTTAWA (CP) — Irritated members of Parliament decided Friday to call one-time member Auguste Choquette on the carpet for saying half of them take bribes

Choquette, Liberal member for Lotbiniere from 1963 to 1968, was defending a lawyer accused of bribing an immigration officer when he said in court in Montreal Thursday:

"If everybody who had ever taken or given $600 or $700 bribes in their life were arrested, 50 per cent of the MPs would no longer be sitting. I know it because I was an MP for five years."

In Montreal, Choquette said Friday he would "gladly" appear voluntarily before a Commons committee to explain the allegations.

The Commons, in rare agreement, passed a motion by Walter Baker (PC—Grenville-Carleton) to refer the allegation to the House committee on privileges and elections.

A steering committee meeting rapidly agreed to have its clerk check the transcript of the trial to see whether the comments, reported in newspapers, could be verified.

A letter would be sent to the court reporter so he could be called to verify the remarks if necessary.

Choquette would not be called before the committee until the case has been heard — a courtesy to the court.

"I would appear before the committee with the greatest of pleasure," the former Liberal MP said in a telephone interview Friday.

"I also want to say that the whole situation is so widespread that there is really no need for overdramatization of the facts.

"I can't comment further on this until I see transcripts or hear tape recordings of what exactly was said."

Commons Speaker James Jerome said he didn't have the slightest doubt that a valid question of privilege had been raised by Baker.

Liberal, New Democrat and Social Credit spokesmen agreed.

In Quebec City, the provincial national assembly demanded a retraction from Choquette.

Stunning exit

President Ford, who has had his share of bumps and stumbles over the years, bangs his head against helicopter door as he boards aircraft on White House grounds. Ford left Washington on Friday for campaign swing through Nebraska.

H.R. left $23 million

VANCOUVER (CP) — The late H. R. MacMillan, former chairman of MacMillan-Bloedel Ltd., left an estate with a gross value of $23.6 million, his will shows. He died Feb. 9 at 90.

Filed for probate in Vancouver, the will, which is dated July 27, 1973, lists beneficiaries including his two daughters, nine grandchildren, Oxford and Cambridge universities, the Vancouver Art Gallery, his secretary and his gardener.

The main beneficiaries are MacMillan's two daughters, Edna Marion Lecky and Gertrude Jean Southam, with $250,000.

The daughters also receive all household furnishings and first choice of all paintings in MacMillan's collection.

After the daughters have made their selection of paintings, the will states, the remaining paintings will go to the Vancouver Art Gallery.

MacMillan's son-in-law, Gordon Southam, was left the sum of $50,000, and each of his surviving grandchildren got $50,000.

MacMillan left $750-a-month for life to Dorothy Edith Dee, his secretary, and $500 each to 17 different public libraries, mostly on Vancouver Island.

1,000 coffins said ordered in quake city

VENICE (AP) — Italian national police announced figures Friday that more than double the death toll from northeastern Italy's disastrous earthquake—from fewer than 300 to 628.

There were unconfirmed reports of more than 1,000 dead and police put the number of injured at about 2,000. Officials said more than 110,000 were left homeless.

Rescue workers, including Canadian and U.S. military medics, dug through the rubble of northeast Italian towns and villages, searching for bodies.

"We were finding bodies in every ruin," said a police official in charge of rescue operations after Thursday's quake. "We will not know the total until we get to the basements."

The quake demolished or severely damaged more than a score of towns in the Alpine foothills 40 miles northeast of Venice. The villages—strung out in a valley—were hit by aftershocks Friday afternoon. The tremors caused no serious damage.

Tens of thousands—fearing more tremors—spent the night in tents, in their cars and under makeshift shelters in the open. Late evening rainstorms increased their misery.

The state radio reported before midnight Friday night that the death toll might exceed 1,000, but there was no official confirmation. There are reports in Udine—the provincial capital in the centre of the worst-hit area—that 1,000 coffins have been ordered.

Aid arrived from throughout Italy and from abroad. Two hundred Canadian troops were rushed to the area from

Former corrections branch employee:

Pride-stripped cons fail outside

Jail officials commit 'criminal acts that are not prosecuted'

By ELEANOR BOYLE
Colonist Reporter

It wasn't the first time Steve Fader refused the advice of a government official.

This time a corrections branch authority, blowing ink dry on a humanistic, philosophical treatise about prisoners' rights, told Fader "not to be so sensitive" that inmates were stuffed into concrete cubicles, relieving themselves in open buckets.

Now Fader, an anthropologist and former corrections branch employee has himself gathered information he says proves that corrections officials commit criminal acts every day treating prisoners.

Fader's refusal to keep quiet isn't landing him in the same trouble that outspokenness did in his Berkeley, Calif., radical days.

Sanctioned to speak Friday to the Second Canadian Conference of Applied Criminology, he shared time on an agenda with officials such as B.C. police commissioner Dr. John Hogarth, who gave the conference's opening address Wednesday.

The 28-year-old Victoria-area resident researched prison conditions during 22 months when he was among few in B.C. with a licence to see both sides of the incarceration system.

Information officer for the government branch which oversees such areas of recent unrest as Oakalla Prison, Fader talked to prisoners, talked to guards and talked to officials in his term that ended six weeks ago.

His position as editor of the B.C. Corrections Branch Quarterly got him an entree as did his casual looks and frequent failure to show up on time for interviews with jail officials well-briefed on what he should not see.

He says he finally saw most of it.

He says top-level corrections authorities had better look, too, because violence and hostage-taking will continue as long as human beings are submitted to conditions which foster violence.

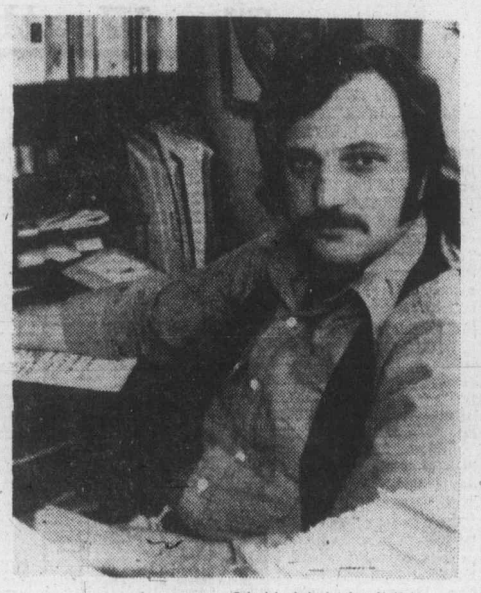

Not a "bleeding heart" with a stereotyped image of oppressed prisoners, Fader cites bad working conditions for prison staff members whom, he agrees with one inmate, "are doing life bits at 40 hours a week."

Prison staff in Oakalla's remand section put up with skimpy toilet facilities and a staff lounge Fader said "violates minimum health department standards as does the entire Oakalla kitchen complex."

As far as he could tell, "there are no clear-cut lines between inmates and guards."

With research concentrating on prisoners' treatment how-

phrase about "any other confidential information."

Worthington said he refused to give them the copy because it had come to him secretly.

"Once you start, where do you stop?" he asked. "You don't mix the security area with newspapers."

"I still haven't been charged," he said after the officers left.

Worthington said he received the photostat copy of the letter in the mail from an anonymous source.

He said the letter, marked confidential, was sent in February by Gen. Michael Dare, director-general of the RCMP's security service, to Robin Bourne, chairman of the government's security advisory committee.

The story quoted the letter as stating:

"The prime minister had issued certain guidelines restricting the security services' inquiries with regard to the Parti Quebecois."

Worthington said the search was conducted in a friendly manner.

He said he believed the RCMP had to go through the motioins of plugging information leaks, but added he wished they were as deligent in tracking down spies as they were in searching his office.

After The Sun published the story Wednesday, Solicitor-General Warren Allmand, whose office is in charge of the RCMP, said Gen. Dare had confused a decision by the cabinet intelligence and security committee.

He said the committee had not given guides to drop security screening of terrorists and Trudeau had never been involved.

Outside the Commons, Allmand said Friday he knew nothing of the raid in advance because the RCMP does not clear such actions with him.

However, Allmand said he had called for an investigation into the theft or release of the letter because "there certainly appears to be something illegal."

Supt. John Bentham, media liaison officer for the RCMP, said Friday he was not going to comment or confirm any RCMP investigative practices "in this or any other practice."

Quake toll rising

a North Atlantic Treaty Organization base in West Germany. The U.S. military flew in medicine and water from the U.S. Army base at Vicenza and supplied 10 medics.

President Giovanni Leone—sometimes sobbing emotionally—toured the quake area for an hour by helicopter, then returned to Rome.

The quake was felt in half of Italy and at least eight other countries—including Yugoslavia, Austria, Czechoslovakia, West Germany, Switzerland, Belgium, the Netherlands and western Poland.

There were no reports of major damage outside Italy and Yugoslavia.

In Venice, only a few chimneys were knocked down. Engineers checked key buildings in the canal city and reported no damage to foundations.

In western Italy, the famous Leaning Tower of Pisa was shaken but suffered no damage and its tilt of 17 feet offcentre remained unchanged, officials said.

"We had just turned on the television set after dinner when I felt a slight jolt," a survivor said in Buia, a town of 8,000 largely in ruins.

"Then the roof caved in on my mother. She died instantly. I found myself in the garden without knowing how.".

The quake took its heaviest toll in Maiano where 58 persons lost their lives.

Among the victims was a young girl crushed when the village church's Renaissance bell tower fell.

"A cloud of dust covered everything and people were screaming and running," said Bruna Montanori, 58, who watched from a nearby balcony as the tower collapsed. "I'll never forget the sight."

The shock collapsed bridges, knocked out telephone communications and railway transport to the northeast.

The Italian government met in an emergency session for urgent relief measures. President Giovanni Leone flew to the quake zone to comfort the survivors.

In the small Yugoslaw town of Tolmin, about 2,000 residents camped out after their homes were destroyed by the earthquake.

The quake centre is about 36 miles east of the site of one of modern Italy's worst tragedies, the Vaimont Dam collapse which took nearly 2,000 lives in 1963.

Earth tremors are rare in northern Italy and occur more frequently in the central and southern sectors of the country. An earthquake in Sicily eight years ago killed 300—and led to one of Italy's biggest scandals. Survivors still are sheltered in makeshift barracks amid reports that millions of dollars earmarked for housing have been spent elsewhere.

In 1908, Italy's worst earthquake killed an estimated 123,000 people in Sicily.

tually switch to rotating strikes.

"We may hit the Victoria General for three days, then Royal Jubilee, then the Gorge (if a vote was in favor of strike action at that hospital)," said Jack Gerow, secretary-manager of the Hospital Employees Union.

Gerow said 75.4 per cent of those attending Thursday night's and Friday morning's meetings of the union had voted in favor of strike action.

The strike vote at Royal Jubilee was 63.4 per cent in favor.

He wouldn't say how many members cast ballots, but added that "both meetings had fantastic turnouts."

After looking at the results of the strike vote, Gerow said, Victoria General was being considered as the union's first target Monday.

Gerow said the union didn't cause the confrontation and would still rather not strike, but management was determined not to back down.

The issue is over recommendations of industrial inquiry commissioner Bert Blair who had recommended a one-year settlement.

The recommendation was accepted by the union, but rejected by the Health Labor Relations Association, the hospitals' bargaining unit, on grounds it would increase costs by more than 15 per cent.

The union served strike notice on the Royal Jubilee at 12:50 p.m. Friday. Victoria General was served strike notice at 11:40 a.m.

The union will be in a position to legally strike after 72 hours, provided the Labor Relations Board has designated emergency positions and beds.

Between the two hospitals, the number of positions which must be maintained to "prevent immediate and serious danger to life, health or safety" is expected to be about 60 or 70.

C. A. Brown, administrator of the Eric Martin Institute and assistant administrator of the Royal Jubilee, said the hospital would do its utmost to ensure adequate services for its patients.

He said all arrangements in case of a strike would be coordinated with Victoria General Hospital.

James Fair, Victoria General administrator, pointed out that not all employees belonged to the Hospital Employees Union.

Operating engineers and x-ray technicians, he said, belonged to other unions and wouldn't be affected by any strike.

Meanwhile, the strike at Vancouver General Hospital is continuing and may soon spread to other hospitals.

Employees at Burnaby General Hospital voted 84.4 per cent in favor of strike action Friday and will be in a position to legally strike the hospital Monday.

There were contradictions Friday as to the effects of the Vancouver strike on hospital patients.

Dr. William Ibbott, president of the B.C. Medical Association, said the strike was resulting in patient suffering and causing bedlam.

Dr. Chaplin Key, executive director of Vancouver General Hospital, on the other hand, said that "essentially the quality of patient care was good."

Many staff members at VGH said Friday they had not been told of contingency plans and were waiting day by day.

VGH admitting staff, however, phoned more than 20 persons slated for surgery Monday and told them not to come in Sunday as planned.

More surgery cases may be cancelled today, staff members said.

Some employees who spoke to Colonist reporters at the hospital appeared to believe the hospital would not be struck, or that any strike would not significantly affect them..

B.C. Rail down by 30 per cent

VANCOUVER (CP) — A company spokesman said Friday that the B.C. Rail is running at about 70-per-cent efficiency because of a work-to-rule campaign by the United Transportation Union. Hugh Armstrong said most of the problems are at Prince George, where about 14,000 tons of southbound freight is backed up in the yard area, hindering the flow of goods from the north.

ever, he is saying prisoners are forced to violence by conditions which contravene the Canadian Bill of Rights and United Nations minimum standards for the treatment of prisoners.

"I'm saying the treatment of untried prisoners, juveniles, sexual offenders, as well as just general prison conditions, constitute criminal acts that are not prosecuted," he said in a pre-conference interview.

The accusing finger doesn't stop at large institutions.

He cites Victoria's Juvenile Detention Home cells as closets of "sensory deprivation," and says "the use of the cells at the Victoria Juvenile Detention Home does not befit any human beings, least of all the troubled young people of Canada."

Detailed descriptions of Oakalla's isolation "steel tiger cages" are part of the paper.

Already copyrighted, the 13-page brief has been accepted by a criminology journal backed mainly by the University of Ottawa, University of Montreal and England's Cambridge University.

Journal and conference official Yvon Dandurand confirmed Crime et-and Justice's pending use of the article in a phone interview with the Colonist from Ottawa.

Fader knows people may find it hard to believe officials commit outright crimes in the corrections system.

"In a lot of cases it's not bad intent," he said. "They just don't know how to move the massive machine of government."

That is guards and wardens on one level.

Those on another level who wield power don't even go into the prisons often, he said, so don't she human faeces on walls of isolation cells where Fader saw inmates locked a month after similar cells at the B.C. Penitentiary were ruled illegal by the B.C. Supreme Court.

Describing the "barn" isolation unit, he said: "With neither ventilation or natural light, walls smeared with faeces, and only a bucket for elimination, the prisoner in the barn suffers punishment completely prohibited by law."

Corrections authorities who don't often tour areas like the barn rely on information that is largely "folklore, by the time it reaches them, if it reaches their Victoria offices at all," Fader said.

Seven years of university education including two at the University of Victoria didn't put Fader on idealism street where a soft approach is considered every answer.

There are people who must be locked up, he believes.

But he contends we shouldn't strip them of the pride they need to ever function normally again.

West-wing Oakalla houses prisoners two to a bathroom-sized cell, he states, "causing such claustrophobic mental anguish that some individuals request isolation."

That occurs at the safe time the United Nations rules say "untried prisoners (such as West-wing's) shall sleep singly in separate rooms," he said.

Sexual offenders at Oakalla are relegated to a "recreation" area that is a mere thin walkway fronting their cells.

Year after year of this treatment is B.C.'s rehabilitation method for these possibly seriously ill people "who in time will be suddenly released in the community and expected to act responsibly," he said.

It doesn't make a lot of sense, he said.

Its perpetuation is typical, though, in a system with so little communication — with what he terms "incarcerated information" as well as incarcerated people.

Public information and even that handed to senior administrators is "laundered" to present a happy picture of progressive rehabilitation programs, he said.

Wilderness outings for both juveniles and adults are a prime example, he said, often stressed to the public as part of a program that may only use them to a limited extent.

A much larger part of inmates' time is spent staring at close concrete walls that chip away at the human spirit, he said, causing the "riots which serve as much as cathartic entertainment as protest."

Further violent action will only be natural, he said, with society's continued inaction.

Your Good Health

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Several months ago I gave birth to my first-born. My husband and I were quite anxious to resume our sex life. It is, however, so painful for me that I would rather do without.

How long after a woman has a baby does she return to "normal" sexually? Or is it possible that I was stitched up too much? — M.S.

The post-partum examination is usually done at from four to six weeks, at which time the uterus and other structures have returned to normal and sutured areas have healed. Most obstetricians suggest abstinence for this interval.

You probably have had your check-up by now. But since you continue to have so much pain you should be checked to rule out some local problem. Sometimes there is a psychological factor involved in sex difficulties after pregnancy.

I suggest you return to your obstetrician, who encounters these matters daily. The need for surgical correction is rather rare in these cases.

Ottawa erred on pacemaker

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal health department said Friday it erred in the name of pacemaker being watched for possible defects.

The department said patients with the 59-55 Rate Adjustable Medronic pacemakers were being watched by their physicians after problems with that type in the United States.

The pacemaker had been identified Wednesday as a 59-55 Rate Adjustable Metronic—a "t" instead of a "d" in the last word identifying the type.

Nine patients in Canada were being watched after their doctors were notified that the rate of the pacemaker may change and cause its battery to run down prematurely.

The U.S. Food and Drug Administration announced Wednesday that the faulty pacemakers should be replaced if the patient's heart was totally dependent on the device.

Over forty is sporty

CHICAGO (UPI) — Middleaged men are the most attractive males of any age group, a study presented Friday in Chicago concludes.

Carol Nowack, assistant professor of psycology at Wayne State University in Michigan, said she made the study by showing slides to a variety of persons.

All groups, including young women, agreed that the middleaged men were most attractive, she said, but the magic didn't transmit to middleaged women.

Quebec front calls truce

QUEBEC (CP) — The common front of 175,000 teachers and hospital workers declared a seven-day truce Friday to try to force a breakthrough in stalled negotiations with the Quebec government.

Michel Grant, a front spokesman, told a news conference that walkouts and pressure tactics would cease until May 15, at which time the front's steering committee would evaluate results of the action.

"We want to see during this period if it is possible to reach a negotiated settlement," Grant said.

The union spokesman said the government had been refusing to table counter-offers since the Quebec national assembly passed special anti-strike legislation using the pretext that negotiations cannot continue while walkouts disrupted schools and hospitals.

"We want to take away the government's crutch and see once and for all if the government wants to negotiate," he said.

Grant said the front wanted a new wage offer from the provincial treasury in response to a union move cutting $127 million from total wage demands.

Robert Gaulin, another front spokesman, said the truce would be followed by a meeting of the front steering committee to decide further action.

He said the 175,000 workers may opt for an unlimited general strike, they may invite the government to impose a settlement by decree or continue the contract battle into the following school year.

Quebec MP has fears of RCMP 'coup d'etat'

OTTAWA (CP) — One Liberal MP's fears of an RCMP coup against Quebec gathered little support Friday in the federal cabinet.

Solicitor-General Warren Allmand rejected the fears expressed by Louis Duclos (L—Montmorency) in a Montreal interview Thursday.

The MP said then he was troubled that Conservative lawyer Michel Cote has been appointed in Montreal to prosecute RCMP charges against Liberal Senator Louis de Giguere.

'It's the latest in a series of incidents in this Sky Shops investigation that leaves me wondering what the RCMP are up to," said Duclos.

"Are they planning a coup d'etat or something?"

Marc Lalonde, health minister and Prime Minister Trudeau's Quebec lieutenant, brusquely refused to comment on the MP's statements.

Allmand simply said he could not support them.

He told the Commons that there is no evidence to support suggestions by Duclos that the national police force is planning a coup d'etat.

Allmand was replying to Allan Lawrence (PC—Northumberland Durham) who asked facetiously whether the armed forces, boy scouts and emergency measures organization were standing by "with bayonets fixed" to put down any take-over bid by the RCMP.

Later, in a more serious vein, Lawrence asked whether Allmand shared the opinion of his fellow MP. Such statements damaged the credibility of the police force.

Almand replied that he did not agree with Duclos' opinion.

Thursday, Duclos said that by hiring Cote as its lawyer, the force had put the "icing on the cake."

No one was more clearly identified with the Opposition than Cote, he said.

The Sky Shops case, involving alleged payoffs in connection with the granting of leases at a Montreal airport, was brought to public attention as the result of Conservative party probes.

Five men, including de Giguere and National Hockey League president Clarence Campbell, have been charged with influence peddling and conspiracy with the case.

Marchand only 'noticed things'

OTTAWA (CP) — Environment Minister Jean Marchand said Friday he did not know whether he was being followed but he had noticed things that made him wonder.

The minister expanded in an interview on remarks he made Thursday about being followed.

He said he was told by a member of the parliamentary press gallery that he was being followed. He added that if that was so, it was an odious practice.

Asked if he had confirmed that he was being followed, he said only that he had "noticed things but not enough to make a statement."

He said in a radio interview Thursday he was being followed by people who wanted to "destroy me politically."

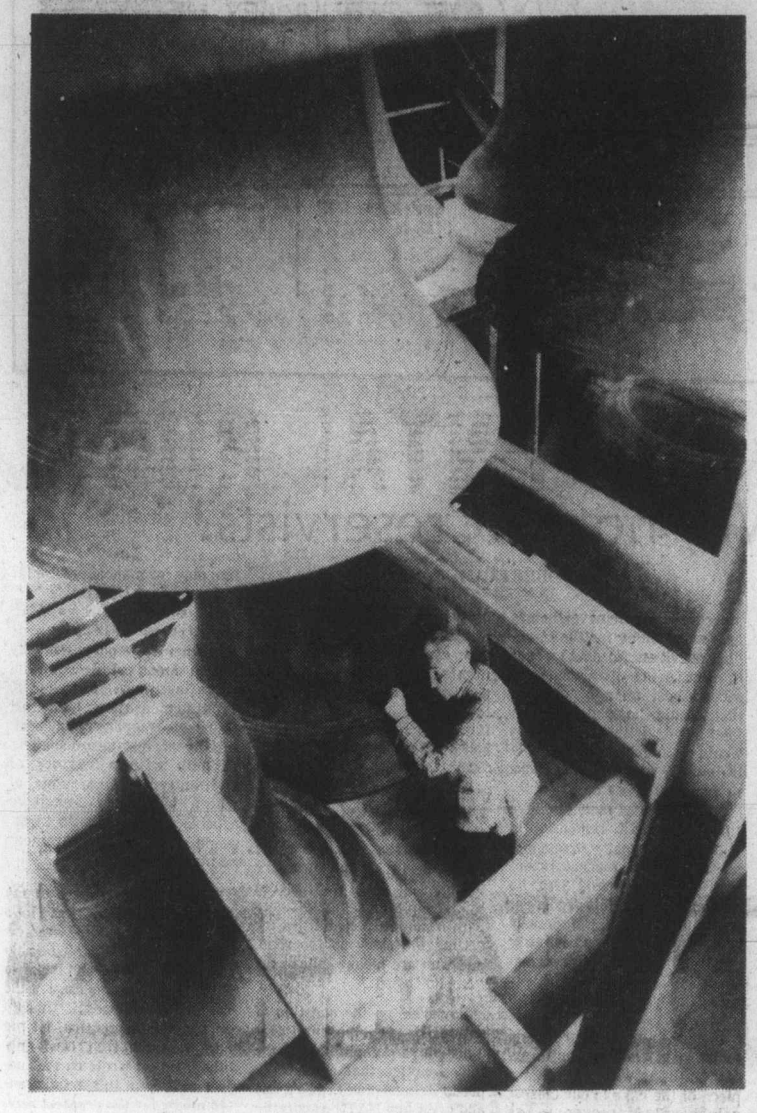

"I have nothing to hide, but I find it simply odious that I am followed simply to see if they can find something abnormal that can be exploited politically."

The Conservative party has admitted hiring a detective. But Elmer MacKay, the MP who has badgered the government with disclosures in the Sky Shops affair, said the detective was not hired to follow Marchand.

In fact, he rejected any idea of Marchand being followed, saying, "I feel sorry for Jean Marchand if he feels that paranoid."

Meanwhile, Solicitor-General Warren Allmand told the Commons Friday he was still investigating reports that certain political parties or figures had hired a private detective to check MPs.

He made much the same statement in the Commons Thursday and MacKay said later that his party had hired a former private detective to verify public corporate documents relating to the Sky Shops affair, but that was the limit of his work for the party.

An appeal to reason

THERE MAY BE SOME CYNICS who will not accept the assurance of the United Transportation Union's chairman, Glen Bowles, that the work-to-rule program now in effect against the B.C. Railway has nothing to do with the government's decision to bring in legislation outlawing strike or lockout on the vital public-owned line.

Two days after Labor Minister Allan Williams disclosed the government plan to restrain impetuous action by labor or management to the detriment of the B.C. Railway and the people it is supposed to serve, Mr. Bowles announced his union's intentions, but with the explanation that:

"We're fighting for a contract . . . Our action is for an agreement and nothing else."

And he added: "We can beat the other stuff (referring to the government's bill proposing compulsory arbitration between the railway and related unions) by ignoring it."

Mr. Bowles at some future date may explain exactly what he means by that phrase. In the light of Opposition leader and former labor minister William King's statement that the bill is "a declaration of war on labor," and B.C. Federation of Labor secretary Len Guy's that the government can expect "all-out war," it would not be surprising if Mr. Bowles' remark is interpreted as a threat of defiance to whatever regulations are eventually contained in the Railway Operation Continuation Act (Bill 22).

It would be unjust of course, to jump to any such conclusion.

The United Transportation Union and others associated with the B.C. Railway's operation may recognize what even the militant British trade unionists now acknowledge: that there must be real restraint in contract demands.

In response to income tax concessions, British labor has agreed to limit wage increases for a year to 4.5 per cent.

Even more encouraging to those who hope to keep the peace in industry is the unprecedented decision by parties in the West Coast grain trade to voluntarily submit to binding arbitration any future dispute.

It may be that the agreement was encouraged by the appointment of Landon Ladd six months ago to act as consultant to both sides in the industry, so frequently disrupted by costly disputes in the past. Mr. Ladd will serve as a mediator-arbitrator.

There is a similar mechanism in Bill 22. A special commission will be appointed to inquire into matters affecting labor-management relations, presumably with much the same function as has Mr. Ladd in the grain area.

If labor and management can find a formula for compromise and co-operation in the long-troubled grain industry where violence threatened more than once, it should not be beyond achievement by responsible parties on the B.C. Railway — or anywhere else in the system. But first there has to be desire.

Second thoughts

SHADES OF B.C. A report from Wellington says the new National Party government of New Zealand has embarked on a program of belt-tightening to correct the financial failings of the previous Labor Party administration.

The course that has been set is described as one that is deliberately designed to lower the country's standard of living. With the country's balance of payments deficit burgeoning to frightening proportions, this is Prime Minister Robert Muldoon's way out.

An exact parallel cannot be drawn with actions of the new Social Credit government here. Premier Bennett has chosen different notches in the belt to deal with B.C.'s indebtedness that burgeoned during the regime of the NDP.

In both instances, though, the tightening is drastic and the standard of living here could well be affected in the attempts being made for a closer balancing of the books in short order.

It's a pay-now policy in New Zealand, just as in B.C., although there is a difference. The people are not being confronted with enormous increases in costs, such as B.C.'s car insurance rates and other transportation levies, the latest with ferry fares.

The Muldoon plan is to cut off or curtail credit buying on which, it is said, thousands of New Zealanders have been depending to maintain a comfortable standard of living. All credit purchases of new cars and light trucks has been banned. And the deposit requirements on some household equipment have been increased by as much as 50 per cent.

The Wellington report says the measures, at the beginning, were accepted "somewhat meekly" by the population in an awareness of the country's financial position. But it is clear that the people do not expect that the belt-tightening will have to last for a long period of time.

"Indeed, there already are signs that the . . . administration is finding its post-election 'honeymoon' with the public is over."

And here a close parallel might well be in the cards.

"A recent by-election produced new victories for the Labor Party," the report points out "and some observers say that thousands of voters who switched allegiances last November after Mr. Muldoon's promises of tough, but fair, economy measures are having second thoughts."

There is little doubt that the performance of the new government of B.C. since December is encouraging second thoughts, too, with an increasing number of Social Credit voters beginning to wonder why the indebtedness has to be dealt with "in one fell swoop" as it were.

The June 3 by-election in predominately-NDP Vancouver East can hardly be called a fair test of government popularity, but the block-buster bill-paying policies undoubtedly will be reflected in the voting.

The saving of Egypt's temples

By CHRISTOPHER PARKER from Luxor

Block by block, 50,000 pieces of granite are being dismantled from a cluster of 14 ancient Egyptian, Greek and Roman temples on Philae Island in the River Nile and reassembled on another island a quarter of a mile away.

The island of Philae is in Upper Egypt between the older, British-built Aswan Dam and the larger new Russian-financed Aswan High Dam.

Until recently, only the tops of the pylons of the Temple of Isis protruded above the Nile floodwaters. But, in a $12 million project, an Italian company, with Egyptian workmen, built a coffer dam around the island and the temples were pumped dry.

In the dismantling work each of the 50,000 granite blocks has been numbered and measured for re-assembling on Agilkia Island, which stands higher above the flood level.

The top has been blasted off Agilkia and the island has been bulldozed and carved into the same shape as Philae Island. It has been re-modelled and landscaped — complete with a rocky hill transferred from the old island — so that all will appear the same as in Pharaoh Neiktanabo's day nearly 2,000 years ago, with the addition of the Greek and Roman temples built in later times.

The temples of Philae, often called the Pearl of Egypt, should be re-erected on their site by the end of next year. This will complete the $40 million rescue program — including the famous Abu Simbel temples — which began 13 years ago.

Said Professor Ramzy Naguib, of Egypt's tourism ministry: "Soon we will ferry boatloads of tourists to the new island to watch floodlit shows of the temples, with music and narration telling how Pharaoh Nektanabo began building the first temple of Isis in 500 B.C."

Altogether a total of 15 sets of temples have been rescued from the Nile floodwaters now increased by the construction of the giant Aswan High Dam. Fifty countries contributed through UNESCO to help to save the rich assortment of ancient monuments.

More than 35 archaeological missions excavated in the Nubia region of Upper Egypt between 1960 and 1967. They came from universities and institutions in the United States, Britain, Russia, West Germany, Switzerland, Italy, Netherlands, France, Poland, Canada, Hungary, Spain, India, Austria and Czechoslovakia.

They worked on archaeological sites between Aswan, near the dam wall, and the Sudanese frontier. Missions from Yale and Columbia Universities and New Mexico Museum of the U.S., went to the Nubian Desert to study prehistoric remains of man who settled in Egypt's ancient Nile Valley.

Some visiting foreign archaeologists consider that many more ancient temples, tombs and treasures elsewhere in Egypt are in danger of being lost for ever unless the government takes urgent action to preserve them.

The government's antiquities department is in dire need of more funds but in the present state of Egypt's war-ravaged economy perhaps it is understandable that the needs of the present come before preserving the past.

The government is concerned about the growing hauls of tomb robbers and the expanding trade in exporting Egyptian antiquities.

The antiquities department is no match for the robbers and smugglers, who are becoming increasingly better organized. In one raid in recent times several lorry loads of plundered treasures were discovered in a house near the Pyramids of Giza outside Cairo.

A team of Americans from the Chicago Institute, based at Luxor, is urgently mapping out known sites of the world's richest concentrations of ancient tombs and monuments — including the Thebes acropolis on the west bank of the Nile — before much more of Egypt's past finds its way to the antique dealers of Europe and America.

The Luxor area teems with funerary temples erected by kings and nobles to offer sacrifices and perform religious rites and prayers for the spirits of the dead. There is the famous Valley of the Kings carved in solid rock and the priceless and highly preserved and carefully guarded tomb of Tutankhamun.

But there is also much else that has still to be recorded and some of it is in danger of disappearing through neglect.

Dr. Kent R. Weels, director of the Chicago Institute, said: "The majority of tombs have never been recorded or studied. We are carrying out a more systematic mapping of the tombs and sites than has ever been done before.

"Many are falling apart. We are trying to catalogue them in order of priority — which are most in need of immediate attention, which can be conserved in a few years."

The Chicago Institute is run by American Egyptologists who work here seven months each year during Egypt's annual cool season.

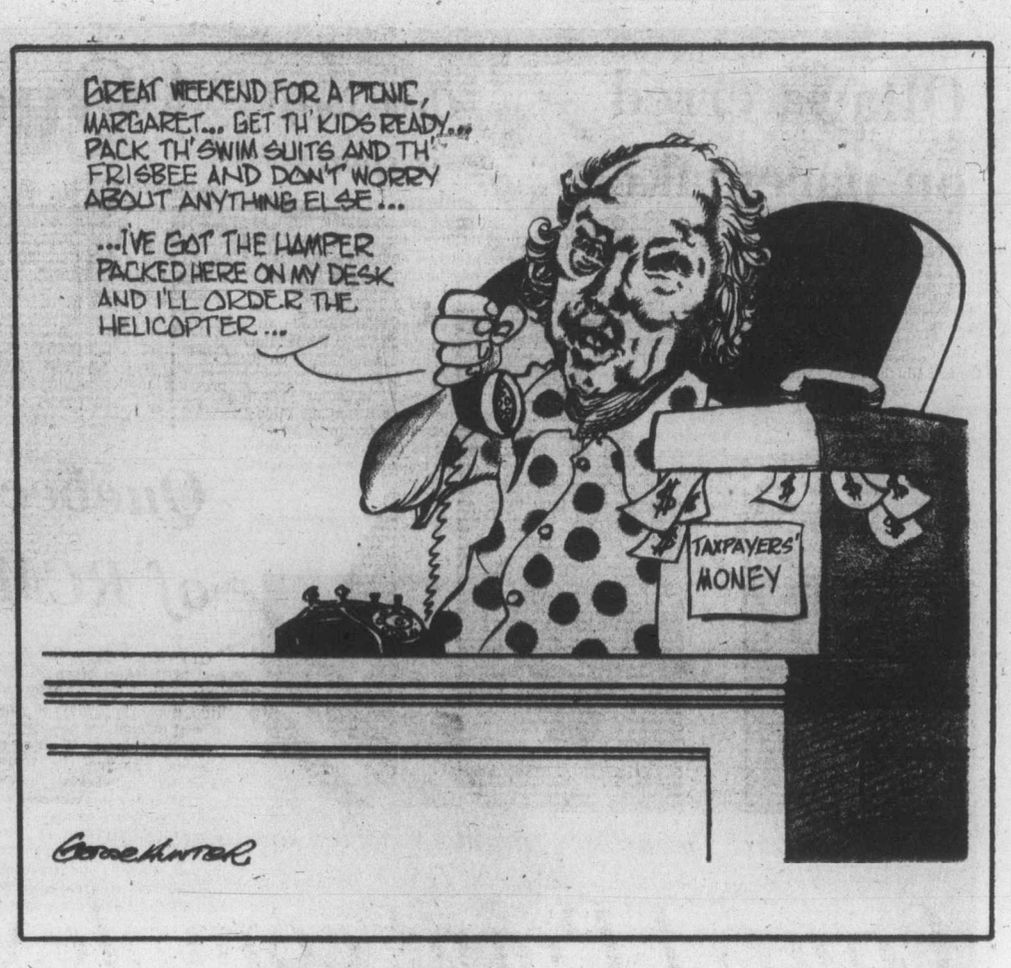

Over the last 50 years the institute has carried out systematic recording and mapping of notable known major temples, such as Karnak, Luxor and Medinet Habu. Already much that Chicago experts recorded 20 or more years ago has disappeared.

Thieves have relentessly chipped away with chisels at statues and facades of funerary temples. Whole walls of hieroglyphics have been broken away from temples.

The ease with which it is possible for a visitor to Egypt to secure an antique is amazing. For 25 piasters (English pence) it is possible on a quiet day for a museum visitor to be taken down a tunnel in the Valley of the Queens to inspect the mummies and to be offered bones and artifacts from sealed tombs.

For Olympic Games

Why not U.S. reservists?

By ROBERT CAMERON

No doubt in the world that Canadians in general make fine fighting men. If asked to give the principal reason for this, I would unhesitatingly say it's their well known "can-do" spirit. But paradoxically, this fine quality can equally be their own worst enemy.

A classic example of this latter is military support being arranged for the forthcoming Olympic Games in Montreal. The latest published figure on numbers programmed for this seems to be 16,000. However, privately I'm told that almost every military person in Canada, and not on crutches, will be in the act one way or another. So what we have to ask ourselves is whether this makes sense, either for the Department of National Defence, or more importantly for Canada.

For some time now, our Chief of Defence has been telling us that the 78,000 regulars and 19,000 militia allowed him are not nearly enough to support his assigned commitments efficiently. As early as 1974 Defence Minister James Richardson agreed with him on this. Nevertheless the old gung-ho spirit seems to have prompted the general to take on this very sizable Olympic assignment, despite the mockery it makes of his persistent pleading to have commitments reduced, or his manpower ceiling increased.

Aid to civil power in many circumstances is certainly a normal assignment for any nation's military personnel. However the use of 16,000 troops on extended duty, in support of what is essentially one of the biggest commercial fandangles in the world today, seems like going overboard with misguided enthusiasm. Great exposure for military personnel. However, can we really criticize our citizens for not taking defence responsibilities seriously enough, if we do this sort of thing with their money?

Regrettably there is a sizable security problem involved for Mayor Drapeau's extravaganza — a sporting event that has been associated with enhancing the prospects of peace in the world.

But only 5,000 of our 16,000 service personnel will apparently be needed to aid civilian security forces; the rest will be performing tasks that have nothing to do with security per se.

Use of so many service men — to support Montreal's second big pitch for international renown in a decade — might be justified if it was in any sense a national priority, and there was no alternative. However, this operation certainly shouldn't be a national priority with the country in the state it is. And there is an alternative to diverting such huge numbers of our small defence establishment to support it. I wrote the idea up last year.

Briefly stated, it was to arrange a military contribution from a few friends that are better endowed with military manpower than ourselves, and who could very easily pinch hit for Canadians in many of the 11,000, non-sensitive tasks.

This proposal could of course be contested with the argument that, despite its mark time effect on practically all regular summer operations, the Olympic exercise will nevertheless be good training for the Canadian services. No doubt about it. But going it alone is a second best form of training that would be beneficial. A joint effort with other forces would be much more valuable training — and certainly more to the point these days.

As a matter of fact, I believe that the CORK rehearsal in Kingston last year was sensibly supported to a modest extent by Royal Navy reservists. So why not build on this precedent and invite those U.S. reservisits, who have previously summer training with Canadians in Gagetown, to do their thing this year in Montreal instead?

If this Olympic caper is held to be good training for Canadian militia, why not offer a piece of the cake to our closest neighbors? Moreover — as someone quipped — with de Gaulle safely out of the way, we might profitably involve some French military personnel as well!

There are two principal bogies that have been raised about this suggestion. One is that the president of the Olympic Committee wouldn't countenance it. But I'm wondering if those who believe this can produce any arguments indicating why this gentleman has any more right to interfere in our internal affairs than President de Gaulle had during Expo '67?

The second bit of cold water (actually more tepid than cold) thrown on the idea was more predictable. "The country wouldn't buy it," I was assured by a couple of senior officers with major responsibilities for getting the show on the road, and who are clearly full of the "can-do" spirit.

However, on the question of national pride inhibiting Canadians on a simple thing like this, I notice that notoriously proud Britons didn't raise a hue and cry when NATO's supreme commander in Europe recently arranged an exercise of the multi-national ACE Mobile Force (AMF) in Southern England. Organized in the first instance for quick reaction to enemy probes in NATO's relatively weak northern and southern flanks, this was the first time the AMF was called into play for manoeuvres so far from the Iron Curtain.

By contrast with an AMF operation, friendly co-operation we would reasonably use in Montreal wouldn't involve artillery, tanks (Mr. Trudeau please note!), aircraft or indeed, weapons of any sort. Intelligent, disciplined soldiers to help with a variety of civilian-type tasks, none of which have any sensitive aspects associated with them, would satisfy the requirement admirably.

So, with due respect to my two military critics, I say let's get on with it. There are few things our public can't be sold if it makes sense, and is put to them with intelligent use of the media at our disposal. In support of this contention, let me note that the first (and only other) time I wrote on the subject matter in this article netted me by far the greatest newspaper coverage, right across Canada, of anything I've done in 10 years of free-lancing. Some people may hold that the originality of the idea caught the fancy of my editors. Even so, I think it's only fair to credit most of them with recognizing common sense as well.

Discrimination

Actors and the border

By PETER WORTHINGTON

A while back newspapers across the country expressed a certain amount of dismay that the Canadian television actors' union (ACTRA) had refused a work permit to American actress Kathleen Widdoes who was wanted by the CBC to star in a play about Canadian sufragette Nellie McClung.

The CBC cancelled the show, rather than be dictated to by ACTRA. Many felt Canadian actors, and Canada itself, were degraded by this gesture of excessive nationalism. This may have been valid in principle — art and talent should be universal and not constrained by nationalistic pettiness — but it was wrong in fact. And the fact is, according to a variety of ACTRA members and officials, Canadian actors have the damndest time getting permission to work in the U.S. or Britain.

Many may think it is wide open for Canadian actors to perform in the U.S. Wrong. U.S. immigration is stingy with "green cards" that allow Canadians to work in the U.S., and the American union can't let foreigners work until such a card is given. So it becomes a vicious little circle — no job until a green card, and no green card without a job. The feeling of many aspiring Canadian actors is that the U.S. union and U.S. immigration are, in effect, conspiring to keep jobs for Americans only, or for those foreigners who already have green cards.

This alters the situation. Of course Canada can't practice an open border with actors, if there is discrimination on the other side. Reciprocity should apply. As for the question why American actors have to be used to sell Canadian shows, the answer is in one word: "Promotion." The Americans have it, we don't.

Everyone acknowledges that individual Canadian performers are the equal of any. And in face-to-face competition they fare well. But Canada — and here the CBC is the greatest villain — produces dull shows and is reluctant to promote its own. We prefer to capitalize on the promotion of others. How many CBC stars can one name...? How many have fallen by the wayside for want of support just when they were beginning to attract attention? How many have their hearts broken by their employers' disinterest?

One can make the argument that in entertainment (as in modern art?) it is 10 per cent talent and 90 per cent promotion. Examples abound. A classic case seems to be Raquel Welch. She has recently been in Toronto, wooed by those media people whose job it is to pay homage to stars.

Raquel was presented as some sort of "brain" to go with the body. As for being a singer and dancer, she isn't. Nor, in interviews, did she give evidence of being much of an intellect. She may be nice, sincere, shrewd, whatever, but there is little reason for the city to do handstands over her. She is a creation of promotion and publicity.

The CBC likes to bring foreign actors in for starring roles, pays them more than any Canadian would get and exploits the publicity of others to sell its own product, which more often than not is lousy, or at best mediocre.

ACTRA, which was strangely silent during the Nellie McClung foofaraw, has fired back and says American actor James Franciscus was paid $25,000 to play the lead in the CBC production, The Horseman — more than the CBC has ever paid a Canadian for a role.

ACTRA says the American Screen Actors Guild (SAG) and American Federation of Television and Radio Artists (AFTRA) talk about the principle of an "open border" for actors, but practise a closed shop, with work going to American actors first.

ACTRA feels the CBC has an obligation, being state-supported, to concentrate on Canadians and says: "The Great Canadian Culture Hunt can only take place in Canada."

Fair enough. So we are back to promotion — give the treatment to our "stars" and Canadians will flock to watch and listen to them. And the CBC should be the most conscious of this. If Canadians can be brainwashed into thinking that Frank Sinatra still has a voice, that Marlene Dietrich is worth paying money to see, that Raquel Welch is an intellect and has talent, they can be brought to believe anything.

The Toronto Star's Dennis Braithwaite was right in the Nellie McClung case: He said the CBC should have conducted a massive Canada-wide talent search for an unknown actress to play the unknown Nellie. That's what Hollywood did, remember, for the person (Vivian Leigh) to play Scarlett O'Hara in Gone With the Wind, and look how successful that turned out. That's promotion!

Courtyard separating townhouses from condominiums

$20,000 worth of furnishings adds beauty to suite

Laurel Point complex lap-of-luxury living

How do you write a story about Laurel Point, Victoria's newest, swankiest and most expensive condominium development, without making it sound like unpaid advertising?

Fact is you can't. It's either no story at all or something that might be called an unsolicited testimonial.

There are some fancy condominium developments in Victoria, but Laurel Point beats them in every way.

Where else can you live surrounded by green space, have lots of privacy and a view of ocean, Olympic Mountains, Sooke Hills, Legislative Buildings, Empress Hotel, the Princess Marguerite, all rolled into one?

Start with seven townhouses that are the most expensive structures of their kind ever built in Victoria.

Anyone with $150,000 to spare can take possession of three storeys of almost the most luxurious living money can buy.

Apart from the three bedrooms, there is a cosy, yet large studio with slanted walls on the third floor opening onto a private cedar-panelled sundeck.

On the main floor there's a living room with fireplace that also opens to a "conversation pit."

Undrground parking? Naturally. Gimmicks? Lots and some pretty useful ones like instant boiling water.

What kind of people are buying townhouses like this? One chap from Vancouver, bought a unit for a second home. He gave an interior decorator a $30,000 to $40,000 budget to decorate and furnish the place for him.

Slightly out of your reach?

Consider the condominium suites just across from the townhouses.

Separated from the townhouse complex by a large courtyard with rose garden, swimming pool, walkways and benches, is a medium-rise building with 114 suites.

Prices range all the way from $64,000 to $136,000, depending on size, location and view.

The view is spectacular at worst, but out of this world from the four penthouse suites on the top floor.

The 360-degree view extends far beyond the reaches of Greater Victoria.

For the more modest budget, there are 11 one-bedroom suites starting at $64,000. Two-bedroom suites, 94 of them, start at $78,000 and three-bedroom suites plus den cost a cool $136,00.

Purchasers to date include mostly elderly people who have had enough of mowing lawns and dodging traffic to get to town in the morning.

Although there is no policy against people with children none of those who have bought units have young children.

Developers of the project are Canadian Freehold Properties Ltd., a wholly-owned subsidiary of C-I-L.

The condominium complex is the first phase of the development. Next on the list is a hotel to be four storeys in height and another, somewhat higher but smaller condominium building.

The one aspect which makes the entire project worthwhile even for people who won't live in it, is a 2.5-acre park to be developed by Canadian Freehold at an estimated cost of $300,000.

When finished, the park will be turned over to the city of Victoria and will be public property, allowing continued access to the waterfrint all around Laurel Point.

Additional landscaping for the development as such is estimated at another $200,000.

Gossip columns spreading

WASHINGTON (CP) — Henry Kissinger's dog Tyler has diarrhoea. Barbara Streisand paid $500,000 for her New York towshouse. Elvis Presley is seriously worrying about his weight as he fades into a pudgy ex-idol and Raquel Welch, who has ulcers, is extremely kind to her mother.

Those are but a few of the momentous bits of knowledge to be gained from a random reading of one of the fastest-growing phenomena in the United States—newspaper and magazine gossip columns.

Nearly every major newspaper now has some kind of "people" (translate as gossip) section and in the last two years several new publications have sprung up to help satisfy the public appetite for trivia.

The more sophisticated, such as The Ear column (Ear nose all) in the Washington Star, bear a striking resemblance to the brilliantly satirical British publication, Private Eye.

The Star is by so means the only publication to have developed an ear for gossip, although its daily commentary on the Beautiful People is among the most acid, waspish and genuinely funny.

The New York Times, for example, has added its version of a gossip section and Newsweek and Time have expanded their newsmakers and people divisions to two pages from one.

The National Star, People magazine, Know and Celebrity have all shot to prominence in the last two years, describing the private antics of prominent people from Richard Nixon to Dinah Shore and Bert Reynolds.

The pace-setting National Enquirer is grabbed up in grocery stores and other retail outlets at the rate of 4.5 million copies a week.

The epidemic is made more delightful by the reluctance of editors and writers to acknowledge it. Richard Stolley, managing editor of People, says: "We publish personality journalism, not gossip."

And Ray Kerrison, editor of The National Star, which recently headlined: "Glenn Campbell: How I got caught in a love triangle," says: "We are not a gossip publication. We are oriented towards human interest and celebrity news."

That may be part of the reason The National Star has offered. Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis $1 million for an exclusive interview.

Most gossip writers seem to agree that Elvis and Jackie are still the two top attention-grabbers followed closely by Cher, of Sonny and Cher fame, and actor Robert Redford.

Much divorced and married Richard Burton and Elizabeth Taylor also seem to rank highly, along with almost everybody even remotely connected with the Kennedy family.

The competition can be fierce. The Washington Post gossip columnist recently learned Joan Kennedy, wife of Senator Edward, was attending Alcoholics Anonymous sessions but decided not to print it at the urging of Mrs. Kennedy's family. Women's Wear Daily, however, snapped up the story and used it.

Poisoned workers, fishing waters

Giant firm charged

RICHMOND, Va. (UPI) — The giant Allied Chemical Corp., the city of Hopewell and the manufacturer of a pesticide which poisoned workers and fishing waters were charged Friday with criminal violations of federal pollution laws in one of the largest environmental indictments in U.S. history.

The defendants were charged under the 1899 Rivers and Refuse Act and the 1972 Water Pollution Control Act, with polluting the James River with the ant and roach killer Kepone.

Allied was also accused of conspiring to circumvent the anti-pollution mission of the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency and the Army Corps of Engineers.

Each day a violation occurred brought a separate charge, accounting for 1,097 counts in two indictments.

The James River and all its tributaries, from Richmond to the Chesapeake Bay 60 miles away, have been closed to commercial fishing since December when traces of Kepone were found in fish and shellfish. However, a ban on the removal of seed oysters was later lifted.

The environmental indictment, returned by a federal grand jury after a three-month investigation, was described by U.S. Attorney William Cummings as "the largest one ever returned in recent memory."

The charges carry potential fines of more than $17 million against Allied, nearly $3.8 million against Hopewell, the now-defunct Life Science Products Co. and some individuals, and prison terms on the conspiracy accusation.

The charges carry potential fines of more than $17 million against Allied, more than $4 million against Hopewell, and $3.8 million against the now defunct Life Science Products Co. and its owners. The conspiracy charge carries a possible prison sentence.

An Allied spokesman said the firm would vigorously contest the charges.

"The company's general record on environmental and safety policies is excellent," he said. "The scope of the criminal actions was unwarranted and unprecedented.

"The extreme reaction shown by the indictments appears to reflect official frustration over the failure of the regulatory agencies to co-ordinate their activities and to perform their duties with respect to events which took place at the Life Science plant, matters apparently not addressed by the indictment."

Carter accorded union's support

DETROIT (UPI) — Jimmy Carter won the backing Friday of United Auto Workers president Leonard Woodcock. Carter's acceptance by such an influential labor leader appeared to damage Morris Udall's effort to win his first primary in Michigan.

President Ford opened a two-day trip to the Midwest armed with a new campaign strategy after vetoing a nearly $4-million foreign military aid bill. His first stop was Omaha, Neb., the city of his birth.

His new campaign style called for him to stress his achievements and let administration officials and other surrogates do the verbal counterpunching against Ronald Reagon.

Among other suggestions made by his advisers after four straight primary losses to Reagan was to drop out of some future primaries he stands little chance of winning. A White House source said however "there was no truth" to reports Ford would drop out of some primaries.

'Quit oil meddling and end crises'

Economic Development Minister Don Phillips said Friday that governments should stop trying to regulate the oil industry.

"We would have an abundant supply of oil today, and the price would have been far less than it is, if governments stayed out of regulating our petroleum industry," he said.

"I may be accused of sticking up for the multi-national corporations, but I don't really care what I'm accused of. It's the regulation and manipulations by governments in that field that has really caused, first, the artificial shortages, which were not caused by the oil companies."

Phillips said government interference had also slowed down the search for new oil deposits.

"You can go on the syndrome that we're going to run out," Phillips said, "but every time we get to the verge of running out, we always seem to find a new source. I don't know whether that's planned by the oil companies or whether it's planned by governments . . . but speaking of the previous government in B.C., they drove the oil companies out of this province. That's why the search for new oil sources ended here."

Phillips made his statement during debate on his department's estimates.

The house adjourned at 1 p.m. until 2 p.m. Monday.

MLA denies conflict but potato plant moves

A controversial $4-million potato processing plant will not be built in Delta.

Walter Davidson (SC—Delta) told the Legislature Thursday that George Spetifor of Spetifor Frozen Foods Ltd. had decided to relocate the proposed plant "in an industrial site and the exact location will be made known within the next few days."

Spetifor came under heavy fire in the Legislature Wednesday and Thursday when Gary Lauk (NDP—Vancouver Centre) said Spetifor contributed a substantial amount of money to Davidson's campaign for last December's provincial election.

Lauk said that land for the proposed plant had been withdrawn from the agricultural land reserve by the B.C. Land Commission, and he asked the government to prove there was no connection between the commission's decision and Spetifor's support for the party.

"Serious questions were raised by the member from Vancouver Centre regarding alleged impropriety in the application," Davidson said." Allegations which were totally groundless, were without any foundation whatsoever, and cast a shadow on the reputation of a respected member of the agricultural community."

The decision to relocate, he said, was reached before Lauk's "misleading suggestions," and was based on opposition by residents of the area.

"Not only had he and his family been subjected to harassing phone calls, but they have also received threatening calls as well," Davidson said.

"Mr. Spetifor's determination to comply with the wishes of the community once again illustrate his total corporate and personal responsibility to his community and I trust will totally dispel any implications of impropriety implied by Mr. Lauk."

He said the plant would be located in an industrial area and Delta would lose 80 jobs as a result.

Environment Minister James Nielsen told the Legislature the land involved had not been released from the land reserve but the plant was given the go-ahead under a section of the Land Commission Act which permits agriculture-related activities.

Lauk accused the government of misusing the act.

"This is not as envisioned by the act," he said. "What utter nonsense.

"Is this the back-door way of retaining the non-conforming use of this land?"

Surrey mayor Ed McKitka welcomed the move of the processing plant but did not reveal the potential site being considered in his municipality.

Top doctor charges coverup

Struck hospital in 'bedlam'

VANCOUVER (CP) — Dr. William Ibbot, president of the British Columbia Medical Association, called Friday on Labor Minister Allan Williams to institute a 21-day cooling-off period in the strike by non-medical workers at Vancouver General Hospital.

He said he wanted the cooling-off period right away, "with the prospect that the government give serious consideration to legislating hospitals and health care personnel as essential."

He also said it was bizarre that the Labor Relations Board was monitoring the strike and compared it with him being asked, as a doctor, to land a Boeing 747 aircraft loaded with 300 people at Vancouver airport during a storm.

Earlier, Ibbott described the VGH situation as bedlam, and said the strike was causing suffering, with a potential for great tragedy should a major disaster occur.

He criticized Williams for deciding that the British Columbia Railway was an essential service and that hospitals were not.

Williams described Ibbott's statements as inflammatory and said it must be obvious the government considered hospital service essential or it would not have taken the action it did at VGH.

The strike by 2,000 members of the Hospital Employees Union began there Tuesday, but 100 workers were required by the government to stay on the job.

Health Minister Bob McClelland said the doctor's comments were unfortunate, and he said he hoped they did not inflame the situation.

He said he was in constant touch with the people involved and had been assured patient care was at an acceptable level, considering the strike.

He also said that if that condition changed, action would be taken. There was a contingency plan available in the event of a massive emergency.

The dispute began after the Health Labor Relations Association, which bargains for 99 B.C. hospitals, rejected a recommendation by industrial inquiry commissioner Bert Blair calling for a 15-per-cent wage increase in a one-year contract for the 16,000 HEU members. The hospitals had offered 8 per cent.

Meanwhile, union spokesman Stephen Brewer said 145 non-union personnel at the hospital had received a wage increase of 8 per cent retroactive to Jan. 1, and that was what the union had been seeking.

However, a VGH spokesman said the increase was not exactly what the union had been seeking. The spokesman said the union demand amounted to 15 per cent when benefits were included, and there were no benefits in the package given the non-union workers.

MP quizzes reporters on hanging opinions

BY ALEX BINKLEY

OTTAWA (CP) — Conservative MP Jack Horner (Crowfoot) turned the tables on reporters Friday by polling members of the parliamentary press gallery for their views on capital punishment.

Horner, who blamed the news media when he failed in a February bid to win the leadership of his party, circulated a questionnaire to the 170-member gallery on whether reporters favored hanging. He does, for premeditated murders.

The rangy Alberta MP expressed surprise and showed amusement in an interview because gallery reporters threw more questions at him about his polling of them than they had about anything since February.

"I know the press is wondering why," he said. He said he was only interested in finding out what the gallery thought of the issue, which had dominated debate for most of the week in the Commons.

The MPs are debating a bill that would abolish capital punishment and replace it with lengthy mandatory jail terms and stiffer bail provisions.

The questionnaire, which did not ask for signatures asked reporters if they believed capital punishment was a deterrent; whether it should be kept for premeditated murder or second killings and if there should be an alternative form of execution to hanging.

Simon visit thaws Chile

SANTIAGO, Chile — Chile's military rulers promised U.S. Treasury Secretary William Simon Friday they would take legal steps to ensure human rights in Chile and allow international review of those guarantees, Simon said.

Simon, the first cabinet-ranking U.S. official to visit this country since the 1973 military coup, said the United States was prepared to aid Chile's inflation-wracked economy provided the government made good on its pledge.

In a move evidently timed to coincide with his visit, the military junta Friday announced the release of 49 of the reported 3,600 Chileans imprisoned for their political views or acts.

SURREY — Kerry Gibbs, president of the Surrey Teachers Association, said that teachers in this Lower Mainland community are fed up with the Surrey school board and want "militant, strong action" to be taken on their behalf. Gibbs, who defeated two moderate opponents at a general meeting, said teachers here were on the verge of declaring war on the school board.

TORONTO —Canadian nationalism should not interfere with the spirit of co-operation in dealings between Canada and the United States, Elliot Richardson, U.S. secretary of commerce, said Friday.

CALGARY — Canada will be crippled in the 1980s by an energy crisis far more extensive than the so-called crisis of a few years ago, Calgary MP Peter Bawden said. The Conservative member of Parliament told the annual meeting of the Women's Progressive Conservative Association of Calgary the high costs of importing oil will place heavy restraints on Canada's economy.

TOKYO — Saskatchewan's Premier Allan Blakeney and his provincial delegation met with Chinese foreign trade officials in Peking on Friday, the official Chinese news agency Hsinhua reported. Hsinhua, in a broadcast monitored in Tokyo, said the visitors were accompanied by Canada's Ambassador to China John Small. Details of the meeting were not disclosed.

SELARGIUS, Sardinia — Pensioner Giuseppe Cocco, 61, killed himself with a rifle shot through the heart, possibly the first victim of a year-old tax reform. Friends said Cocco had been struggling for days to understand Italy's new tax return form and was afraid he would do something wrong in filling it out.

OTTAWA — Gyula Szeker, deputy premier of Hungary, will visit Canada on May 12 to 15 to discuss trade relations, the external affairs department announced Friday. Szeker will meet members of the cabinet prior to visits to Toronto on May 13 and Montreal on May 14 and 15.

Polish minister to visit Island

OTTAWA (CP) — Polish Foreign Minister Stefan Olszowski arrives in Vancouver Sunday to begin a six-day visit to Canada during which he will hold talks with federal, British Columbia and Quebec officials.

The foreign minister will spend some time in B.C. seeing pulp and paper facilities and talking with officials of a Vancouver company which successfully acquired a pulp facility engineering contract last year.

The external affairs department said Olszowski will be met by Senator Ray Perrault, government leader in the Senate, when he arrives at 2:15 p.m.

Olszowski's party will fly to Victoria on Monday for talks with Premier Bill Bennett and other cabinet ministers, and then will visit the Harmac mill at Nanaimo.

On Tuesday he will talk with H. A. Simons officials, the winners of the engineering contract, and other business officials before flying east.

The Simmons company has a contract covering the planning of a pulp and paper facility in Kwidzin, Poland.

Company officials said when they signed the contract last September that Canadian business could make millions in supplying equipment for the plant. The government Export Development Corp. has made a line of credit available to the Poles in connection with the development.

The Polish foreign minister will spend part of Tuesday in the Niagara Falls, Ont., area. He will fly to Quebec City Wednesday.

Tories gain heavily in U.K. local votes

LONDON (CP) — Britain's opposition Conservative party scored impressive gains in almost complete results Friday from local and municipal elections in England and Wales.

The Tories took control of about 60 district and borough councils from the governing Labor party. They also made major gainst against the middleroad Liberals and independent groups in the voting Thursday.

The Tories triumphed by gaining more than 1,500 council seats, while Labor lost more than 1,200. Altogether 16,000 seats were contested.

Mrs. Margaret Thatcher, the Conservative leader, called for a general parliamentary election, but most political commentators interpreted this as only window-dressing.

With Britain's economy in tatters, they said, the Tories were in no hurry to take over the problems.

The governing party, whichever it is, expects to lose numerical strength in municipal elections midway through its five-year term.

What God meant man to be

Human needs are really met through understanding spiritually what God made man to be, Christian Science lecturer Glen Livezey told a Victoria audience in a recent talk in Oak Bay junior high school.

Livezey, who lives in Chicago and is a member of the Christian Science board of lectureship, was here under the sponsorship of the Victoria Christian Science Church.

"Whether we're a homemaker or a teacher or salesman or student, our need is to relate to God as our mind, as our intelligence, to God as our spirit, as our motivation, to God as impelling love," Livezey said.

The understanding of what God made man to be was often preceded by "mighty wrestlings" with a false view of oneself, but it did provide what everyone actually needed, he said.

All that mankind really needed had its source in "the unlimited, spiritual intelligence called God," the lecturer said.

"We can't find perfection in imperfection. That would be like looking to our thirst for refreshment. True selfhood expresses nothing less than God's unlimited goodness."

He called for more active acknowledgement of "man's perfect spiritual selfhood." He characterized this as "a reclamation of true identity after the example set by Christ Jesus."

Mennonite choir here

The Collegium Choir of the Canadian Mennonite Bible College, Winnipeg, will perform in Emmanuel Baptist Church at 8 p.m. Tuesday under the sponsorship of the Saanich Community Church.

The choir is a group of 19 students directed by George Wiebe, whose brother, Art, is tenor soloist and choirmaster at Emmanuel Baptist.

George Wiebe is professor of music at the Canadian Mennonite Bible College, which became an approved teaching centre of the University of Manitoba 12 years ago.

Korean girls sing Monday

The Korean Girls' Choir from the Salvation Army's Seoul Girls' Home will join with the Army's local Young People's Band in a concert at 7:30 p.m. Monday in the Citadel at 757 Pandora.

There will be no admission charge, and the public is invited to attend.

The choir, which numbers 12 young girls and the leader, Mrs. Major Kim, is on its way home from the second Canadian congress of women in Toronto, which drew 3,000 delegates last month.

The girls will sing traditional Korean songs as well as sacred numbers in English and Korean.

The Army has six homes for orphaned and abandoned children in Korea and looks after about 575, ranging from six to 18 years old.

The Army is the legal guardian of these children and gives them total care until they can make their own way in society.

Some have become officers in the Army. One is a medical doctor, another a nurse.

There are hundreds of children around the world being cared for by the Salvation Army. Many are being sponsored by Canadians who have a deep concern for the welfare of these children and are willing to share in a practical way through the Army's sponsorship program.

Local family starts along Angola road

The Karl Janzen family is getting ready to leave on the first leg of a mission that will eventually lead to Angola.

The ultimate destination depended on the political climate in Angola, Janzen said in an interview this week.

The presence of Communist forces is Angola did not mean that the country embraced Communism, he said.

"The leaader of the MPLA, Dr. Agostinho Neto, who now is the head of the government, was trained in schools run by Methodists," he said.

"We have reason to believe that he is extremely spiritual in outlook, and we are hoping this will make it possible for missionaries to return to his country."

Janzen, associate pastor at Emmanuel Baptist Church, who is leaving after five years in Victoria, will take a preliminary step toward his goal this summer.

He leaves next week for the Toronto Institute of Linguistics at the University of Toronto, to take a six-week course in the skills associated with learning a language.

The family will leave in September for Campinas, Brazil, near Sao Paulo, where he will be associated with the Canadian Baptist Overseas Mission Board while learning Portuguese.

"We hope to go to Angola in a year," he said.

He's had the urge to be an overseas missionary ever since he graduated from Prairie Bible Institute in Three Hills, Alta.

"I was on staff for 10 years, and we talked missions at breakfast, lunch and dinner and far into the night."

His wife, Kathy, goes along with the idea, but the children — Diane, 12; Douglas, 9, and Sandra, 7 — have some reservations because it means they have to leave behind their beloved toy poodle, Phydeau.

Starting in September, the children will attend the American school in Campinas.

The mission to Angola will be in the form of a task force, Janzen said.

"We won't be putting up any buildings. We'll be training people for the ministry. When we come home, we won't be leaving anything but the message."

He said the plan was to move among the people all over the country who were beginning to settle down after 14 years of revolution.

"We go along as helpers," he said, "not as administrators."

The Janzens were commissioned missionaries by the Baptist Union of Western Canada at a session of the annual assembly in First United Church Thursday night.

They'll be commissioned again by their church at the 7 p.m. Sunday service.

After the service, the congregation will say farewells at a reception.

Unity chief to preach at Centre

Rev. Robert Sikking, executive director of the Association of Unity Churches, Unity Village, Missouri, will be guest preacheh at the 1 1a.m. Sunday service in Victoria Truth Centre, 1201 Fort.

Sikking comes from a Unity family. His mother, Rev. Sue Sikking, was a Unity minister for many years and wrote several books on the faith. His brother, Rev. Tom Sikking, is minister of Unity Centre in Portland, Ore.

The sect's publication, The Daily Word, is known and read by many people on Vancouver Island.

Sidney Pentecostals to turn sod Sunday

Sidney is to have a new Pentecostal church. The official sodturning will take place at 3 p.m. Sunday on the property just off the Patricia Bay Highway on McDonald Park north of Roy's Chevron Station.

The congregation of the church, known as the Assembly of God for many years, decided it was more in keeping with the name of the denomination — the Pentecostal Assemblies of Canada — to use the name Sidney Pentecostal Church.

The former church on East Saanich Road was sold to Salt Spring Island painter Windsor Utley, who will use it as an art gallery.

Meanwhile, the congregation is meeting for Sunday worship in the Knights of Pythias Hall at 9760 Fourth.

Human resources asks churches to help find foster parents

There is a continuing need for foster homes for children and the human resources department has asked local churches to bring this condition to the attention of their congregations Sunday.

The theme of the request is the honoring of foster families at an appropriate time — Mother's Day.

The challenging work of taking angry, confused and lonely children into their homes is an act of love. Foster parents are volunteers and their only remuneration is a monthly maintenance rate for out-of-pocket expenses.

"They make an incalculable contribution in helping these children to become healthy, productive adults," Mrs. Bernice Packford, who is with the department's parents encouragement program, said this week.

There were 899 children in the departmnent's care in the capital region at the end of last year. Of these 378 were in regular foster homes and 95 were in permanent foster homes. The remaining 426 were being cared for in group homes, treatment centres and other resources because no suitable foster homes were available.

Most babies up to eight months old are placed fairly quickly. Children in the eight-month to six-year group are placed less quickly and in the six to 10 group placement is even slower. Especially critical is the need for families to look after children more than 10 years old.

There is a continuing need for foster parents due to changing family circumstances. Some foster parents move away, others fall ill, others grow old.

Reimbursement to foster parents ranges from $91 to $154 a month for maintenance and clothing, including the federal family allowance.

Mrs. Packford said a foster information night would be held at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday in the Junction Centre Building, 1627 Fort.

"It includes everything you always wanted to know about fostering," she said.

A three-week course on fostering will follow for those interested.

Something for nearly everyone

Interfaith service set

The search for common ground in religious faiths goes on in the interfaith committee of the Greater Victoria Council of Churches which will hold its third annual worship service at 8 p.m. Sunday in First United Church.

Committee chairman Mrs. Eileen Sheard, a member of First United, sees the worship services as a way of learning to respect other people's beliefs and of finding a way to work together.

This year representatives of United, Presbyterian, Roman Catholic and Anglican churches, members of the Jewish and Baha'i communities, Sikhs, Christian Scientists and Quakers will help conduct the service.

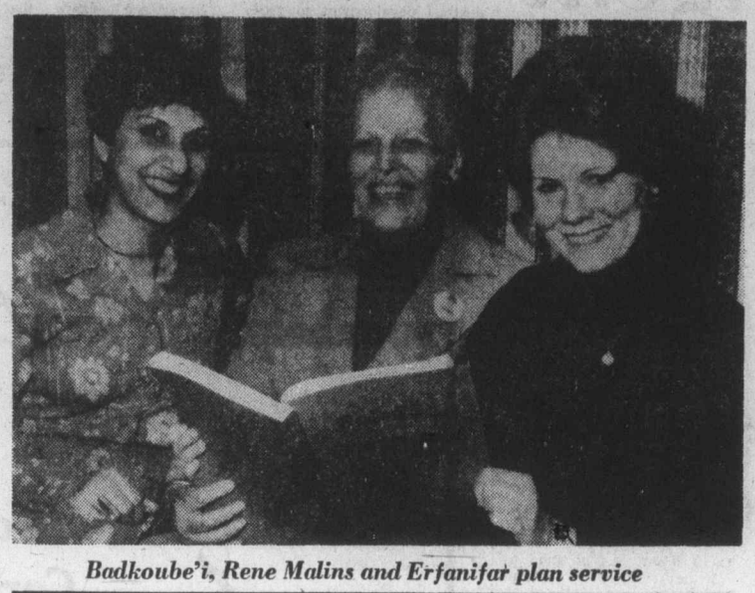

Mrs. Sheard said people of all faiths were welcome to take part in the gathering which will have as its theme, God's Family.

The invocation will be given by Rev. High Hunter of First United. Father Ray Cunningham will read the response.

Parisa Erfanifar and Eshragh Badkoube'i of the Saanich Bahai community will read and chant from the writings of their faith and Hanna Siegel, wife of Rabbi Daniel Siegel of the congregation of Temple Emanu'el will also chant.

Rev. Bruce Molloy of St. Andrew's Presbyterian will preach the sermon. The reading of a Sikhmantra will follow.

Verna Willis of the Society of Friends will say a prayer and Canon Grahame Baker of St. John's Anglican Church will deliver the offertory prayer. A Christian Science hymn will close the service followed by the benediction by Rev. Laura Butler of Metropolitan United.

Badkoube'i, Rene Malins and Erfanifar plan service

Perspectives

By REV. J. A. DAVIDSON

Much of today's popular culture encourages young people in the quaint belief that when a young man and a young woman experience that shattering complexity of emotions and sentiments commonly designated as "being in love," it is necessary only for them to be joined in marriage — if they are among those, still the large majority, who continue to believe in marriage — to ensure that for ever after everything will be simply wonderful.

But perfect marriage, marriage without serious stress or strain, is a figment of the excessively romantic imagination. Romantic love, of course, is good for getting people married, but, by itself, is not enough to keep them contentedly married. Love changes in marriage. In some marriages the love on which they are founded becomes flabby and there is little else to keep the relationship strong. Many marriages founder because they run out of emotional steam, because they have presumed on the emotional intensity of the courtship and the honeymoon period.

With other marriages the foundational love, although losing some of its intensity and excitement, becomes deeper and stronger. But this happens only when it is outgoing love, not the selfish, sentimental, kind.

Sometimes what is thought to be love is, to a dangerous degree, a selfish and sentimental counterfeit. The distinction here is indicated in this statement of Paul Ramsey, a writer on Christian ethics. "'I love you' may simply mean, in all sorts of subtle ways, 'I love me, and I want you'."

Counterfeit love seeks, primarily, self-satisfaction at the expense of the other person Authentic love is basically unselfish, more self-abasing than self-esteeming. The genuineness of the the love between a man and a woman is not to be judged by its apparent voltage: much more significant is that current be an alternating one.

Young men and young women need to have their wits about them when they find themselves in love and looking forward to marriage. The late James Pike once put it in this way: "The difficulty with many marriages is not that people do not get what they want in a mate, but that they get what they want — having wanted the wrong things."

But there can be dangers in trying to avoid the superficialities and extravagances of romantic love. It is possible to be so sensible and so calculating that much of the love is smothered in chilly expediency and unimaginative common-sense. The way of wisdom is not in downgrading romantic love, but in recognizing that it does change in marriage.

In Bernard Kops's play, The Hamlet of Stepney Green, Sam Levy, a wise middle-aged London Jew, says this to his son, David: "Marry a girl who shares your interests so that, when the love of passion cools down, the love of admiration and real friendship flares up and compensates; and then you have ties that can never be broken, not by anything." Sam Levy is a very wise man.

Library workshop seeks participants

The fifth annual workshop of the Congregational Libraries Association of British Columbia will be held at the United Church's Naramata Centre for Continuing Education on Okanagan Lake from June 4 to 6.

Deadline for registration is May 20 and forms may be obtained from Mrs. Frances Rose, 1860 San Juan, Victoria chapter representative, phone 477-6303 or 477-6911 local 287.

According to Mrs. Rose, one of the primary objectives of the association is to promote establishment of congregational libraries in churches and synagogues.

Basic workshop fee is $42.50 a person. This includes registration, five meals, lodging for two nights and membership in CLABC.

There is babysitting during sessions and special family rates.

A wide variety of instruction is available at the workshop. In includes cataloguing, management, care and repair, promotion, publicity, children's books and programs and how to start a library.

Keynote address will be given by Dr. Clyde Woollard of Kelowna who was instrumental in founding the association in 1971.

Aglow group meet Monday

The next luncheon meeting of the Sidney chapter of Women Aglow will be held at 11:30 a.m. Monday in the Travelodge on Beacon Avesue. Speaker will be Berna Schemilt. Babysitting services are available. Reservations may be made by phoning 656-3639.

Marriage breakups among clergy now acceptable

Marriage breakups in the manse, once unthinkable, are no longer unusual, The United Church Observer reports.

The article in the latest issue is based on a survey of the personnel secretaries of the church's 12 conferences — the men who minister to ministers, as well as on interviews with other church officials and counsellors who work with ministers.

"It's as easy now for a minister and his wife to separate as anyone else," the Rev. Homer Dean, the United Church's national personnel secretary, says.

"Ministers who have problems are freer to admit that they have them and freer to do something about them, including divorce," says Rev. Donald Gillies, director of the church-funded Toronto Institute of Human Relations, which counts a number of clergy among its clients.

The Observer concluded that, while there is more unhappiness in the manse than most church people know, or want to believe, it is no worse and probably better than the rest of society.

And when there is unhappiness, separation or divorce are no longer unthinkable and the minister no longer automatically loses his job.

Family series continues on Thursday

The one-hour discussion series on the family continues at 7:30 p.m. Thursdays in the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints (Mormon), 2990 Quadra.

Next Thursday's speaker is Louis Fife, area director of seminaries and institutes for the Mormon Church in Everett, Wash., who also teaches at the Seattle Institute.

Five works with teenagers on the subjects of courtship, marriage, dating and doctrine. On Thursday he will discuss communications skills.

The subject for the following Thursday, dealing with teenage growing pains, will be presented by Dallas Thompson.

Christian athletes

TORONTO (CP) — Participants in the Christian Athletes in Action movement believe God has chosen them as athletes to speak for Him, says Zeson Andrusyshyn, place-kicker and punter with Toronto Argonauts of the Canadian Football League.

"Even on the football field, we love Him and there is love among us all. It is not uncommon to be knocked half-cold by an opponent and then feel a hand on your shoulder and hear someone say: 'Praise the Lord, brother.'"

'Discard parental notions'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Mother's Day — and Father's Day, too — ought to be abolished, says a conservative theological magazine.

Christianity Today, in its current issue, said the celebrations ought to be discarded in place of such events as Marriage Day, Family Day and Singles Day.

"This might help to establish the needed principle that marriage is not for everyone," the fortnightly editorialized.

The magazine, with the widest circulation of any independent Christian journal, said "too many churches and families teach ... the philosophy that wedlock is the normal thing to do."

Children are brought up to believe that "they are expected to marry and become parents, and that if they don't conform to this pattern, people will think there is something wrong with them."

"Our culture convinces people that sexual intercourse is necessary to fulfilment in this life, and that a house is not a home if only one person lives there," the magazine said. "We set up expectations for marriage and family life that are often not realized, and then trouble sets in."

"Maybe we have celebrated Mother's Day and Father's Day long enough," it said. "Perhaps it is time to replace these celebrations."

Ecumenism comes to day of renewal

Members of St. Andrew's Roman Catholic Cathedral prayer group were pleased with the ecumenical flavor given their day of renewal last Sunday, according to Mrs. Doreen Campbell, a member of the group.

Leader of the day of renewal was Rev. Ted Follows, pastor of Elk Lake Community Baptist Church.

Mrs. Campbell said about 40 people took part in the meeting which had its emphasis on divine healing.

"Everybody was really, really blessed," she said. "There was a physical healing reported."

Mrs. Campbell declined to give details but said there was also "inner healing."

She described this as the "healing that follows forgiveness" and added that participants were still experiencing it this week.

The group meets at 8 p.m. Sundays in the basement of the cathedral and visitors are welcome.

Mrs. Campbell is a member of the Victoria chapter of Women Aglow and secretary of the area board for the Island. She is also a member of the service team for the prayer group.

Bystander loses leg in collision

The right leg of a 41-year-old visitor to Victoria was amputated Friday in Victoria General Hospital following a Thursday evening accident in which he was pinned against a light standard by one of two cars in a Victoria collision.

Police said Charles Arthur Grant, 41, of Niagara Falls, Ont., was walking across Douglas at Fort about 6:15 p.m. Thursday when cars driven by Jaswinder Singh Josh, 22, of 465 Niagara, and Gordon Argyle, 23, of 7223A Peden, collided in the intersection.

Argyle, who suffered a broken neck, and Grant were reported in fair condition Friday in hospital. Grant suffered head injuries and had his leg almost severed when one of the cars bounced away from the collision and pinned him against the lamppost.

Singh received less serious injuries.

Police said Lorraine Olson and Robert Benbow, both of 885 Craigflower, escaped serious injury in a two-car collision at Fort and Quadra about 8:50 p.m. Thursday.

Development body gets new chief

Donald A. Duguid has been appointed president of the B.C. Development Corporation.

He succeeds David Korbin, who resigned on April 30.

Before his appointment Duguid was a senior executive with the firm of H. A. Simons (International) Ltd. He has also held positions as vice-president of Dome Petroleum and Pacific Northern Gas.

Economic Development Minister Don Phillips said he expected Duguid to provide the leadership to implement "the government's new industrial stategy, insuring that basic resource development is accompanied by secondary industrial development to provide stability and a secure industrial base."

Local education for handicapped

The British Columbia government has approved more than $1 million to educate deaf and blind children in their home communities, Education Minister Pat McGeer announced Friday.

There are programs this year for children who are deaf and hard of hearing in 40 school districts financed by $804,000 in special grants, he said.

There are also programs for children with impaired vision in 18 districts which are supported by 17 special approvals amounting to $272,000.

"Experience shows that communicatively impaired children who live at home and are educated in their own community have the best opportunity to make a good adjustment in society" McGeer said.

He said most families preferred to keep their children at home during school years and the government was emphasizing local programs rather than "continuing to gather the communicatively impaired at a large centralized institution like Jericho Hill school in Vancouver."

"Ultimately, there will be a need for centralized institutional care of only the most severely handicapped children.

$200 fine, loss of tackle

Fishing penalties stringent

Sport fishermen got a clear warning Friday in Victoria provincial court that they stand a chance of being charged if they use gear designed to catch more than one fish at a time or operate any line by artificial power.

Two men were fined $200 each by Judge Douglas Campbell after pleading guilty to B.C. Fisheries Regulations charges of the first offence and two others received suspended sentences after admitting the second.

In all cases, Campbell ordered forfeiture of the tackle.

First to appear was Gerald Earl McDormand, 24, of Spectacle Lake Trailer Park. Prosecutor Peter Birkett said a fisheries officer who stopped McDormand April 17 off Beechey Head found he was using a downrigger line with two snap-on hooks and rubber shocks and flashers.

The forfeiture order covered the homemade downrigger, two flashers, one lead weight and one minnow holder.

Birkett said the maximum penalty was a $1,000 fine and 12 months in jail and the judge said he chose a $200 fine "to impress you and also others ... sport fishermen are abounding in this area."

In the case of Ronald Owen Watkins, 69, of 1602 Kenmore, Birkett said a fisheries officer making checks April 12 near Deep Cove found Watkins had five lines snap-hooked to the main line.

Campbell ordered forfeiture of a homemade gurdie, the five lines, three plugs and two spoons and said the incident showed "a blatant disregard for the law."

The other sport fishermen, Thomas John Ellis Mollard, 72, of 1899 Cochrane, and Herbert Linfoot, 69, of 1035 Pendergast, were using a battery-powered gurdie for each of their two lines April 12 near Deep Cove when gurdies are allowed only for commercial fishing.

The gurdies, one flasher, two lead weights, two strip holders and shock absorbers were ordered forfeited but Campbell suspended sentence for both men, rather than impose fines, after learning the "device doesn't catch any more fish, it just makes it easier to wind up your line."

Mollard said a gurdie was worth about $175.

PROVINCIAL COURT

Surety bail of $2,500 was set Friday in Victoria provincial court by Judge Douglas Campbell for a 26-year-old Saanich man charged with possession of marijuana for trafficking Thursday in Saanich.

The charge was read against Brian Bruce, 91 Lurline, whose defence lawyer William McCallum won approval by Campbell of a request for an order prohibiting publication or bradcast of bail-hearing details. The case was remanded one week for further hearing.

The order poses an unusual legal problem in that the case was the first decided in the Victoria court on one aspect of new Canadian bail laws which went into effect April 26. Campbell's reasons for his bail decision cannot be published now but might be mentioned in a later case as a precedent and published then.

A joint charge of possession of marijuana for trafficking Thursday in Colwood was read against Jennifer Ann Pedlow, 17, of 1034 Jenkins, Mark Milton Fisher, 18, of 2858 Leigh, and David Scott Thomson, 20, of 2783 Penelope.

Thomson was charged separately with possession of marijuana for trafficking Thursday in Colwood and possession of marijuana at the same time.

Campbell ordered release for Miss Pedlow on her own recognizance in the sum of $500. All other matters, including release for the two men, were remanded to Tuesday.

Campbell ordered Michael Laforme, 28, of 740 Mary, to write letters of apology to a Victoria woman and two Victoria policemen as a condition of a three-month term of probation.

Laforme was found guilty after a trial on a Victoria charge of assault by trespass Dec. 3, 1975, when he refused to leave the woman's home at 616 Catherine, and resisting one of the two policemen.

The judge, told Laforme was already serving one year for another offence, said added time would be of less value than the letters of apology, which Campbell said he must see before they were sent to the woman and two constables.

Alvin Victor Rasmussen, 31, of 119 Michigan, was remanded by Campbell to June 3 for presentence report and sentence following a plea of guilty to a Saanich charge of theft April 6 of about $214 worth of items from Woolco, where he was employed as a security officer.

Prosecutor Peter Birkett said the items were a jacket, two shower massage heads and "various items" used to repair a tropical aquarium. Birkett said he had been informed by police that Rasmussen told officers April 6, "I think I've been set up."

Bail of $1,000 with one surety was set by Campbell for Albert Hillel Wien, 29, of 702 Esquimalt, on a Victoria charge of failing to attend court April 27 for a scheduled trial on another Victoria charge, of theft involving less than $200. Wien was remanded to Monday for further hearing of both charges.

In traffic court, Donald John Lilley, 42, of 1021 Ridgway, pleaded guilty to a charge of impaired driving Sunday in Victoria and was sentenced by Judge Harold Alder to 14 days in jail.

In the court section of Judge F. S. Green, one-year terms of probation were imposed for Port Alberni residents Ruby Jean Lucas, 19, and Norma Ann Webster, 17, who pleaded guilty to a Victoria charge of stealing $17 worth of items Feb. 12 from Shoppers' Drug Mart, 1302 Douglas. Miss Lucas must also do 70 hours of community-service work while Miss Webster must complete a hairdressing course.

Japan strikes in Sheffield

SHEFFIELD, England (AP) — When Sheffield city council ordered cutlery from a local firm, it received a case made in Sheffield filled with knives, forks and spoons made in Japan. Council leader George Wilson said the $111 bill would be paid, but in future he would insist on all-British goods. A spokesman for the firm said he hadn't noticed the nationality and council was sent the cheapest cutlery available.

Minister made 'significant contribution'

The United Church lost a minister who had made a "significant contribution" to the church in western Canada with the death of Rev. Harry McDonald Wednesday night in the excitement of a James Bay fire.

McDonald, 82, died of a heart attack during evacuation of the James Bay Square apartments while a nearby three-storey partly-completed apartment building was burning.

He had been Metropolitan United Church's visiting chaplain at Royal Jubilee Hospital until a few weeks ago, and had planned to take a holiday trip to the United Kingdom with his wife this weekend.

The tribute to his service in western Canada came Friday from Dr. Bert King, minister of Metropolitan United, who will conduct the funeral Monday in his church's memorial chapel.

McDonald had served in both world wars—as a stretcher bearer in the First World War and as an air force and later army chaplain in the second.

Born in Niagara Falls, Ont., he attended Toronto University and was ordained in Woodstock, Ont., in 1920. His war service interrupted his training.

As a Methodist minister, he served first in Alberta, before union created the United Church, and in his first charge had to build his own manse. Later, in Calgary, he was a juvenile court judge as well as carrying out his church duties.

He had both small and large charges in Alberta and B.C. before his retirement in 1964. Even after retiring at Vancouver he worked in First United Church's social service centre.

PINE POINT, N.W.T. (CP) — A pilot and four passengers were killed Friday in the crash of a helicopter near this community, about 500 miles north of Edmonton.

Piano championships close music festival

Four competitors play tonight in Newcombe Auditorium for the city of Victoria medallion during piano championships which close competition at the 26th annual Greater Victoria Music Festival.

Competitors in the open class for the medallion include Robert Holliston, Arthur Lavertu, Arne Sahlen and Miranda Wong. Tonight's championships include classes at the junior, intermediate and senior levels.

This year the piano division at the festival attracted a record 600 entrants who earned high praise from adjudicators Willard Schultz of Calgary and Ralph Tisaesser of Waterloo, Ont. Both said standards in the junior, senior and open levels were outstanding.

Adjudicator Robert Cook of Edmonton was also impressed by the standard of festival performances.

"Students are obviously being well-trained," he said.

In the non-competitive band section, he mentioned Mount Douglas Secondary School and the Oak Bay Scarlet bands as excellent.

Individual soloist awards include: Open woodwind-piano sonata, Madeline Butler and Madeline Wheeler; junior woodwind championship and Soulsby bursary, Kathy Duncan; senior brass championship and Ellis award, Peter Burris; senior woodwind championship, Sandra Pumfrey; Victoria Symphony award, Philip Brown; special adjudicator's award, James Kennedy.

In other festival highlights, the Glenlyon School Choir under the direction of Madeline Groos was selected this week to represent Victoria in the national choral competition for the George S. Mathieson trophy.

Major dance awards presented at Thursday's honors performance include: Classical ballet solo award (10 and under), Petra Johns; classical ballet award for Erith Smith memorial award, Annette Ullrick; most versatile dancer award, Rhonda and Linda Miller; classical ballet solo (13 and under) Wendy Sawyer; $50 jazz award, Wendy Sawyer; young choreographer's award, Lauren McLeod, open tap award, Leslie Howe.

Horses sale soon

The saga of the starving horses seized by the SPCA near Nanaimo is nearing an end.

SPCA spokesman Norman Stephen told the Colonist Friday seven of the eight horses cared for by the society for the last three weeks will be sold privately.

One is in bad condition and will not be sold, he said.

It is hoped the animal will not have to be destroyed, he said, a veterinarian will check it today.

Stephen had asked the public for donations over the past week when he found maintenance and possible legal fees would be more than the society could pay.

It has now been decided no charges will be laid.

The animals were seized from a farm and were believed to be the property of an unidentified Nanaimo woman.

Contractors build more for less

Builders constructed more buildings in Saanich but spent less money doing it last month than in the same month in 1975.

Municipal statistics show total number of permits was up 21 per cent over last year, but value of those permits was slightly down.

Issued in April were 164 building permits including one for a shopping mall over a million dollars and one for an apartment building over a quarter-million.

That figure is up from 129 permits issued last April, when the month's construction values were $5,669,800.

That compares to $5,652,761 last month.

Recalls of food multiply

OTTAWA (CP) — Food recalls in Canada have more than quadrupled since 1971, an assistant deputy minister in the federal department of health said Friday.

Dr. A. B. Morrison, who heads the department's health protection branch, told delegates to a Canadian Food Processor's Association convention that 70 foods were recalled in 1975 compared with 45 in 1974, 29 in 1973, 25 in 1972 and 13 in 1971.

About half the recalls were because of inadequate processing leading to concern about the possibility of microbiological contamination.

"Whether the change is due to increased vigilance by the health protection branch or consumers or carelessness on the part of industry is difficult to determine," he said.

Morrison said a 1975 study by a health department advisory committee on food safety found food supplies were generally safe but were deficient in nutrients and often contained pesticides, drug residues, food additives and heavy metal contaminants.

Advertising is a guide to fashion.

Toronto trading

TORONTO (CP) — The industrial index reached its highest point is two weeks at the close of active trading on the Toronto stock market Friday.

CLOSING AVERAGES

154	Industrials	192.92	+0.40
12	Golds	292.03	+1.75
29	Base Metals	90.16	+0.73
19	Western oils	232.03	+3.28

Volume 2.9 million.

Analysts attributed the surge in western oils to Prime Minister Trudeau's announced intention of raising oil and gas prices despite the failure to reach agreement in Thursday's talks in Ottawa.

Of the 45 blocks traded, 60,000 shares of Indal Ltd. at $15 a share was the largest, followed by 38,200 shares of NBU Mines Ltd. at $2.50. A 25,000-share block of Unican Security Systems was sold at $2.35 and another 25,000 of Inco A at $33⅞.

A total of 215 contracts were traded on the options market compared with 105 Tuesday.

Among industrials, Nabors Drilling rose 1¼ to $26¾, Dome Pete 1¼ to $38¼, Hudson's Bay Oil 1 to $38¾, Nowsco Well Service 1 to $18⅛ and Lincoln Trust 7 to $20¾ after its board of directors recommended acceptance of an offer for the company's shares by Canhuron Investments.

Home Oil B fell 1 to $28½, Canadian Imperial Bask of Commerce ⅛ to $27⅛, Seagram ½ to $25.

New York

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market put together a broad but relatively slow-paced rally Friday, encouraged by some favorable turns in interest rates.

Brokers generally were reluctant to read too much significance into the market's rise, coming as it did on sluggish volume. But they said the market atmosphere did seem to brighten in response to interest rate developments.

As the session began, Citibank, New York's largest bank, announced it was holding its prime lending rate at 6½ per cent, allaying some concern that it might raise the basic charge on corporate loans.

Dater in the day, the rate on federal funds — money loaned overnight by one bank to another — showed a decline that prompted some buying of stocks.

The federal funds rate often exerts a strong influence on the general short-term money markets.

NYSE activity was reported unaffected by electric power problems that hit the city for a while during the afternoon. The American Stock Exchange halted trading briefly because of the difficulties, but had resumed operations by 3 p.m.

Among Canadian issues on the New York Stock Exchange, Massey-Ferguson was up 1 to $27¼, Alcan ⅞ to $29¾, Dome Mines ⅝ to $42⅝ and Inco ⅜ to $34½.

Seagram was down 1 to $25¼ and Campbell Red Lake ¼ to $23½.

Ontario Hydro adds a touch of glass

Old and new in Ontario Hydro headquarters stand side-by-side on University Ave. in Toronto. Empty building, left, has been that way for two months and glass-walled $44 million replacement houses 5,500 employees. Provincially-owned utility has made no decision on older building, erected in 1930s.

MARINE NEWS

Cruise dollars measured

By JIM BRAHAN
Colonist Marine Reporter

Dollar values of visiting cruise ships to B.C. ports have often been guessed at by chambers of commerce and various merchants, but until recently no official study was conducted.

The findings of a study by Stevenson and Kellogg Ltd., on the economic impact the port of Vancouver has on the Greater Vancouver Region based on 1974 figures show that year 70,000 cruise ship passengers spent $27 million among storekeepers, hoteliers, restaurants, and entertainment and recreation establishments.

While this money was spent on the lower mainland, the rest of the province benefitted by the sales tax levied on articles bought by the visiting passengers.

Victoria's cruise ship season starts May 17, when 350 passengers aboard the Renaissance arrive here for an eight-hour stopover before continuing northward to Alaska.

The 10-year-old ship, operated by Pacquet Cruises, will be making its first call here and will be docked at Ogden Point from 1 to 9 p.m.

Other cruise ships making inaugural visits here this summer will be the Cunard Adventurer due here at 8 a.m. June 18 for a 16-hour stop and the Royal Viking Sea from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. June 17.

There will be 29 visits by cruise ships this year. Last year there were 27.

Others scheduled to call here include the Fairsea, Pacific Princess, Island Princess, and the Pacific Far Eastern Line's Mariposa and Monterey.

No in-depth survey has been undertaken to study the impact that this marine traffic has on the economy of Greater Victoria.

The study done on Vancouver took many months to complete and involved 2,750 businesses and organizations. The data gathered was used as a basis for a complex computer program study to determine the direct and indirect effect of the port operations.

The effect of the visiting cruise ships was only a small part of the study.

Blue jeans giant faces fix charge

WASHINGTON (AP) — Blue-jean manufacturer Levi Strauss and Co. was charged Friday with price fixing by the U.S. Federal Trade Commission (FTC).

Levi Strauss says it is the largest apparel manufacturer in the world, with more than 15,000 U.S. retail dealers and sales which totalled more than $1 billion in 1975.

The complaint charges that Levi Strauss has illegally fixed the resale prices of its apparel and required dealers to purchase other items in order to buy its much-renowned blue denim jeans. Other anti-competitive charges were made.

The firm, with headquarters in San Francisco, has 30 days in which to answer the complaint. No immediate comment could be obtained.

In connection with the price fixing allegation, the complaint says that Levi Strauss, through a variety of means, has forced its dealers:

- To adhere to established or suggested resale prices.
- To advertise its first-line quality products only at such prices.
- Not to advertise any of its second-line or irregular products as having been manufactured by Levi Strauss.
- Not to resell its products to any unauthorized dealers.

John Turner:

Tough world out there

OTTAWA (CP) — Former finance minister John Turner beat the drum for private enterprise Friday, urging a return to the work ethic and a liberal interpretation of laws designed to limit foreign investment in Canada.

In a speech to the Kiwanis Club, the Toronto solicitor reiterated his opposition to a long program of wage and price controls.

The government's controls program should be maintained until it was effective, then removed.

Any permanent system of controls destroys collective bargaining, hurts capital investment and undermines political and economic freedom, he said.

Turner, who resigned as finance minister last September to take a job with a Toronto law firm and join several companies as a director, said the greatest danger to the economy is Canada's growing inability to compete with other countries in manufacturing trade.

Productivity had slipped and capital investment would be reduced to zero this year after inflation was taken into account.

To solve the problem, Canadians must become more efficient and the government must promote the type of tax climate that encourages investment, Turner said.

Canadians must also become more realistic, realizing that expectations cannot be allowed to exceed economic performance.

"Out there in the trading world it's a real tough place," he said.

April starts climb

OTTAWA (CP) — New housing starts during April rose by 47 per cent from a year earlier to 16,387, Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. (CMHC) reported Friday.

The number of new starts in urban areas during March was 12,424.

For the first four months of 1976, housing starts have risen strongly from comparable year-earlier levels to 52,876 from 30,296 in the 1975 four-month period.

Starts during April were running at a seasonally-adjusted annual rate of 247,100, down slightly from an annual rate of 251,900 a month earlier.

A BARREN, ROCKY SPOT OF GROUND.

That's all Laurel Point was 133 years ago when James Douglas came ashore to establish a Hudson's Bay trading post he named Fort Camosun - later changed to Fort Victoria.

Laurel Point was still a "barren, rocky spot" when Jacob Sehl came to Victoria, but he was a man with a dream. In 1881 he transformed that spot into a "beautiful garden" surrounding a large factory and stately mansion.

A lot of history happened on the Point in close to a century, and in some ways it looks like things have come full circle.

Most Victorians know that Laurel Point hasn't looked like much to boast about in recent years. That's why the new condominium and townhouse development with the award winning architecture that's taken shape there recently has been such a dream come true for a lot of people. Soon trees, clustered shrubs and open, sunny lawn will enhance the warm browns of brick and natural wood - that's what Laurel Point is all about.

For elegant living in luxurious surroundings, come see us. And next time you're strolling through the park, remember that "barren, rocky spot" of the past. We're proud of the solid foundation upon which we've built the present Laurel Point.

Sunningdale sells out

CALGARY (CP) — A group of principle shareholders of Sunningdale Oils Ltd. of Calgary has agreed in principle to sale about 900,000 shares of Sunningdale to Kerr-McGee Corp. of Oklahoma City for $17 a share, the two companies said Friday.

Prior to signing of a final agreement, Sunningdale will sell all of its properties in Canada, the companies said in a statement.

After closing of the purchase, Kerr-McGee will make a tender offer for the 3.5 million remaining shares of Sunningdale at the same $17-a-share price. Sunningdale last traded on the Toronto stock market at $12.50.

Sunningdale is engaged in exploration for oil and gas in Canada and numberous other countries. Major areas of company activity in Canada last year included East Siphon, B.C., Calais, Alta., and Island Lake, Man.

Inflation adjustment

Industry incentives urged

OTTAWA (CP) — Incentives for business to invest in new production equipment and plants should be seriously considered by the government, the executive director of the privately funded C. D. Howe Research Institute said Friday.

Carl Beigie told the Financial Executives Institute, an organization of financial officers from Canadian and U.S. companies meeting here, that companies should be permitted to adjust for the effect of inflation on new investment.

This would permit them to reduce their tax liability as the costs of replacing inventories and production equipment rises.

In a wide-ranging address, Beigie told the financial officers' seminar that he predicts the economy will enjoy real growth of between 4.5 per cent and 5.5 per cent, at annual rates, between now and mid-1977. After that, the prospects are for even faster growth.

But he said the stimulus for that growth will have to come from increased consumer spending and from an improved export performance. Without special incentives, capital investment is unlikely to rise strongly for the next three to four quarters, he predicted.

A strong business recovery now under way in the United States, Canada's major trading partner, should have a strong spill-over effect for the domestic economy, Beigie said.

There is reason for optimism because the inflation rate has been easing in recent months, but some of the easing is temporary and inflation remains a serious threat.

The problem is that there are deep-seated causes of inflation — many of which can be traced to government actions — that make inflation hard to control, Beigie suggested.

Much of government spending is based on a "buy now, pay later or never pay" approach. New government spending programs are introduced during recession periods to help the economy, and also in times of prosperity because the country can afford it.

This means there is no room left for the private sector to supply services, Beigie said.

At the same time, as taxes rise to pay for spending programs, workers demand wage increases to cover expected tax increases and this adds to the inflationary spiral.

He emphasized that he was not condemning all government spending, because spending programs are helpful for the economy if they contribute to building up production capacity. But non-productive spending — "employing people to design forms for other people to fill out" — hurts the economy.

Beigie said the only argument for wage and price controls imposed last October is that they are necessary to break inflationary expectations. But the controls now in effect are not likely to work.

Labor opposition to the controls programs is deep-rooted and the controls are too generous, Beigie said. The effects of inflation are passed on in higher limits for acceptable wage increases, so this makes it difficult to slow the inflation rate.

Controls should be maintained no more than 18 months because if they are going to have any effect at all it will be evident within that time, he said.

In response to questions later, Beigie said he thinks there will be tax increases in the federal budget expected later this month. Bank of Canada Governor Geral Bouey has made it plain he is unwilling to increase the money supply to help finance government deficits, so that leaves little option except to raise taxes, Beigie suggested.

In an earlier address, federal Industry Minister Don Jamieson said the federal deficit on non-merchandise transactions, expected to be between $5 billion and $6 billion this year, likely will grow to $20 billion by the early 1980's.

Jamieson also said that he expects a small surplus in merchandise trade with other countries during 1976, but did not supply a dollar estimate for the expected surplus.

Printer buys printer

MONTREAL (CP) — Ronalds-Federated Ltd. has reached agreement in principle with major shareholders of Rolph-Clark-Stone Ltd. to acquire their shares, the two Montreal-based printing companies announced Friday in a joint statement.

A similar offer, which includes both cash and shares in Ronalds'Federated, will soon be made to minority shareholders of Rolph-Clark-Stone, the statement said.

The exact amount of cash was not disclosed but the maximum number of shares to be issued under the offer would be 171,810.

James Stanley, president of Ronalds-Federated, said the purchase would create one of the largest printing firms in Canada. Combined sales of the two companies in 1975 totalled $96 million.

Ronalds-Federated sales comprised about two-thirds of that figure. Ronalds-Federated produces paperback books, magazines, telephone directories and various other printed material at plants in Quebec, Ontario, Alberta and British Columbia.

Rolph-Clark-Stone specializes in packaging design and printing of cheques and maps. It has plants in Nova Scotia, Quebec, Ontario and British Columbia.

Britain beats all

BRUSSELS (Reuter) — Britain's inflation rate was higher than that of its Common Market partners for the 12 months up to March, the economic community reported Friday.

The Biritsh consumer price index rose by 21.1 per cent, the market said.

It rose 16 per cent in the Irish Republic, 13.9 in Italy, 10.3 in Luxembourg, 9.9 in Belgium, nine in Denmark, 8.9 in Holland and 5.4 in West Germany.

No new figure was given for France, which registered 9.5 per cent the previous month.

Mayors run for 'Y'

Mayorally they roll along YM-YWCA rooftop track Thursday. Mayors Michael Young of Victoria, Ed Lum of Saanich and Art Young of Esquimalt donned "Y" tee-shirts to help kick off YM-YWCA's expansion campaign. Fund-raising officially started Thursday and is scheduled to end June 1.

Hospitals 'essential services'

VANCOUVER (CP) — Hospitals should be declared essential services and employees' rights to strike should be restricted, the president of the British Columbia Medical Association said Thursday.

Dr. William Ibbott said that contrary to public statements, the current strike at Vancouver General Hospital has resulted in bedlam and is causing suffering.

"The VGH situation is bedlam from the physicians' point of view despite pious comments coming from various sources," he told the association's annual meeting.

"What sort of society allows the abortion mills to grind but refuses treating cancer? When the minister of labor decides the B.C. Rail is an essential service but not hospitals?

'We know as physicians already of physical suffering from the strike. What is going to transpire if there is a major disaster, a mass emergency in the Vancouver area?"

Until inquest finishes

Coroner wants Pen report delayed

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — Coroner Doug Jack said Friday he had asked Solicitor-general Warren Allmand not to release the Farris report on the hostage-taking at the British Columbia Penitentiary last June until after an inquest into the death of Mary Steinhauser.

An inquest into the fatal shooting of Miss Steinhauser, 32, a prison classification officer, is scheduled to open May 26.

She was killed last June 11 as a three-man prison tactical team firing hand guns, stormed the area of the penitentiary where 15 hostages, including Miss Steinhauser, had been held at knifepoint by three prisoners.

The action ended the 41-hour ordeal.

The report of a commission of inquiry conducted last August by B.C. Chief Justice John Farris has not been made public. It contained secret testimony on the shooting.

On Thursday, Canadian Penitentiary Service Commissioner Andre Therrien said in Ottawa that the report might be released next week.

"I don't want to see that happen," Jack said. "It's bound to be read by prospective jurors at the inquest and give them preconceived ideas."

He said the inquest would go ahead as scheduled, whether the Farris report is released in advance or not.

Temple Scroll printing soon

JERUSALEM (AP) — Scholars are awaiting publication this year of one of the most important Dead Sea scrolls ever found.

The Temple Scroll is being deciphered by Israel's Prof. Yigael Yadin, an archeologist associated with the scrolls since they were discovered in 1947.

Yadin bought the parchment scroll from an Arab merchant in Bethlehem in 1967, and has been working on it since then.

He has disclosed some sections of it which concern the 10 commandments and the 605 biblical orders on Jewish custom that are attached to them. The scroll also carries specifications for the building of the great Jewish temple in Jerusalem.

The entire work will be published in English and Hebrew by Hebrew University, Jerusalem, and, in the words of one expert, will provide "dramatic new data" on the Essenes, the ascetic Jewish community that lived on the shores of the Dead Sea 20 miles east of Jerusalem.

The scrolls were written and hidden about 20 centuries ago by the Essenes who fled the increasingly secular atmosphere of Jerusalem for the brooding silence and moonlike landscape of Qumran, on the shores of the Dead Sea.

Here they penned copies of the Jewish Torah, books of the prophets, commentaries on the Bible and works on Jewish customs and codes.

Yadin's scroll also will add new dimensions to the book of Ezekiel and the story of the dry bones brought to life by God, says Prof. Eric Myers of Duke University, North Carolina, and director of Jerusalem's W.F. Albright Institute of Archelogical Research.

The Temple Scroll is just one of 600 Dead Sea works found since the first scrolls were discovered by a Bedouin shepherd in a cave by the Dead Sea.

At least half the scrolls still are being deciphered amid an atmosphere of political animosity generated by the Middle East war.

Many of the scrolls were in the hands of the Jordanian government and were stored in museums in Arab Jerusalem. Thus they fell into Israeli control when the Arab sector was captured in 1967.

Scholars in East Jerusalem institutions like the French Ecole Biblique reject the notion of Israeli jurisdiction. However, Magen Broshi, curator of the Israel Museum scrolls, speaks of all 600 items as being Israel's.

Ambulance hits tree; 5 die

LARGO, Fla. (AP) — An ambulance rushing a heart patient to hospital slammed into a tree here, killing five persons. The patient and a paramedic, two ambulance service employees and a medical assistant in the ambulance were killed when it went out of control on a curve.

Tulip quadruplets

One bulb gave birth to these four tulips in garden on Waverley Terrace, Brentwood Bay. Well known Victoria flower grower G. A. Vantreight says there haye been cases of bulb producing two, three and on occasions four flowers. Soon, bulbs giving four blooms will be commonplace, however, as tulip growers in Holland have now succeeded in producing a four-bloom variety called Robinea. Tulip shown is not that variety.

Greenpeace

Torture of seals charged

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Greenpeace Foundation says that scientists financed by the federal government and the oil industry are torturing and killing seals in the name of research.

In a news release Friday, the environmental action group said the charge was based on an environment department report describing how about 30 ringed and harp seals were forced to eat acute doses of crude oil or were completely covered in oil.

"If Mr. Leblanc is aware that his own scientists are torturing and killing seals in the name of research he is guilty of hypocrisy and blatantly misleading the public and the government," said Greenpeace spokesman Patrick Moore.

The report details the animals' lengthy suffering before most of them died during the experiments or were killed later by the scientists.

The report also reveals that of 96 ringed seals caught by the scientists for experimentation, 64 died while being netted.

The experiments were to examine the effect of contact and ingestion of crude oil in ringed seals.

The report was prepared for the Beaufort Sea Project jointly financed by the federal government and the oil industry) by Thomas G. Smith of the fisheries and marine service of the environment department and Joseph R. Geraci of the Ontario Veterinary College.

The scientists described using six ringed seals in an oil immersion study conducted in holding pens in saltwater ponds. A one-centimetre layer of oil was poured on the surface of the water.

The report describes how within minutes the seals' eyes began to water and become "reddened and inflamed."

After 24 hours the seals were removed from the oil, placed in clean water, medically examined and then finally killed "by gunshot" over a period of days so that autopsies could be performed.

The report concluded that "more studies are needed on the chronic effects of contact with oil. In particular, damage to eyes and kidneys should be thoroughly studied."

Dentists warned

VANCOUVER (CP) — Sheila Hoople, a University of Washington professor of dental hygiene, says the lack of an adequate physical examination before visiting a dentist could result in serious injury to the patient or even death.

Ms. Hoople told about 350 dental hygienists and assistants at their convention that some dentists and dental assistants in the United States had been sued in connection with dental-related illnesses.

She said dental assistants should give patients thorough physical examinations before the dentist took over but they were reluctant to do so because of the time and money involved.

Critical medical problems had to be located before a patient was treated by a dentist, Ms. Hoople said, as well as testing pulse rate, blood pressure and other health-related items.

Teacher tells 'a story of frustration'

By ELEANOR BOYLE
Colonist Reporter

Winston Jackson is past the point of anger.

He walks with his shoulders a little stooped after talking about it — the carton.

The Belmont high school teacher, caught up in what he calls "a story of frustration, mismanagement and bungling" for more than 10 months, just wants the carton back.

The problem is that Jackson and his family used the most inexpensive shipping line they could find to send belongings home after a year in England and Europe.

Recommended by reliable parties there, Seven Seas Transport Company Ltd. apparently went bankrupt between the time he signed his name and paid 34 pounds sterling for freight last August, and the time his carton of souvenirs and Harris tweed finally made its way across the ocean.

Jackson said he shouldn't have been surprised. He heard of a company a week facing bankruptcy during his exchange teaching term in New Milton, Hampshire.

But he still hasn't got his carton, which he said Thursday has vanished into thin air between Vancouver and Victoria.

"I've learned never to ship anything from a bankrupt country," he told the Colonist.

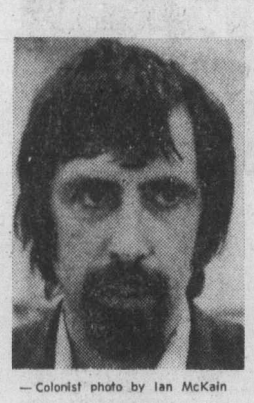

A fellow traveller to Canada who had the same problem is not quite so harsh on the British.

Immigrant David Skillan and his family, now living in Vancouver, were forced to live without most of their belongings for five months, Skillan said in a telephone interview.

He said the "incredible hassle" he went through to find his goods may have been partly his fault for having chosen a cheap shipping company.

Skillan and nine other parties he knows dealt with Seven Seas, and all waited a long time for final delivery.

Jackson is still waiting, and couldn't even find out whether the carton had reached Vancouver until he had Consumer Services and Victoria MLA Charles Barber's community office on his side, pressuring shippers' Vancouver brokers.

Jackson
. . . learned lessons

Both groups "really cut through red tape," Jackson said.

The red tape got knotted when Jackson's repeated letters to the shippers late last year brought only one letter Sept. 9 saying the package was on its way.

It wasn't, and Jackson wrote to English friends hoping they could help retrieve a year's photographs and souvenirs like the wineskins the family bought in Spain.

More letters to the British consul in Vancouver as well as Seven Seas brought no action and no carton.

Finally company officials wrote back March 22, saying his package was one of the temporary casualties when they moved their headquarters from one part of Southampton to another.

Now found, it was on its way for good on the Hamburg-based Friesenstein.

Problems weren't over.

The package remained in bond in a Vancouver warehouse from April 5 until two weeks ago pending Hamburg's okay.

Pressure exerted by the two Victoria offices and Better Business Bureau turned the tables, and Jackson got a call from Allworld Shipping Ltd., holding the goods, asking him when and where he'd like delivery.

Since then Canadian National Express has gone to pick it up but has been turned away because someone in the middle lost necessary papers, Jackson said.

He really isn't sure he'll get it yet.

But he has advice for travellers:

Don't send goods without getting definite information on the ship and arrival date; and keep all receipts and correspondence.

It may save a year's worth of trouble.

Level of noise seen excessive

VANCOUVER (CP) — The B.C. council of the Confederation of Canadian Unions said that the Workers' Compensation Board, in suggesting amendments to its regulations, was proposing "excessive levels of allowable noise."

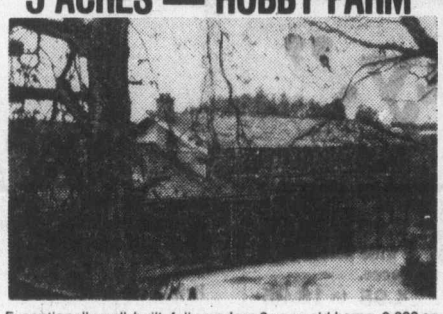

Women like present name

NEW YORK (AP) — The League of Women Voters, which has accepted male members for the last two years, has refused to change its name. More than a dozen proposals to rename the 56-year-old organization came before the league at its annual convention, however, most delegates agreed the name and the group enjoyed a certain prestige.

Province accepts union rules on summer jobs

Provincial Secretary Grace McCarthy said Friday she's convinced the problems surrounding the employment of university students this summer are over.

John Fryer, head of the B.C. Government Employees Union, said he was happy the impasse of the past few weeks had been resolved.

But Scott Wallace (PC—Oak Bay) said he wanted solid evidence that "the government knows what it's doing" before he believed the summer student program was back on track.

The latest sequence in the summer student epic started two weeks ago when the union and the government were unable to reach agreement on pay rates for summer help.

The government wanted to pay student rates; the union insisted union rates be paid.

That phase of the battle ended Friday with Mrs. McCarthy sending a telegram to Fryer to state the government would abide by the conditions of the union-government master agreement.

"It is not the government's intention to appoint students to classified positions at a rate lower than that set out in the collective agreement," the telegram stated. "It appears, therefore, we have no areas of disagreement and I trust that the union and government can co-operate to make the program successful."

Fryer said he was pleased the problem appeared to be resolved and that he was anticipating early meetings with the government to determine which jobs would fall within union classification and which would be unclassified.

But Wallace remains unimpressed.

"There has been incredible confusion on the summer student program this year," he said. "Every day I receive complaints from students who were promised jobs weeks ago, assured they had those jobs, and are now receiving phone calls or telegrams telling them the jobs are not available.

"I hope the problem is solved, but I'm fearful that this (Mrs. McCarthy's telegram) is just another government smoke screen."

Wallace said he didn't care how the government tried to "look good, the fact is that they cut about $11 million from the student employment program this year and that has to mean fewer jobs."

Mrs. McCarthy said the government was doing the best it could with the dollars available but pointed out that this year no federal funds were being made available for the student work program.

When a student occupies a union-classified job the pay rate remains at the union level.

Unclassified jobs can earn $485 a month for students below the Grade 11 level; $539 for Grade 12; $593 for first-year university; $620 for second year; $649 for third and $701 for a fourth-year university student. Graduate students get $809 for unclassified positions.

Neither Fryer nor Mrs. McCarthy was able to estimate how many students would find work with the government this year.

Come Give Cheer and thousands did

More than 6,000 people attended a musical Friday night at Memorial Arena, sending the three-day Victoria High centennial celebrations off to a rousing start.

About 2,300 attended the opening performance of Come Give A Cheer and the second performance, restricted to registered former students and staff members, played to a capacity audience of 4,000.

Vic High, believed to be the oldest public high school west of the Great Lakes and north of San Francisco, is celebrating its 100th birthday this weekend.

Today, close to 10,000 people are expected to return to the school during an open house starting at 8:30 a.m. and finishing at 5 p.m.

Officials expect such a large crowd that a park-and-ride bus service has been instituted with hopes that people will park their cars in lots near Memorial Arena and take the free bus service from the front of the arena to the school and back.

Highlight of today's events is a centennial ball, featuring Mart Kenny and his Western Gentlemen. Again restricted to registered former students and staff, the dance has been sold out.

Sunday's highlight will be Government House garden party starting at 2:30 p.m.

Besides the two stage shows ot the arena, a reception for invited guests was held Friday at University House by Dr. Howard Petch, president of the University of Victoria.

Celebration of Vic High's centennial will be capped May 24 by the Victoria Day parade, which will have as a theme "Victoria High School Centennial . . . 100 Years of Education."

The following is a list of events scheduled today and Sunday:

TODAY

8:30 a.m. — Breakfast With The Champions. Breakfast will be served by former sports champions from Vic High.

8:30-5 p.m. — Open House. Rooms organized into years, decades and eras, while athletic events, divided by age, will take place outside between 10 a.m. and 3 p.m.

11:30 — Lunch. Baron of beef luncheon will be available.

2-4 — Pioneer tea. Invited "pioneers" of the school in Room 103.

9 p.m.-1 a.m. — Centennial ball.

SUNDAY

2 p.m. — Netherlands Centennial Carillon Concert. Provincial carilloneur Herman Bergink will perform half-hour concert in honor of celebration.

2:30-4:30 p.m. — Garden party at Government House. Guests will be admitted only by registration card and music will be by Vic High concert band, directed by John Murray.

Nostalgia kept in high gear for two shows

By KING LEE
Colonist Reporter

Nostalgia didn't drip Friday night at Memorial Arena — it flowed.

Victoria high school reviewed its first 100 years with a splashy, well-done show produced by teacher Tommy Mayne and directed by Sylvia Hosie, who also choreographed the show.

Mayne was the thread which kept the production Come Give A Cheer together, playing the part of Old Vic, the legendary Spirit of Vic High.

When there wasn't any music coming from John Murray's orchestra or Maureen Archambault's choir, Mayne carried the show, narrating the story of the school with visual help from slides.

The second-show audience, consisting mostly of former students, gave generous applause to almost every aspect of the production and joined in the spirit of the show by standing, applauding and singing the school song as the cast snaked its way through the audience.

Among the most nostalgic pieces was a salute to the 1930s, dubbed the sports era. The biggest hand for all the sports heroes who attended Vic High during that decade went up for George (Porky) Andrews, a longtime staff member.

The delightful show was opened and closed with the singing of the "old school song," which brought back many fine memories for those present.

Come Give A Cheer may not be your everyday Broadway musical.

But it was certainly a long way ahead of your average high-school production.

FORMER STUDENT Norma Fitzsimmons of Island Florists donated this three-tiered arrangement for today's pioneer tea at Victoria high school and also gave huge arrangement made from 200 gold chrysanthemum plants for tonight's centennial ball at Memorial Arena.

Cadillac buyer free, gives thanks to jury

Barry Earl Lehna, 33, walked from Victoria county court a free man Friday night after a jury found him not guilty of knowingly possessing a stolen Cadillac.

"Thank you very, very much," he exclaimed to the jury after the verdict was given to the court.

Judge Montague Drake, in a rare comment after a jury verdict, said "I must say I agree with your verdict."

Lehna, of 3852 Wilkinson Road, Saanich, told the court in his four-day trial the charge had temporarily cost him his livelihood as a security patrol operator.

"My complete livelihood has been cut off by this charge and I am awaiting the outcome to see where my future lies," Lehna had said. He was president of Western Home Guard Patrol Ltd., until requested by the RCMP to resign and give up his shares in the company.

After the jury's verdict, he said he will appeal to the cabinet to get his licence reinstated.

The verdict came after three hours and 50 minutes deliberation.

Defence counsel Dermod Owen-Flood told the jury in his summation that the only issue was the charge that Lehna knew the 1975 Cadillac Eldorado convertible was stolen.

Lehna said he went to Montreal on two occasions last July and on the second visit paid a man named Paul Dube $9,500 cash for the car in a deal made in a hotel. He then drove the car to Victoria.

"We say that he did not know it was stolen; he was duped, conned," said Owen-Flood.

He described Lehna as "simply way out of his league" in a big city with "sophisticated criminals."

While Lehna admitted he did not check the serial number, Owen-Flood pointed to several defence witnesses who said car dealers do not usually do this, depending on the documentation.

He said Lehna's business partners in a used-car company, who had provided money for the Montreal trip, stood by him and testified as to his good character and reputation, as did a senior Saanich police officer and Brian Small, manager of the Greater Victoria Chamber of Commerce.

He said the business partners "have been through hell because of the publicity of this case" and they must "have suffered grievously from the publicity" yet they still came forward to testify for Lehna.

Owen-Flood called the jury's attention to a number of points which he said were "telltale signs that point to guilt or innocence."

These included the fact that Lehna, hearing police were making inquiries about the Cadillac, immediately called the police himself.

Then, when police went to his house and told him it was a stolen car, he said, "Oh my God, you have got to be kidding," according to a police witness.

Lehna then co-operated with police and answered their questions.

"This man has been guilty of stupidity, incompetency and idiocy, but he is not guilty of the crime for which he stands charged," he said.

Crown counsel Dwight Whitson, who was assisted by Peter Hull, said Lehna had 17 years experience in buying and selling cars and the jury had to ask itself whether his explanation could reasonably be true.

He said a reasonable person would have checked the dealer from whom Dube allegedly bought the car earlier the same day it was sold to Lehna and that a check made for liens would hardly disclose any on such a recent prior transaction.

Dube was a stranger and the sales document said it was for a sedan when it was in fact a convertible. This, said Whitson, would put a person on his guard.

Whitson described Lehna's actions as "not stupidity, that's wilful blindness, that's closing your eyes to the obvious."

Beautification body spared scrimping

The Capital Improvement District Commission's 1976 budget didn't fall victim to the provincial government's scrimping spree, Victoria Mayor Michael Young said Friday.

A total of $400,000 have been allocated to the CIDC for various projects this year, the same amount as last year.

Young said Provincial Secretary Grace McCarthy attended Thursday's meeting of the CIDC and he felt certain that she would continue to support the aims and aspirations of the commission.

The commission consists of representatives from the provincial government and the four core municipalities — Victoria, Saanich, Esquimalt and Oak Bay. The financing comes from the province.

The commission's last major beautification project was construction of the Lower Causeway.

Young declined to speculate on the CIDC's future projects, but he added that besides determining this year's goals, some long-range plans would be worked out.

The CIDC is to assume greater responsibilities. Mrs. McCarthy announced recently that the commission would be in charge of all provincial land holdings at the Inner Harbor development.

Arty life for The Beanery?

Artists and crafts people may get permission this summer to display and sell their wares at The Beanery, Victoria Mayor Michael Young said Friday.

In case you forgot, The Beanery is that colorful building by the Inner Harbor which was converted to a fast food takeout from a service station by the former NDP government.

Young said the possibility of using the building for arts and crafts people to display their work was discussed at Thursday's meeting of the Capital Improvement District Commission.

The mayor wouldn't commit himself, but he said there was a definite chance the plan might go ahead.

The CIDC is a provincial body with representatives from Greater Victoria's four core municipalities. It is in charge of beautification of the capital district and projects carried out under its auspices include the Lower Causeway at the Inner Harbor and the Gorge waterway beautification.

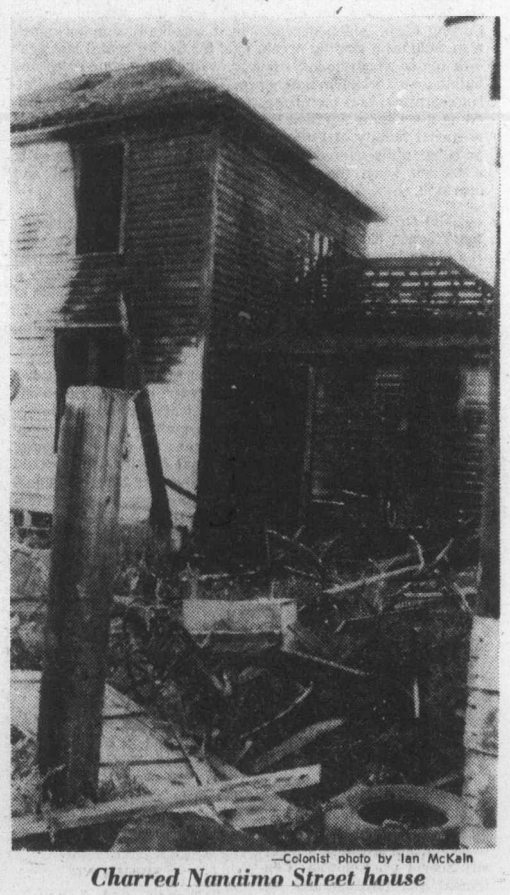

The possibility of using The Beanery as a miniature arts and crafts centre was first raised by Young in a letter to John R. White, a Victoria craftsman.

The mayor's letter was in response to a letter by White to Social Credit MLA Sam Bawlf, copies of which were sent to Young and Human Resources Minister William Vander Zalm.

White's letter said that crafts people had no place where they could sell their wares.

"He (the craftsman) has worked all winter long to prepare for the tourist season, his head full of dreams of working his way off government money and onto his own. The dream of a man to be self-employed and free, even though poor," it said.

White asked Bawlf to demonstrate "that Social Credit is a valid medium for the people of little personal power."

Searchlights go on trial for rescue helicopters

Search and rescue helicopters on the West Coast may soon be equipped with the searchlights that a Vancouver Island rescue co-ordinator has said they desperately need.

The move is one outlined in a recent letter from the national defence department to Campbell River's Dr. Bob Somerville.

The Island resident, who voluntarily co-ordinates rescue work, has said the searchlights are among equipment needed on search aircraft. He also contends this coast has far less equipment than the East Coast.

"Trials will begin this month on the feasibility of mounting the Night Sun searchlight on SAR helicopters," defence department executive assistant M. G. Cloutier wrote.

"When funding is obtained, action will commence to equip all SAR aircraft with marine VHF-FM radios," he continued.

The radios were also on Somerville's list of equipment he told DND recently was necessary for safe search and rescue on the B.C. coast.

DND believes West Coast facilities are generally adequate for rescue, the letter said, although Cloutier said the department "will continue to update and augment the resources to the utmost of our capabilities."

FIREMAN INJURED

Another building 'torched'

Two fires in Victoria Friday were attributed to vandalism and arson.

The latest of nine blazes in the city in 48 hours—several of which fire officials believe were deliberately set—occurred just before 6 p.m. in an empty house slated for demolition in the 2800-block Nanaimo.

"We assume it was torched," a Victoria fire department spokesman said of the fire in which acting department lieutenant Ray Campbell was injured.

Campbell was treated and released from Victoria General Hospital Friday after receiving a minor shoulder injury while fighting the blaze.

No one else was injured.

The home, in the middle of a large empty lot and owned by Victoria's Danmac Enterprises Ltd. had been unoccupied for several months.

Firemen, who cleaned up the blaze in less than two hours, said several children were reported to have been playing in the house before neighbors saw the smoke and flames.

A neighbor, 15-year-old Daren Page, said he ran into the house shortly before 6 p.m. when he saw smoke, and threw a burning cushion and some papers out a back window.

Thinking the fire was out, he weht back to dinner but saw flames a few minutes later, he said. By that time, the fire department had been called.

One Victoria policeman at the scene said the worst part of the fire were the dozens of people, mostly children, standing around laughing and playing. He said they treated it too lightly.

Earlier Friday, city Fire Chief Eric Simmons said vandalism was the probable cause of a $2,500 fire in a downtown building.

Someone apparently dropped a cigarette into a letter-box slot in the front door of the building at 751-753 View used by Standard Furniture as a storage centre and by the Eagles fraternal organization.

Most of the $2,500 damage was to the two-storey building and some furniture. A passerby phoned in the alarm at 3:47 a.m. Friday, almost exactly 24 hours after the alarm for the second of two major fires Wednesday night and early Thursday.

What is more incredible than incredible?

Incredible was the word used here a week ago in an attempt to describe the statement, made by alderman Ronald McKenzie, neophyte chairman of the Victoria city recreational committee, that under no circumstances should any recreational facility be run at a loss. Now McKenzie appears to have reversed his field. He is apparently determined to see to it that a recreational facility which has paid its way for almost a quarter of a century be put into a loss position.

McKenzie doesn't see it that way because the facility isn't owned by the city. It's the Victoria Curling Club, and the rub is that it doesn't own the property on which its building is situated. It is owned by the city, and the club has been informed that the city feels it is not getting enough revenue for the use of this land, which amounts to about three-quarters of an acre. What the city proposes as its future fee could force the club out of existence — and there are curling club officials and members who feel that is really what it is all about.

The Victoria club, the first curling facility in this area and heading for its 25th season, was built at no cost to Victoria taxpayers. It has paid taxes every year while providing a recreational facility which in so many communities today is paid for and supported by tax money. It hasn't been easy, but countless hours of time donated by members has kept the club solvent. It has been the kind of effort any city government should welcome.

But not, it seems, the City of Victoria. When the original lease ran out, it entered into a new deal with the club which called for five per cent of certain club revenues as a rental fee. That amounted to about $3,400 last year, which, added to the tax bill, brought the city's take from the VCC to more than $14,000. But it has been decided that's not enough. Although this year's taxes will be up to about $13,000, which is more than double what they were in 1972, the city now intends to levy a new rental fee which starts at $6,000 and is to increase by $1,000 each year until it reaches $10,000 annually.

Nor does it end there. Club officials were told by recreation-director Jack Morgan that he needs an additional $4,000 in revenue this year and that he intends to get it from the 59-slot north-side parking area the club helped to improve. As a consequence, it is being proposed that curlers will have to pay the 50-cent parking fee during their season.

It's more than enough to make the future of the club uncertain. Operational costs have gone up tremendously, and it has been only through the donated efforts of members that the fee structure has been kept within affordable range. The steadily-increasing tax load plus the increased rental fee are together more than can be afforded. Add the parking fee and it could be ruinous. The 50-cent charge would add $25 a year to the cost of twice-a-week curling, and it would be certain to cause many curlers to move to other area clubs, which have no parking charge.

It's an attitude hard to understand. The presence of a cost-free (to taxpayers) facility such as the Victoria Curling Club is a boon to any community, and Victoria has received more out of curling than most communities while putting out less — the less in this case being practically nothing. The VCC is the home of the largest senior (over 60) curling club in the world, and the city has profited handsomely over the years from the many thousands who have come here to curl or to watch curling. Memorial Arena profited from the staging of the Canadian men's championship in 1958, and its losses were cut considerably in 1974 when it extracted more than $5,700 in rental for the staging of the Canadian women's championship.

The story is different elsewhere. The Vancouver Curling Club, which is situated on park property, pays the Vancouver Parks Board $3,600 a year in rent but pays no taxes; the Nanaimo Curling Club, which owns the land on which it has its buildig, pays no city taxes; and the Alberni Valley Curling Club, which operates in a city-built complex which also includes a skating arena, paid $15,600 for rental last year — a figure which includes power, water and engine-room and building (exterior) maintenance. There are many other similar examples, and member-owned clubs are normally regarded as a welcome addition because they provide a needed recreational facility at little or no cost to their community. But, as is being discovered in many places, the cost becomes quite a burden when the same facility is municipally-built and operated.

McKenzie, however, believes that the city is subsidizing the Victoria club and that this kind of nonsense has to stop. His claim is based on figuring which has convinced him that if the land on which the club stands was converted into a parking lot it would bring the city annual parking revenue of $33,000. This, says McKenzie, means that it is costing the city $30,000 to let the Victoria club operate even with the rental fee at $6,000.

Without wondering what happened to the $13,000 in taxes the city would get from the VCC this year, it seems ridiculous to presume that this parking facility, which would accommodate only about 100 more cars, would show an-every-day-of the-year NET of $100, but when it means the tearing down of a well-kept and much-used recreational facility which would probably cost a million dollars to replace, it becomes somewhere beyond incredible. Every non-profit sport and recreation group in the city should take note of the current city hall attitude towards sport and recreation, which in most enlightened communities are considered a civic responsibility. It looks like it is time to go to the mat and find out who and why.

Whitecaps muffle Tornado attackers

VANCOUVER (CP) — Vancouver Whitecaps recovered from a poor first half to blank Dallas Tornado, 2-0, in a North American Soccer League game Friday Night.

Tony McAndrew, a midfielder on loan from Middlesborough of the English first division, opened the scoring at 68 minutes from a goalmouth scramble. Tommy Ord, a recent aquisition from New York Cosmos, scored an insurance marker less than four minutes later after Dallas goalkeeper Ken Cooper failed to clear a hard shot by Barry Mitchell. The mistake gave Ord an easy goal.

Dallas attackers failed to get many good scoring opportunities on Vancouver goalkeeper Phil Parkes, a veteran on loan from Wolverhampton Wanderers of the English First Division, who recorded the shutout.

Homer affair indicated for Stanley Cup final

MONTREAL (CP) — The Stanley Cup final series, which many National Hockey League fans hoped they would see, gets under way here Sunday night as Philadelphia Flyers take on Montreal Canadiens in the opening game of the best-of-seven set.

The Canadiens and Flyers finished one-two over-all in the NHL's regular-season points standings with Montreal getting 137 points and Philadelphia 118. Thus the Canadiens will have the home-ice advantage should the series go the full seven games as they bid for their 18th Stanley Cup title and their first since 1973.

The Flyers are bidding for their third consecutive playoff title, but they know they will have their hands full trying to keep the prize away from the tradition-rich Canadiens.

The Canadiens and Flyers played four games during the regular season. Philadelphia won twice, Montreal once, and the other game finished in a tie. Philadelphia outscored the Canadiens 10-9 in the four meetings.

Many think the final will be a "homer" affair. The Flyers have not won a game at the Montreal Forum since Nov. 2, 1974 when they blanked the Canadiens 3-0. That was the last time the Canadiens were held scoreless.

Montreal's last triumph at Philadelphia's Spectrum came Oct. 25, 1973, when they shut out the Flyers 4-0.

The final series marks the second time the Canadiens and Flyers have met in Stanley Cup play. Montreal took a semi-final set in five games back in 1973 en route to their last championship.

"The team with the best defence will win," noted Andre Dupont of the Flyers after Philadelphia eliminated Boston Bruins in the fifth game of their semi-final. "You know who I think that is."

The Flyers use Dupont, Larry Goodenough, and the Watson brothers—Jim and Joe—as their regular defence unit. Larry Robinson, Serge Savard, Guy Lapointe, Pierre Bouchard and rookie Bill Nyrop were used by Canadiens coach Scotty Bowman in the first two playoff series this spring.

Both teams have top-scoring lines with Clarke, Bill Barber and Reggie Leach forming the Flyers most explosive trio. Leach, a 61-goal man during the regular season has been on a scoring rampage this spring, with 15 goals in 12 games, including five in the Flyers 6-3 win over Boston Thursday.

The Canadiens top line of centre Peter Mahovlich, right-winger Guy Lafleur and left-winger Steve Shutt has been relatively quiet in the playoffs thus far, though they figured in four goals Thursday as Montreal eliminated the Islanders with a 5-2 triumph in the fifth game of their series.

Shutt, a 45-goal man during the regular season, has been the most consistent of the three during the playoffs and says Montreal's series against New York will help them in the finals.

"It's sort of an advantage for us playing the Islanders. They do play very similar, so we will be sort of used to that defensive style Philadelphia plays. It's going to be interesting."

Following Sunday's game, the teams will meet here again Tuesday with the third and fourth games set for Philadelphia next Thursday and May 16.

The Stanley Cup opener will be telecast on Channels 2 and 6, starting Sunday at 4 p.m.

St. Michaels advances to B.C. semi-final

St. Michaels University School's Rick McRae does his best to elude the tackles of two South Delta rivals Friday during B.C. high-school rugby action at Mount Douglas high school. Other St. Mike players are from left Dave Cousins, Tom Hosie and Brian Peers. McRae and his mates won three games Friday to qualify for today's semi-final. See story on Page 23.

Tiger sophomore stingy

Ray Bare pitched the first one-hitter of the major-league baseball season Friday.

The 27-year-old righthander pitched to only one more than the minimum of 27 batters and evened his record at 1-1 as Detroit Tigers posted a 5-0 win over Chicago White Sox in an American League baseball game at Detroit.

Bare allowed three baserunners, two on bases-on-balls, but one was eliminated on a double play and the other was picked off first base.

Bare, a sophomore, lost the no-hitter when speedy Ralph Garr hit an infield single in the fourth inning. Second baseman Gary Sutherland made a diving stop of Garr's hit but couldn't make the throw.

It was only the third hit in two games for Chicago.

A single by Alex Johnson and a double by Rusty Staub gave Bare the run he needed in the first inning. But the Tigers added a run in the fifth inning and three more in the sixth inning.

Ron Leflore singled to drive in two runs and extend his hitting streak to 11 games.

In the National League,

Dave Kingman caught power-hitter Mike Schmidt and lifted New York Mets past Philadelpsia Phillies in the East Division.

The six-foot-six slugger drove in five runs with a pair of home runs as the Mets downed San Diego Padres, 6-2, at New York.

The home runs were Kingman's 11th and 12th of the season, tying him with the Phillies third baseman for the major-league lead, and the victory put the Mets one game ahead of the Phillies, who dropped a 10-8 decision to the streaking Los Angeles Dodgers.

Schmidt, who tied a record with 11 home runs in April, hasn't hit a round-tripper since May 1, while Kingman has hit three home runs this month.

Kingman's first home run came off loser Randy Jones, who had a 5-1 record going into the game. Kingman hit a three-run homer in the eighth inning after Felix Millan doubled and Torre singled.

At Philadelphia, the Phillies hammered Dodger pitching for 13 hits but Ron Cey's home run in as many games lifted the Dodgers to their third straight victory on the road and their 12th straight win over-all.

Bays and Spartans victims of upsets

Oak Bay and Claremont were upset victims Friday as Ketalowna and Centennial emerged as surprise semi-finalists in the B.C. high school rugby tournament.

Kelowna upset defending champion Oak Bay Barbarians, 11-0, in a first-round match and went on to capture the Division II title in the round-robin eliminations while Centennial of the Fraser Valley upset Claremont Spartans, 6-0, to take Division IV honors.

Pre-tournament favorites, St. Micheal's University School and Tweedsmuir of the Fraser Valley were unbeaten in capturing the Division I and III titles, respectively.

A total of 15 teams — Rutland failed to show — took part in the round-robin eliminations which were held at Mt. Douglas High School and the University of Victoria.

The semi-finals start at 9 a.m. today at Mt. Douglas with Tweedsmuir taking on Centennial and St. Michaels going against Kelowna. The final is scheduled for 1 p.m. at Royal Athletic Park as a preliminary for the match between Crimson Tide and the Japanese national team.

Consolation matches will be held at 9 a.m. at UVic with Oak Bay meeting South Delta and Claremont taking on Alberni.

Kelowna used power rugby to upset the Barbarians, who won the provincial title the last two years. The Okanagan team played an aggressive, hard-hitting style and three Oak Bay players were knocked unconscious early in the game. There were no serious injuries but the Barbarians were surprised by the Kelowna tactics and were unable to get their free-wheeling game into gear.

Shocked by the defeat, the Barbarians recovered to trounce Mt. Baker of Cranbrook, 38-0, and down Port Coquitlam, 19-8, but Kelowna held on by beating Cranbrook, 9-0, and rallying for a 6-4 decision over Port Coquitlam.

Port Coquitlam earned third place by beating Cranbrook, 18-9.

In the game that decided the Division IV title, Centennial struck quickly, scoring a converted try early in the game. Spartans held the territorial edged the rest of the way but were unable to finish plays and were stopped by the fine tackling of the Centennial squad.

Centennial won its other games, 15-4, over Vernon and 10-3, over Elphinstone of Gibsons Landing while Claremont downed Vernon 19-0, and edged Elphinstone, 6-4. Elphinstone beat Vernon, 12-9.

St. Michaels squeezed by South Delta, 6-3, and North Kamloops, 11-6, on the way to winning Division I and whipped Correlieu of Quesnel, 22-3.

South Delta took second place by beating North Kamloops, 18-11, and Quesnel, 9-0, while North Kamloops defeated Quesnel, 24-4.

Tweedsmuir, which is unbeaten against Canadian opposition this season, looked impressive in thumping North Peace of Fort St. John, 48-3, but had a tough time before edging Port Alberni, 12-9. Alberni defeated North Peace, 19-0.

Canada, Finland will open tourney

OTTAWA (CP) — September's international hockey tournament will be known as the Canada Cup of Hockey, general-manager Sam Pollock 1976, and Montreal Canadiens' general-manager Sam Pollock has officially said he will select the Canadian team, Health Minister Marc Lalonde announced Friday.

Lalonde released at a news conference the schedule for the tournament. While sites have not been selected, the tournament will start Sept. 3 with Canada playing Finland. The final series of games will be Sept. 11 with Canada playing the Soviet Union. The top two teams will meet in a best-of-three final scheduled for Sept. 13 and 15 and 17 if necessary. The other teams in the tournament are the United States, Sweden and Czechoslovakia which won the world championship last month.

Alan Eagleson, who has headed the Canadian organizing committee, said that tentatively, five games will be played in Montreal, six in Toronto, three in a U.S. city, likely Philadelphia, and one or two in Quebec City.

Eagleson said he has not yet been able to conclude an agreement with Harold Ballard, who manages Toronto's Maple Leaf Gardens.

"Ballard wants more money than we're willing to pay. The players are making sacrifices and the owners should be prepared to do so."

While the U.S. site has yet to be concluded, Eagleson said he would prefer Philadelphia because hockey is popular there now. But Boston, Buffalo and Chicago were also trying for the site. The winning arena will have to hold the U.S. team's training camp.

Half of the tournament's net profits will be turned over to the National Hockey League and World Hockey Association players' pension funds on the ratio of players from each league on Team Canada.

The other half will go to Hockey Canada and the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association to finance future Canadian participation in international hockey as well as development of amateur hockey.

The Canadian training camp will open in Montreal Aug. 7 or 9, Eagleson said. "Pollock has been given complete authority and complete independence to select the Canadian team."

Hockey Canada chairman Doug Fisher said that Pollock volunteered for the job and will only get paid for his expenses. He will start work once the Canadiens have completed the Stanley Cup playoffs.

He will also select the coach to whom he will turn over the players. Canada will likely have pre-tournament exhibition games with the U.S. and Czech teams while the Americans and Russians will probably play.

Each country will be allowed 25 players on its roster and 20 will be able to dress for a game.

The only changes from International Ice Hockey Federation rules are that helmets will not be mandatory and the three-man officiating system rather than the two-man will be used.

The winning team of the first round of games will get $100,000 and the other five getting $75,000, $60,000, $55,000, $50,000 and $45,000 respectively. The winner of the playoff will get $50,000 and the loser $25,000.

Eagleson said that every Canadian player who participates will get a minimum of $2,500. Depending on Canada's finish, their earnings could go as high as $6,000.

The playoff games will be in Toronto and Montreal. If Toronto gets the Canada-Soviet series, then it will also get the opening game of the playoff which will then shift to Montreal.

Fisher said the tickets will be sold in blocks with seats for either two or three games having to be purchased. He estimated that 75 per cent of them will go to regular-season subscribers with the rest available for the general public.

Eagleson said there will be between 2000 to 5000 tickets per game available for the public. He said the prices will be comparable to Stanley Cup ducats.

CTV and the Quebec television network TVA will broadcast the games that are played in Canada. Arrangements are still being made for the U.S. games. The organizing committee has retained control of radio and television commercial rights.

The schedule (sites to be nounced):

Sept. 2 — Finland vs. Canada.
Sept. 3 — Soviet Union vs. Czechoslovakia; Sweden vs. United States.
Sept. 5 — Finland vs. Czechoslovakia; Soviet Union vs. Sweden; Canada vs. United States.
Sept. 7—Soviet Union vs. Finland; Canada vs. Sweden; Czechoslovakia vs. United States.
Sept. 9—Soviet Union vs. United States; Canada vs. Czechoslovakia; Sweden vs. Finland.
Sept. 11 — Czechoslovakia vs. Sweden; Finland vs. United States; Canada vs. Soviet Union.
The playoff games between the top two teams to decide the championship will be Sept. 13 and 15 and 17 if necessary.

Record three-goal flurry helps Aeros even series

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Aeros staggered rookie goaltender Cap Raeder with three goals over a record 1:17 span of the second period Friday night en route to a 5-2 victory over New England Whalers to even their World Hockey Association United States playoff series at 1-1.

The third game of the best-of-seven series will be played Sunday at Hartford, Conn. The eventual winner will play Winnipeg Jets for the WHA title.

Raeder, who handcuffed the Aeros in the series opener Wednesday night, was in control again until the Aeros unleashed their three-goal surge.

Aeros' centre Terry Ruskowski got the first goal at 5:28 and it was followed quickly with goals by John Tonelli at 6:04 and Ted Taylor at 6:39 to put the Aeros in command for good.

The Aeros' three-goal performance was a club record for the fastest three goals. The Aeros scored three goals in 2:21 against Chicago in 1974.

Houston's Mark Howe capped the decisive second period with a goal at 19:49 on a pass from father Gordie to give the Aeros a 4-1 lead. The two teams traded goals in the final period, with Bob McManama scoring for New England at 5:11 and Houston's Andre Hinse scoring his first playoff goal at 7:32. Thommy Abrahamsson opened the scoring with the other Whaler goal.

Wepner wins

KEARNY, N.J. (AP) — Chuck Wepner stopped Tommy Sheehan of Scranton, Pa., in one minute and one second of the second round of a one-sided heavyweight fight here Friday after knocking him to the canvas three times.

Royal Oak takes lead

Royal Oak Sporting Goods snapped Ingraham Hotel's win streak and took over first place in the Stuffy McGinnis Men's League Friday.

Terry Hoy drove in two runs and scored once and Ken Fox pitched a four-hitter as unbeaten Royal Oak downed the Hotelmen, 4-1, at Central Park.

The win put Royal Oak half a game ahead of Ingraham which had won three straight games.

Bob Bate added three hits and drove in one runs for Royal Oak while Fox tripled and drove in a run.

Warren Campbell had two of the Ingraham hits and drove in the only run.

At Heywood Park, Flay Hall led off with a triple in the ninth inning and scored on a single by Doug Baxter to give Capital Builders a 5-4 win over Century Inn in a Heywood Avenue Men's League game.

In the Sidney Men's League, Bob Lougheed hit two home runs and Doug Boden hit one home run as Seaboard Properties thumped Victoria Chiefs, 19-3, at Sanscha Park.

Spectrum girls soccer champs

Spectrum captured the Greater Victoria girls high school soccer championship by defeating Esquimalt, 2-0, Friday at Royal Athletic Park.

Sue Chevrier played a strong game in goal, stopping one penalty shot on the way to the shutout, and Pam Kozak scored both Spectrum goals.

Bartley stripped of racing points

Bill Bartley has to start climbing the hobby-stock points ladder all over again.

The 1975 champion of the claimer class, Bartley will be out to reclaim lost points when Western Speedway hosts a super-stock and hobby-stock program tonight. Time trials begin at 7 p.m.

Bartley had a comfortable lead in points after winning the first two hobby-stock races of the season but his car has been found to be illegal, and he has been dropped into fourth place behind Bill Hitchcox, Gordon Stone and Steve Morris.

Following Bartley's win in last Saturday's feature the Vancouver Island Track Racing Association technical committee seized his 56 Ford for inspection. The committee, headed by Pete Barteaux, ruled that the car had undergone alterations to the suspension.

Under VITRA rules for the hobby stocks, which are a new class, the suspension must be stock equipment and no alterations are allowed.

Bartley also lost his prize money but says he will appeal the decision.

In the super-stock division, Bill Price has taken over first place from Bob Collins, who is 28 points back and in second place.

Price took the lead by winning the local super-stocks event last Saturday while Collins, the main event winner on opening day, finished third.

Orton Ker finished second and now holds down third place with 156 points, 61 fewer than Collins.

BITS AND PIECES — Capital City Go-Kart Club is running a special race as an added attraction to Saturday's program ... Roy Haslam is going to race his '69 Chevelle in a NASCAR Northwest event Sunday at Evergreen Speedway near Monroe, Wash.

SUPER STOCKS
1. Bill Price, '64 Chevelle, 245.
2. Bob Collins, '69 T-Bird, 217.
3. Orton Ker, '68 Torino, 156.
4. Neil Moore, '63 Ford, 133.
5. Jerry Ferrie, '64 Fairlane, 113.

Hayes scrambles to 67 to pad tourney lead

DALLAS (AP) — Mark Hayes, who's been in title contention almost every week for the last three months, scrambled through cold and wind to a four-under-par 67 that staked him to a two-shot lead Friday in the second round of the $200,000 Byron Nelson golf tournament.

"I was erratic and scrambling," Hayes said after posting his 36-hole total of 133, nine under par on the 6983-yard Preston Trail Golf Club course.

"It was awful cold and windy — and I played about as good as the weather. But when I missed a shot I missed it on the right side. I scrambled well when I had to. I haven't made a bogey for 36 holes and that has to be the key."

Hayes, a 26-year-old Oklahoma State product, has been one of the most consistent performers on the tour during the last few months despite the fact that he's still looking for his first title in four years of tour activity.

He has picked up almost $50,000 since the tour got to Florida, been 10th or better five times, held the lead on several occasions and been in position to win at least three times.

Bob E. Smith, a nine-year tourist whose second-place finished here a year ago represented "the best I've ever played," shot a 67 that left him in second place at 135.

Masters champion Ray Floyd, Don Bies and Bill Rogers were at 137, five under par and tied for third. Floyd had a 67, Bies a 70 and Rogers a 68.

Jack Nicklaus, penalized two strokes for carrying too many clubs in the first round, birdied his last two holes before a gallery bundled into sweaters and rain gear for a 68 that tied him with Lee Trevino at 139, six shots back. Trevino had a 70.

Defending titleholder Tom Watson and Arnold Palmer each shot a 72 for 143.

George Knudson of Toronto shot a three-over-par 74 to go with his opening-round 71 for a 145 total, qualifying him for the final two rounds of play.

Canadian gymnasts fighting to qualify

WIESBADEN, West Germany (AP) — The United States, Switzerland and France all but clinched men's gymnastics team berths in the Montreal Olympics by dominating the opening compulsories Friday in a 12-nation qualification meet.

The Swiss placed first in compulsories with 272.50 points, edging the U.S. with 272.40. But the Americans seized the over-all lead on the basis of points scored in a previous meet and weighed in for the qualification totals.

France placed third in the compulsories with 271.25 points and was third overall, also with a good chance of qualifying after Saturday's freestyle events.

The top six teams will qualify for Montreal, with the two-day meet counting 40 per cent and the previous meet counting 60 per cent toward the qualification total. The meet was scheduled because of allegations of inflated points being awarded in the other pre-Olympic tests.

Poland finished fourth in the compulsories with 269.30 points and was seventh in the intemediate overall standings. Czechoslovakia was fifth in the compulsories with 267.80 and was fifth overall. Canada scored 263.65 points for sixth in compulsories and sixth overall.

Italy had the seventh best compulsory score of 263.60 and was eighth overall. Bulgaria stood fourth in the intermediate total after placing eighth in the compulsories with 262.25. But the Czechs, Canadians, Poles and Italians are all likely to move ahead of the Bulgarians after the freestyle events.

Members of the Canadian team are Pierre Delasalle and Bruce Medd of Victoria, Owen Walstrom of Vancouver, Keith Carter of Winnipeg, Maasaki Naosaki and Steve Mitruk of Toronto, Nigel Rothwell of Windsor, Ont., and Pierre Leclerc of Montreal.

Real Madrid banned for fans' behavior

BRUSSELS (AP-Reuter) — The Spanish soccer champions, Real Madrid, Friday were banned from taking part in any European competition next season because of the rowdy behavior of their fans. The action was taken by the disciplinary commission of the European Football Union as a result of incidents in a March 31 Champions Cup semi-final in Madrid against West Germany's Bayern Munich in which players and the referee were molested. The stiff penalty was imposed because it was the second time in three years that Real Madrid had been unable to protect opponents and officials. In the March incident, irate spectators attacked Austrian referee Erich Linemayr and Bayern forward Gerd Mueller at the end of the game. Both were knocked to the ground and the referee suffered a mouth injury before police broke up the battle.

Canadian women upset Russians

STRAKONICE, Czechoslovakia (CP) — Liz Silcott of Montreal scored on a layup with nine seconds remaining in the game Friday night to give Canada's national women's basketball team a 56-55 upset win over the Soviet Union in an international tournament.

The victory was the second in three starts for the Canadians, the smallest team entered in the pre-Olympic tournament. Canada beat the Czecholovakian B team 70-65 Wednesday before losing by 63-47 to Italy on Thursday.

Canada was ahead 44-36 at one time in the game, and at another time led by eight points. The Russians led by three points late in the third quarter of the game.

"Canada has never beaten Russia before," Ms. Silcott said. "It's the greatest moment of my basketball career."

Bev Bland of Richmond, B.C., led all scorers with 22 points. Ms. Silcott finished with 13 points.

The five-foot-five Ms. Silcott deked a six-foot-five Russian defender for the winning basket.

Hosts dominate senior golf play

Members of the host club dominated play in the Vancouver Island Seniors Golf Association spring tournament Friday at Royal Colwood Golf and Country Club.

Hugh Thornburn of the host club captured the Charlie Smith Low Gross Rose Bowl by shooting a 74 and two other Colwood golfers won low-gross honors in their divisions.

Alec Wilson shot an 83 to win the 14-15 handicap division and Chick Melnyk carded an 87 to win the 16-18 handicap division.

Dr. George Bigelow of Victoria and Eric Wright of Gorge Vale tied for second over-all with 76s, but Dr. Bigelow won the back nine and was awarded the low-gross prize for the 5-13 handicap division.

The handicap competition was topped by Don Sutherland of Glen Meadows. The 17-handicapper fired a net 65 to win the Larry McCooey Low Net Rose Bowl.

The new Life Member Team Rose Bowl went to Nanaimo which got a low-gross of 333 from its leading four members. Gorge finished second with 346 followed by Colwood 347; Uplands 354½; Victoria 371; Glen Meadows 382; Cedar Hill 386; and Ardmore 394.

Following are the division winners:

M. V. Chesnut's Garden notes

Any gardener who has ever transplanted a tree or a shrub will know that the younger the plant— within reason — the more readily it will take hold and grow away in its new home. It is incredibly difficult to move an elderly specimen successfully, for it is just too set in its ways to adjust readily to a new environment.

Yet many home gardeners forget this important basic lesson when they go shopping for tomato plants, and they come home with the biggest, oldest and most advanced specimens they can find.

They seem to think that the older and bigger the plant, the sooner it will bear fruit, and of course, every gardener worth his salt wants to be able to pick red, vine-ripened tomatoes at a time when his neighbours have only hard green ones on their plants.

To this end, then, they will seek out and buy very large plants, and if they can find some already showing yellow blossoms, they count themselves that much ahead of the game.

This is a mistake. Such large, in-blossom plants will almost always abort their blossoms from the shock of transplanting to the open garden.

Moreover, such elderly plants will often go into a fit of the sulks after transplanting, just sitting there despondently doing nothing at all, making no new growth for days on end, thereby losing a lot of valuable growing time.

There are several solid advantages in selecting the smaller, younger tomato plants. For one thing, such late-started plants haven't had time to exhaust the goodness in their box of soil and won't be suffering from malnutrition.

For another, they won't be overcrowded in their box, and their roots won't be so entangled with those of their fellow occupants, so they can be separated and planted out with less damage to the root system, less shock and considerably less of a setback. Many times I have seen young, late-planted tomato plants overtake and pass their older, larger brothers.

To my mind, the ideal tomato plant should be short and stocky, with leaves of a good dark green color and with no long expanse of bare stem between leaves. If the stems are hairy and with a pinkish tinge, that's good. If the leaves are covered with a slightly velvety fuzz, that's good. If the leaves are developing a yellowish tinge, that's bad — a sign of undernourishment. Avoid plants which are becoming thin and spindly on top.

In setting out tomato plants, I am more sold than ever on that wet newspaper stunt, and since I first explained this little trick some 15 years ago, I have had hundreds of letters reporting bigger and better tomatoes, with earlier ripening and fewer cases of rotting fruits on the vine.

Briefly, this technique consists of burying a big wad of soggy wet newsprint deep under each tomato plant as it is set out. I save papers ahead of time, then the night before planting, I separate them, tear them into strips, and soak them overnight in our laundry tubs.

In setting out the plants, I dig a very deep hole, about 14 inches deep, and a big double handful of the soggy wet newsprint is dumped in the bottom of each planting hole. The holes are filled in with good topsoil, then the tomato plant is planted in the usual way and at the usual depth.

The idea of the wad of wet newspapers is simply to provide a long-lasting source of moisture deep down under the roots, and actually any sponge-like, moisture retaining material could be used — wet peat moss, manure, half-rotted leaves, seaweed or what have you. We use newspapers because we happen to have a lot of them around.

From this deeply buried "sponge" a small but steady trickle of moisture moves upward by capillary action to the deep roots, in exactly the same way as your African violet sucks up the water from the saucer under its pot.

Tomatoes planted in this way seldom suffer from that horrible blossom-end rot, or cracked fruits, or any of the tomato troubles so often encountered through the summer.

Special to the Peking Daily News

WASHINGTON — The mysterious Cultural Revolution continues to ravage American society with upheavals occurring virtually every Tuesday in one province after another.

So inscrutable is the Occidental mind that most Eastern observers frankly admit to being baffled as to precisely what forces are engaged in this obvious struggle for power.

Most long-time America watchers here, however, agree that the primary function of the revolution is to determine who will permanently succeed Richard Nixon, the beloved pro-Chinese Communist former chairman, who has retired to the village of San Clemente to write a book of Quotations.

His temporary successor, Chairman Ford, who had once renounced all political ambition, now appears to be in the thick of the battle. Some say it was he who purged his own vice chairman, Nelson Rockefeller, in order to appease party radicals.

In any event, Rockefeller, while allowed to keep his party membership has not been seen in public for many months. Reports say he has been sent to Pocantico Hills Farm in the Westchester commune to be purified of "revisionist thoughts."

Even more strange has been the behavior of the leader of the party's most radical element, Ronald Reagan, a former movie actor and provincial governor. Reagan appears to be trying to depose Foreign Secretary Kissinger by parroting the Moscow line that Russia is stronger than America.

Experts here say that Reagan is winning his struggle against Kissinger in some provinces, but has lost to him elsewhere. Chairman Ford is believed to be on Kissinger's side, though about to purge him. Should Ford emerge victorious, however, Reagan will probably be forced to flee to Russia.

The utter confusion in the upper echelons has, of course, created a number of other challengers. Western sources here say one to watch is Jimmy Carver or Carter. All that is known about him is that he assures his followers that he will never lie to them. Whether or not this is true is unclear.

Virtually every week, Carver's forces win another provincial battle. Each one is hailed in advance as "decisive" and viewed in retrospect as "indecisive." For this reason, while Carver may win the battles, Hubert Humphrey, who has recently been restored from obscurity for the fourth time, may win the war. No one knows why.

That this is a genuine revolution cannot be denied. Every challenger has denounced not only the government, but Washington itself. Here, we do know why. Washington is bone-chillingly cold in winter, stupefyingly hot in summer and not fit to dwell in, much less to govern from.

But where the new leader, whoever he may be, will move his revolutionary government remains veiled behind the Western penchant for secrecy. There are some things about this strange society that we Chinese observers may never understand.

Sydney Harris

Ludek Pachman was one of the leading young European chessmasters when his native country of Czechoslovakia was taken over by the Russians after the Second World War — by intimidation, if not by actual physical presence. At that time, like so many Central Europeans who had opposed the Nazis, he became a fervent supporter of what he imagined was "socialism" for his country.

He soon learned a lesson that changed the course of his whole life: the noble slogans of "socialism" and "brotherhood" and "people's democracy" were a mask for sheer totalitarian power, trampling all real freedom underfoot.

Pachman's new book, Checkmate in Prague, subtitled The Memoirs of a Grandmaster, has really nothing to do with chess as such, except in showing that the totalitarian juggernaut is truly total in its dominance over the life of the people, not only in politics and economics but even in such marginal activities as sports and games.

What is tragic about the book is that the Russian "liberators" were greeted so enthusiastically after the German defeat, by naive and hopeful populaces who actually believed that Soviet hegemony would bring them into the camp of "international solidarity" of the working-classes.

Any honest historian of the 20th century could have told them otherwise. Just as Hitler used the deceptive rubrics of National Socialism and "labor" in the name of his Nazi party, to conceal its basic despotism, so the Soviets constantly promulgate the same fictions to mask their ruthless betrayal of the workers' hopes for equality, democracy and a humane socialism "that wears a human face."

The word "communism" has been used as a bogeyman in the West, manipulated by the cunning to frighten the credulous; but it is not communism per se that poses a threat to freedom: the early Christians, it seems probable, practiced a primitive form of communism, based on genuine sharing out of love and brotherhood.

It is, rather, the totalitarian monster masquerading as the liberator of mankind that deludes and then destroys the hopes of the disinherited everywhere, whether the monster paints itself brown as in Germany or red as in Russia. There is no accommodating it, except on its own arbitrary terms. Even a chessmaster must toe the party line if he expects to be allowed to play in tournaments.

It is meaningless and delusive for us to be merely "anti-communist"; we must learn to be anti-totalitarian, wherever the monster may raise its head, no matter which flag it seems to fluutter.

By concentrating on the "communist" veneer of our enemies, it becomes too easy to forget that what we oppose is not so much an economic system as a power complex that subverts all systems to its malignant ends. Being simply "against communism" is what blinded the German people to the opposite evil within their own heartland.

Nickel snag tempers Sea Law progress

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — After eight weeks of behind the door negotiations costing $2.7 million, the UN Law of the Sea Conference wrapped up another round Friday with some signs of modest progress, but bitter new divisions over the future mining of seabed nickle.

Charles Elliott, a director and former president of the Mining Association of Canada, said some clauses contained in a new negotiating draft would constitute a disaster for Canadian nickel-mining industry.

The Bowmanville, Ont., resident said in an interview that under certain circumstances a seabed mining proposal—backed by the United States—would eliminate nickel mining in Canada—the world's biggest producer—within 25 years from the start of ocean operations.

The United States has said it does not want to hurt Canadian mining but has yet to make clear how this would be avoided.

In other developments, delegates from the 156 participating countries agreed to meet here again Aug. 2-Sept. 17 to continue their quest for a new law governing use of the world's oceans. The conference opened in Venezuela in 1974 and a further session was held in Geneva last year.

Alan Beesley, head of the Canadian delegation, said the new negotiating text is "undoubtedly an improvement over the text we brought from Geneva."

Beesley told a news conference: "We now find a much wider basis for accommodation . . . on issues central to Canada. But we do not like the formula on nickel."

The text makes firmer provision than in the past for protecting Canada's Arctic waters from pollution, indicates a rapidly growing consensus on the right of coastal states to resources in a 200-mile offshore economic zone and leaves intact provisions intended to maintain and nurture fish stocks.

It also makes more clear proposals for protecting the marine ecology and calls for strengthened national powers to enforce international pollution-prevention standards in economic zones.

But it was the nickel issue which preoccupied Canadian delegates at the close of the conference.

The text contains a clause—introduced by the United States and others so late in the conference it could not be debated in committee—which says nickel from the seabed should be mined at a minimum 6-per-cent annual rate of increase.

Canada led an unsuccessful fight to kill the proposal.

No time for oil critics

OTTAWA (CP) — Al Johnson, president of the Canadian Broadcasting Corp., Friday defended advertising by Imperial Oil Ltd. on CBC hockey broadcasts and said critics of the oil company did not need time to respond.

Johnson told the Commons broadcasting committee are factual and fall within re- that the advertising messages strictions of the CBC commercial acceptance policy.

The messages say Imperial needs money for future Arctic oil exploration and show the percentage of revenues used for exploration, taxes and profits.

Johnson was responding to Cyril Symes (NDP—Sault Ste. Marie), who criticized the CBC for refusing to sell a hockey night time slot to the Public Petroleum Association of Canada for a message that questions the level of oil company profits.

Johnson said CBC policy is to allow corporate advertising of goods and services and institutional advertising presenting factual information about a company's projects and plans. Under the policy, such advertising cannot urge viewers to adopt a particular attitude or course of action.

Symes agreed with the Public Petroleum Association, a Toronto-based group that keeps tabs on the oil industry, that the Imperial ads are an attempt to influence the public to accept higher oil prices.

The association has asked the Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission (CRT) to either ban such so-called "policy advertising" or to allow individuals and groups to buy time to respond during the same programs the messages are shown.

The association tried to run a one-minute response to the Imperial messages but was told by the CBC and the advertising agency for the hockey broadcasts that all the available time was booked.

Parlor-patron profile revealing

CHICAGO (AP) — Men who go to massage parlors seeking more than a regular rubdown aren't necessarily perverted or undesirable, say two Illinois psychologists. In fact, they tend to be well adjusted and somewhat average.

The psychologists, graduate student Mary Simpson and Dr. Thomas Schill, a professor at Southern Illinois University, Carbondale, obtained information from about 187 men who visited a massage parlor in an unidentified Illinois city of 20,000 population during five months.

They found that more than half the customers were married and almost half had been drinking.

The researchers enlisted the help of a woman massage parlor employee who conducted informal interviews while giving massages and administered questionnaires and personality tests to patrons afterward.

"Results appear to refute the allegations of those who have warned that the parlors attract the young, the perverted and the undesirable.

"They also fail to support the claims of those who say the parlors are therapeutic because they are largely frequented by sexually inadequate individuals."

RAF Ferry Command plans Quebec reunion

MONTREAL (CP) — Britain's Air Vice-Marshal D. C. T. Bennett (retired) will be guest speaker at a June reunion of pilots of the Royal Air Force Ferry Command of the Second World War, it was learned Friday.

The June 18-20 wing-ding at the Dorval community centre and the memorial ceremony at nearby Dorval airport will mark the 30th anniversary of ferry command's windup at war's end.

Bennett led the first ferry squadron of seven twin-engine Hudsons — with British, American, Australian and Canadian pilots — from Dorval to Prestwick, Scotland, via Newfoundland Nov. 10-11, 1940.

The ferry crews delivered an estimated 18,000 planes — including twin-engine Mosquitoes, Bostons and Mitchells and four-engined bombers. The loss rate was negligible.

Bruins get short breather while rivals open cup play

MONTREAL (CP) — New Westminster Bruins of the Western Canada Hockey League will be out to prove something when the three-team Memorial Cup junior hockey championship gets under way here Sunday afternoon.

The only problem is that they won't get a chance to gain personal revenge against the club that derailed them in last year's run at the national title.

The format to decide Canada's top junior team will be the same one used for the last four years, with the winners of the three major junior leagues meeting in a round-robin series.

Of this season's three entries, the Bruins are the only returnees. Last year they lost the final to Toronto Marlboros of the Ontario Hockey Association Major Junior League, but the usually-powerful Marlies failed to make it to the provincial final this season.

If the B.C. entry wants the title this year it must get beyond Ontario's Hamilton Fincups and Quebec Remparts of the Quebec Major Junior Hockey League.

The Fincups knocked out Sudbury Wolves in five games for the right to represent Ontario, while the defence-minded Remparts dislodged last year's Quebec champion—Sherbrooke Beavers and their potent offence-in six.

The Fincups will have had 11 days off by the time they tackle the Remparts in Sunday's opener, while the Quebec team has been idle since winning its final game against the Beavers last Monday.

In contrast, the Bruins didn't win the right to represent the West until Thursday night when they counted a 3-1 victory at home against Saskatoon Blades. The seventh-game victory gave the New Westminster club a 9-5 win in the eight-point series.

After Sunday's opener between Ontario and Quebec, the Remparts come right back to meet the Bruins Monday night. Then Wednesday night's action features a match-up between the Fincups and the Bruins.

The second and third-place teams meet in the semi-final next Friday night, with the winner taking on the first-place finisher for the championship Sunday afternoon, May 16.

Mariners willing

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The dozen jobless San Diego Mariners say they will be back if the World Hockey Association keep the franchise, provided an owner can be found.

Ben Hatskin, the WHA's chief executive officer, is due to determine soon whether the Mariners can be sold. Their former owner, Baltimore businessman Joseph Schwartz, gave up the franchise in March.

"There is no franchise in San Diego," centre Andre Lacroix said. But he said the players were all willing to give up their free-agent status immediately if the Mariners are saved.

Total abstinence aim of WCTU

By CHARLES HILLINGER

EVANSTON, Ill. — "A lot of people think the WCTU rolled over, died and gave up the ghost years ago — about the time of the repeal of Prohibition in 1933," declared the tall, sixtyish bespectacled woman.

"We're far from being dead!"

Speaking at the WCTU national headquarters here was Mrs. Edith Kirkendall Stanley, 10th president of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union since its founding in Cleveland in 1874.

Mrs. Stanley was seated at her desk beneath a photograph of "Lemonade Lucy," the wife of President Rutherford B. Hayes. Lucy Hayes banned liquor from the White House. She and her husband never served any liquor at state or private functions while Hayes was president.

Mrs. Stanley is calling for an immediate ban on advertising of alcoholic beverages on radio and television, and a ban on alcohol in all armed services installations, including officers' and enlisted men's clubs.

"Primary aim of the WCTU," noted the anti-liquor leader, "is total abstinence for the individual, the nation and the world.

"Alcohol is a curse intolerable in its extent and unpredictable in its malignity. It has wrought more havoc than war, famine or pestilence.

"We must repeal the most costly and tragic legislation (the 21st Amendment) in the history of this nation."

WCTU membership in the 50 states is estimated at 250,000 today, a far cry from the days when the organization was able to muster more than six million signatures and carry them to Congress, demanding nationwide prohibition.

But the WCTU is still in the forefront of the battle for sobriety in America, no matter how muffled the cry.

Evanston, Ill., dry for more than a century and the national headquarters of the WCTU, went wet three years ago by a vote of the city council.

"I'm still fussin' about that," said Mrs. Stanley. "I've asked for a referendum on the issue. It should be up to the people."

'Very crucial year to be finance minister'

By George Gibson
Colonist Staff

'It takes a little while," he admitted. "But aside from naturally having a bent for following politics — which you never get rid of once you get involved from the inside — I knew who the NDP ministers were. But it's true. I even had to get tuned into some of the new procedures in the House."

And as finance minister, Wolfe has been well to the fore this session after having brought out a restrictive budget last March 26 and being involved in the ordering of the Clarkson Gordon report on the government's finances. His budget address was the first for a finance minister, who wasn't also the premier, since 1952.

Premiers W. A. C. Bennett and Barrett both kept a tight hold on the finance portfolio although Barrett turned it over to Dave Stupich just three months before last December's election.

Did he know beforehand that he was to be minister of finance?

"No, I didn't. It was a complete surprise," Wolfe said. "But I feel that it's a terrific job that I'm really enjoying. I also feel that I have a lot more to do that I'm moving towards and I'm enjoying the challenge as I go along."

Even with all the flak he's been subject to?

"Yes, there's been strong criticism from the Opposition and the press but the letters and feeling that I get from the public hasn't been all that bad," Wolfe said.

"I think that you should keep in mind, the nature of my job being in finance and the whole accent of the previous election and our coming in as a new government, plus the situation that resulted in the Clarkson Gordon report developing into the new budget, involving a lot of new measures — well, the whole accent has been on finance.

"This has been multiplied by the fact that all of these new tax measures have required legislation that I've sponsored so you might say that I've been in the focus in a lot of criticism that the Opposition wants to contribute in a lot of ways.

"But I'd like to qualify the difference that the criticism that I get in the House is not what I get out in British Columbia.

"Sure, I get lots of letters, some of them critical, but not to the volume that you's expect. I think that people were conditioned to realize that strong measures were necessary and they're being very understanding about the whole matter as far as I'm concerned," Wolfe said.

Finance Minister Evan Wolfe in his office
. . . appointment "complete surprise." ". . . I'm enjoying the challenge."

The finance minister went on to say that he feels the appointment of a provincial auditor-general, the introduction of quarterly reports and other proposals will eventually do much to counteract the opinion that has come about today that is "suspicious and critical of public figures."

Wolfe was probed on his press relations. He said that he didn't employ an executive assistant and hasn't found one to be necessary to date.

But was the press proving to be difficult?

"Well, I'm not big news," he laughed. "I'm never really comfortagle with them. I've always had a respect for their ability to report.

"I don't hold the view that they mis-report a lot of news and I've always marvelled — especially when I was in the House before — and hearing things go on and then anticipating what I was going to read in the papers the next day. The good legislative reporters would generally get the meat out of what had taken place.

"The only thing is — I think more so now than then — depending on the medium, htey will play up a different feature. They will give two or three accounts of the same incident and highlight it in a completely different way.

"It's interesting to be involved more directly now where a certain incident occurs and then read four newspapers of what takes place," he added.

The session has Wolfe constantly in the House as his office has been the focus not only because of its estimates and the budget, but with other departments also under scrutiny. This role of finance min tiny. This role of finance minister used to be one handled routinely by the premier.

Wolfe is chairman of the Treasury Board and is a member of the cabinet committee dealing with the federal Anti-Inflation Board negotiations.

He said that he expects to be travelling to Ottawa quite a bit in the next year. Among items to be finalized before the end of next March are the Fiscal Arrangements Act, the Revenue Guarantee and the education formula.

"It's a very crucial year to be finance minister," Wolfe said.

Would he rather have had any other portfolio?

"No, I very much like finance — most of the time," he said with a grin.

The finance minister — after he'd stopped laughing — treated the question quite seriously.

"No, not a bit," was Evan Wolfe's quick reply to question that came up during an interview this week. The question was whether or not he minded being identified as a member of the "car dealer" government.

Wolfe, 53, appointed B.C.'s new minister of finance last Dec. 22 after the Social Credit party ousted the NDP government after one short term, is one of seven car dealers among 34 party members elected.

He said that he was willing to go along with the gag. Then he was asked whether or not he felt that such a business background qualified him to be finance minister. He replied:

"It's all part of your work experience. Everybody has different experiences. I'm a charterd accountant and I've benefitted from my training in that way by being in the car business for 25 years.

"I've always made an effort to run a reputable, business, but aside from that, it's unlike many businesses — diversified, involving and dealing with a lot of people.

"It's a retail business and I think that people in the retail business are better tuned in to the citizen, generally speaking, and get more information . . ," Wolfe said.

"We've had a lot of fun poked at us as car dealers but I don't look upon it as being any disadvantage," he added.

As Wolfe said, he is also a chartered accountant, plays a jazz piano well enough to hold a musician's union card, curls (so well that he was a member of B.C.'s 1959 Brier rink), father of four, YMCA stalwart, ex-Flying officer and does a lot of other things. Also, he's batting three-for-four in the provincial election game.

Wolfe put in two previous sessions as a Socred backbencher and one of two members for Vancouver Centre. Then he and Herb Capozzi, running again as a team, lost to NDPers Gary Lauk and Emery Barnes in the 1972 turnaround.

Just 24 hours before the 1975 nominating deadline, Wolfe decided to try it again — but this time running in Vanncouver-Little Mountain with Grace McCarthy. This time they knocked off Phyllis Young and Roy Cummings, both NDP incumbents.

Was the 1972 loss a surprise?

Wolfe considered the question, then carefully replied:

"Well, I'm never one to get caught up in the euphoria of an election and start thinking things like you're going to win, you're going to win."

"One of the most unpredictable things ever is to predict the outcome of a constituency election. There are all sorts of expert opinions but very few are right on as to what the actual results are.

"You sort of think that you're going to win because you're one of the members at the time but when you view the thing in hindsight and the reasons the former government went down to defeat, it's not surprising because the degree of defeat is pretty widespread. The degree of swing was almost the same as that which happened this last time," Wolfe added.

This widespread shift in public opinion was suggested to the minister as the indicator of yet another tough election fight, whenever it is called.

"Can you think of any election when it wasn't a tough fight," Wolfe asked.

"Remember back in '69 there was a lot of talk about a possible minority government? This feeling was in the party too, but we went from 30 seats to 39. I think it was. It was quite an outstanding victory and I think that it developed from the fear that it would develop into a defeat or a minority government. It once again indicates the unpredictability of an election," Wolfe said.

The minster was asked if he was finding it difficult to catch up with the House after having sat out for three years. He's never sat in opposition. Did this absence cause any problems for him as a new minister?

ann landers

Dear Ann Landers: Please forgive me if I sound crude. I don't know quite how to say this but I will do my best.

I was married at 19 and shared 46 wonderful years with my husband before he died. After I'd been alone for eight years a fine widower, one year my senior, asked me to marry him.

Actually, I would love to be his wife but fear and shame are holding me back. When I look at myself unclothed before the full-length bathroom mirror, I realize I would not be much of a prize for any man.

What can I do or say? We are very congenial. The subject of sex has never come up. Thank you, and God bless. — 73.

Dear 73: If the gentleman was interested in a firm, young body, he probably could have found one.

I hope you will not keep him waiting another moment. say "YES" today.

The picture HE presents unclothed before a full-length bathroom mirror will not be very different from yours.

Dear Ann Landers: My husband and Mr. K have become great golf buddies. I never cared for Mr. K but his wife is even worse. We have had them to dinner and cards three times in the last six weeks and each time they become more unbearable.

They both drink too much, want to quit playing cards and dance. I'm beginning to suspect they are really after a "switchman's picnic."

I've had to take Mr. K's hands off my backside and put him in his place regularly. Mrs. K hangs all over my husband and has a way of snuggling up to him that infuriates me.

The last time they were here, I ended up fixing breakfast. (They stayed until six a.m.!) When they left I felt exhausted, insulted and used.

My husband agrees the Ks are not our type, says we don't have to entertain them any more, but last night Mrs. K called and invited us to THEIR place and he accepted! What should I do? — Middle muddle.

Dear Mid Mud: Make it clear to your husband that the next dinner with the Odd Couple will be the last.

Tell him if he wants to play golf with Mr. K, fine and dandy, but the foursome is boresome, as well as destructive to your marriage, and you want nothing more to do with them.

Dear Ann: Our 23-year-old son told us last night that he and his sweetheart want to be married in July, in our living room.

Ella is a lovely girl. She and Don have gone together for three years. The problem: We have never met Ella's parents. Don says they are "peculiar' and will probably not come to the wedding. We feel uncomfortable about the situation and don't know what to do. Will you please enlighten us? — Quandry.

Dear Q.: Phone Ella's parents and invite them to dinner or brunch. If they decline, you will at least know you did the right thing. By all means invite them to the wedding. Regardless. If they don't come, again you will be secure in the knowledge that you behaved with dignity and correctness — even if they didn't.

Bureau of Useless Information: Friday's answer — The Hollywood studio with stars Karloff, Rock Hudson and Audie Murphy was Universal and Rock Hudson's real name, according to my sources, was Roy Fitzgerald. To make you feel older, Hudson will celebrate his 51st birthday this year.

Today's question — Finally, you should be able to identify the movie studio if I simply mention Bing and Bob. If you need more help, Alan Ladd is all you get. Name that studio and also the studio whose emblem was a plane flying around a globe. The answers Tuesday.

Saturday highlights

1:00 p.m.—Another New York Philharmonic youth concert with Michael Tilson Thomas. This one's about variations—12.

3:00—PBS repeats Leonard Bernstein's Mass—9.

7:00—KING starts a Coral Jungle series about Australia's Great Barrier Reef—5.

8:00—The Boston orchestra, Thomas again, Stravinsky's Les Noces and Borodin's second symphony—9.

9:00—A CBC hour music special led by Tommy Common—2.

CABLE 10—1 p.m., Over-40 rugby, B.C. vs. Osaka, with a second game at 1 p.m. Sunday; 2:30, Tony Simnett and inflation; 3:30, German Diary; 4:00, Spanish dancing; 4:30, Shalom; 5:30, Outdoor Adventure.

Saturday sports

STANLEY CUP; At my deadline, odds were the next game would be Sunday. But check the sports pages to be sure.

Saturday sports

11:00 a.m.—Baseball, Cincinnati at Chicago—5.

12:30 noon—The Byron Nelson golf event—4.

1:00 p.m.—A U.S. mixed doubles bowling item—7.

2:00—The 1976 European Cup soccer final played Wednesday between West Ham and Anderlecht of Brussels—2,6.

4:00—Track and field, the U.K. vs. Canada—2, 6.

4:30—A Canadian skating fund-raiser—8.

Saturday movies

12:00 noon—Mad Monster Party (missable 1967 animation). No, Matilda, Philadelphia Flyers haven't won the Stanley Cup—2.

2:00 p.m.—Little Princess (1939 Shirley Temple)—11.

3:00—State Fair (1962 Pat Boone niceness). With the early Ann-Margret, which adds nothing—5.

3:30—The Blob (not much 1958 horror). Notable only because of the early Steve McQueen, who'd like to buy it and burn it—7.

8:00—Brenda Starr (new hotshot-girl-reporter), Jill St. John. Might be amusing if played for laughs—4.

9:00—Joe Kidd (1972 Clint Eastwood western violence). As long as Eastwood makes films, don't tell me people don't dig violence—5.

9:00—Bedazzled (so-so 1968 seven-wishes comedy), Raquel Welch. Well, that's two—6.

9:00—The Gemini Man (new ABC think-tank troubleshooter pilot), Ben Murphy. A regular next fall; rerun on Channel 6 at 11:20 p.m.—8.

• 9:00—The Crowd (1928 King Vidor faceless-man classic). As good as today's 18 other movies put together—9.

9:30—Kiss Me, Kill Me (new private eyes pilot), Stella Stevens, Michael Anderson, Claude Akins. Do I get a choice?—4.

10:00—Silent Gun (routine 1969 Lloyd Bridges western)—12.

11:00—Coogan's Bluff (above-par 1968 Clint Eastwood). With Susan Clark in the first McCloud pilot; not bad at all—7.

11:00—Night of the Sorcerers (1970 horror hopelessness). Matilda says a witch on a broomstick is a flying sorcerer—11.

11:30—The Stripper (fairly good 1963 romantic drama), Joanne Woodward, Richard Beymer. The producers planned this for Marilyn Monroe, who would have been great in it—12.

11:45—The Wheeler Dealers (mostly poor 1963 business romance). Phil Harris steals it from stars Lee Remick and James Garner—4.

12:00—Little Murders (little-interest 1971 New York thing), Elliott Gould, Donald Sutherland. A financial flop—8.

1:00 a.m.—Chato's Land (ultra-violent 1972 western), Charles Bronson, Palance, Basehart. Matilda says Charo's land is all earthquakes—5.

1:20—My Father's House (stodgy 1974 generation-gap), Robert Preston, Cliff Robertson. Don't mansion it—6.

2:20—Svengali (entertaining 1955 Donald Wolfit meets Hildegarde Knef). Did he find his Trilby on Blueberry Hillby?—8.

Saturday radio

4:00 p.m.—Juliana Markova joins the Boston orchestra for the second Chopin concerto. Saturday is normally a good day for radio highlights but this is the only one reported—CBU (690).

THE ACES® ON BRIDGE

by IRA G. CORN JR.
TEAM CAPTAIN

As world travelers already know, the shortest distance between two points is not always a straight line. And in the play of a bridge hand, what may seem like the surest and shortest way might add a few miles to the post mortem.

West led the singleton club and declarer won the ace. Dummy's two high trumps were cashed and a losing diamond was discarded on the club king. Unfortunately, West ruffed and declarer was left with three more red suit losers and down one.

South's plan was certainly a direct one and had trumps split 2-2, it would have succeeded. Unlucky, or should declarer have found the winning play?

Natually declarer might have found an even trump break and in this he was unlucky. However, there was a sure way to make the hand and West's lead should have alerted him to the danger.

North had bid clubs and West's lead of the club deuce should have raised an eyebrow. Why would West lead fourth best of a suit held by dummy? He who asks a question usually gets an answer and the possibilities of a singleton lead become clear. So what can declarer do to guard against the worst breaks? He can count his winners and make sure he counts enough to make his contract.

South has seven trump winners and two aces for nine tricks. The club king looks like a tenth, but not if West has led a singleton and has three trumps. Where else can a sure trick be developed? A diamond ruff in dummy before trumps are drawn.

After winning the club ace, declarer plays a low diamond and the game is scored. If the defense leads a trump to stop the ruffs (best), declarer wins in dummy, cashes the diamond ace and ruffs a diamond in dummy.

Ten tricks instead of nine with the aid of a little detective work and some simple arithmetic.

8 CARDS OF THANKS

We wish to thank all our relatives, friends and neighbours, for their many acts of kindness and expressions of sympathy during the recent loss of our wife and mother, Gwen Kraeling. — Jack Kraeling, Paul and John.

There is some one who misses you sadly,

And finds the time long
since you went,

There is some one who thinks
of you always,

And tries to be brave
and content.

Gone is the face we loved
so dear,

Silent the voice we loved
'Tis sad, but true,
we wonder why,

The best are always
the first to die.

There is a link death cannot sever,

Love and remembrance
last forever.

9 IN MEMORIAM

THEY SHALL GROW NOT OLD, AS WE WHO ARE LEFT GROW OLD. AGE SHALL NOT WEARY THEM, NOR THE YEARS CONDEMN. AT THE GOING DOWN OF THE SUN, AND IN THE MORNING, WE WILL REMEMBER THEM.
WITH GRATITUDE, SANDS.

Off and again, a leaf blown by the wind

Falls on the broad ocean

'Tis never lost; where'er it fate may blow,

The imprint of its settling's left behind.

And so with every life,
whate'er its kind,

It shapes itself a place,
'tis destined so,

If hence in peace or turmoil
it should go,

Its influence ever lives,
as 'twas designed.

There is some one who misses you sadly,

And finds the time long
since you went,

There is some one who thinks
of you always,

And tries to be brave
and content.

Gone is the face we loved
so dear,

Silent the voice we loved
to hear;

'Tis sad, but true,
we wonder why,

The best are always
the first to die.

Will Mike Swannell lop off the bunny rabbit's ears with the router?

No, this isn't a machine for de-earing rabbits! It's called a "router" and has a bit in it like a drill, which can be moved backwards and forwards, raised and lowered, to "rout out" the parts of a curved metal plate which you don't want to print.

The router can be used for simple colour ads, for example. You might have a purple bunny rabbit in an ad on which everything else is printed in black—the rules, the heading, the type. Or, perhaps you decide you'd like the prices purple too. Mike would rout the rabbit and the prices off the black plate entirely, and then he'd rout everything but the prices and the rabbit off the purple plate.

And when he does that, he'll be very careful not to lop off the bunny's ears! Mike began apprenticing as a stereotyper when he was sixteen years old, so he's had lots of practice!

Police search office of Toronto editor

TORONTO (CP) — Peter Worthington, executive editor of The Sun, refused Friday to surrender a copy of a controversial letter to four RCMP officers, sent from Ottawa to search his office.

But after a 4½-hour search, the officers found the letter and left without laying any charges.

The Sun used the letter as the basis of a copyright story published Wednesday. The story alleged that the RCMP stopped security screening of separatists in the federal civil service — required by government guidelines — because of interference from Prime Minister Trudeau.

Worthington said the RCMP arrived at his office about 9 a.m. Friday and began the search after he told them he would not surrender the letter.

He said the officers searched books and opened his morning mail, but did not extend the search to other areas of the building.

When he refused to hand over the copy, Worthington said the officers told him he could be charged under the Official Secret's Act.

The act, written in the First World War language, refers mostly to maps of earthworks and trenches or military installations. It contains one

'Out to destroy my reputation'

OTTAWA (UPI)— Prime Minister Trudeau says someone is out to destroy his reputation, and he is determined to find out who it is.

The Toronto Sun in an editorial alleged Thursday that Trudeau had ordered federal police to stop running security checks on Quebec separatists in the federal civil service. The editorial was based on a letter between two of Canada's top security officials.

Trudeau told the House of Commons Friday "The editorial in the Sun . . . is obviously scurrilous, inaccurate and venomous." He said it was "designed to destroy my reputation and credibility."

He said the letter between Gen. Michael Dare, head of the RCMP security service, and Robin Bourne, head of the federal security advisory committee, should not have been leaked to the press.

"I am obviously still distressed that a letter between the highest security officer and the second highest should be leaked that way."

When told by the opposition that the offices of the Sun had been raided, Trudeau exclaimed "I cannot believe my ears."

By HUBERT BEYER

Implementation of emergency plans began Friday at both major Victoria hospitals in preparation for a strike which may hit either or both on Monday.

All elective surgery has been cancelled at both Victoria General and Royal Jubilee hospitals.

Urgent admissions are being deferred until further notice.

Preparations are underway for the evacuation of patients who may be safely transferred to levels of care other than acute.

The emergency measures went into effect shortly after the Hospital Employees Union served strike notice on both hospitals.

It was learned that Victoria General may be struck first, rather than the Royal Jubilee which was believed to be the union's initial target.

This last-minute change in strategy was attributed to a more decisive vote in favor of strike action by Victoria General employees.

Meanwhile, hospital officials were in an all-day huddle Friday with the Labor Relations Board to determine how many employees must remain on the job if a strike occurs and how many beds they must maintain.

The board's decision wasn't expected to be known until sometime this morning.

It was also learned Friday that Gorge Road Hospital is next on the list of the union's targets. A strike vote is to be held in the near future.

A union official said Friday while Victoria General may be the initial target for strike action, the strategy may even-

Stunning exit

President Ford, who has had his share of bumps and stumbles over the years, bangs his head against helicopter door as he boards aircraft on White House grounds. Ford left Washington on Friday for campaign swing through Nebraska.

OTTAWA (CP) — Irritated members of Parliament decided Friday to call one-time member Auguste Choquette on the carpet for saying half of them take bribes

Choquette, Liberal member for Lotbiniere from 1963 to 1968, was defending a lawyer accused of bribing an immigration officer when he said in court in Montreal Thursday:

"If everybody who had ever taken or given $600 or $700 bribes in their life were arrested, 50 per cent of the MPs would no longer be sitting. I know it because I was an MP for five years."

In Montreal, Choquette said Friday he would "gladly" appear voluntarily before a Commons committee to explain the allegations.

The Commons, in rare agreement, passed a motion by Walter Baker (PC—Grenville-Carleton) to refer the allegation to the House committee on privileges and elections.

A steering committee meeting rapidly agreed to have its clerk check the transcript of the trial to see whether the comments, reported in newspapers, could be verified.

A letter would be sent to the court reporter so he could be called to verify the remarks if necessary.

Choquette would not be called before the committee until the case has been heard — a courtesy to the court.

"I would appear before the committee with the greatest of pleasure," the former Liberal MP said in a telephone interview Friday.

"I also want to say that the whole situation is so widespread that there is really no need for overdramatization of the facts.

"I can't comment further on this until I see transcripts or hear tape recordings of what exactly was said."

Commons Speaker James Jerome said he didn't have the slightest doubt that a valid question of privilege had been raised by Baker.

Liberal, New Democrat and Social Credit spokesmen agreed.

In Quebec City, the provincial national assembly demanded a retraction from Choquette.

Drink age going up

REGINA (CP) — The Saskatchewan legislature gave final approval Friday to a bill that will raise the minimum legal drinking age to 19 from 18.

A last-minute amendment changed the effective date of the bill to Sept. 1, 1976.

Persons who become 18 before Sept. 1 will be allowed to continue drinking legally, but those turning 18 Sept. 1 or later will have to wait until their 19th birthday for a legal drink.

Enough oil under B.C. –Bennett

VANCOUVER (CP) — Premier Bennett said Friday that British Columbia could become self-sufficient in oil if the federal government allows the price to rise to world levels.

Bennett told a news conference that allowing the price of level of $13.50 a barrel from $8 would encourage exploration in B.C. (See also Page 6)

"We're not self-sufficient but we could be if there was an encouragement to find more oil," he said. "All of our people in the department suggest it's there but has to be sought and found."

Bennett said B.C. has asked the federal government to eliminate part or all of a federal 10-cent tax at the pump to soften pending increases.

H.R. left $23 million

VANCOUVER (CP) — The late H. R. MacMillan, former chairman of MacMillan-Bloedel Ltd., left an estate with a gross value of $23.6 million, his will shows. He died Feb. 9 at 90.

Filed for probate in Vancouver, the will, which is dated July 27, 1973, lists beneficiaries including his two daughters, nine grandchildren, Oxford and Cambridge universities, the Vancouver Art Gallery, his secretary and his gardener.

The main beneficiaries are MacMillan's two daughters, Edna Marion Lecky and Gertrude Jean Southam, with $250,000.

The daughters also receive all household furnishings and first choice of all paintings in MacMillan's collection.

After the daughters have made their selection of paintings, the will states, the remaining paintings will go to the Vancouver Art Gallery.

MacMillan's son-in-law, Gordon Southam, was left the sum of $50,000, and each of his surviving grandchildren got $50,000.

MacMillan left $750-a-month for life to Dorothy Edith Dee, his secretary, and $500 each to 17 different public libraries, mostly on Vancouver Island.

1,000 coffins said ordered in quake city

VENICE (AP) — Italian national police announced figures Friday that more than double the death toll from northeastern Italy's disastrous earthquake—from fewer than 300 to 628.

There were unconfirmed reports of more than 1,000 dead and police put the number of injured at about 2,000. Officials said more than 110,000 were left homeless.

Rescue workers, including Canadian and U.S. military medics, dug through the rubble of northeast Italian towns and villages, searching for bodies.

"We were finding bodies in every ruin," said a police official in charge of rescue operations after Thursday's quake. "We will not know the total until we get to the basements."

The quake demolished or severely damaged more than a score of towns in the Alpine foothills 40 miles northeast of Venice. The villages—strung out in a valley—were hit by aftershocks Friday afternoon. The tremors caused no serious damage.

Tens of thousands—fearing more tremors—spent the night in tents, in their cars and under makeshift shelters in the open. Late evening rainstorms increased their misery.

The state radio reported before midnight Friday night that the death toll might exceed 1,000, but there was no official confirmation. There are reports in Udine—the provincial capital in the centre of the worst-hit area—that 1,000 coffins have been ordered.

Aid arrived from throughout Italy and from abroad. Two hundred Canadian troops were rushed to the area from

Former corrections branch employee:

Pride-stripped cons fail outside

Jail officials commit 'criminal acts that are not prosecuted'

By ELEANOR BOYLE
Colonist Reporter

It wasn't the first time Steve Fader refused the advice of a government official.

This time a corrections branch authority, blowing ink dry on a humanistic, philosophical treatise about prisoners' rights, told Fader "not to be so sensitive" that inmates were stuffed into concrete cubicles, relieving themselves in open buckets.

Now Fader, an anthropologist and former corrections branch employee has himself gathered information he says proves that corrections officials commit criminal acts every day treating prisoners.

Fader's refusal to keep quiet isn't landing him in the same trouble that outspokenness did in his Berkeley, Calif., radical days.

Sanctioned to speak Friday to the Second Canadian Conference of Applied Criminology, he shared time on an agenda with officials such as B.C. police commissioner Dr. John Hogarth, who gave the conference's opening address Wednesday.

The 28-year-old Victoria-area resident researched prison conditions during 22 months when he was among few in B.C. with a licence to see both sides of the incarceration system.

Information officer for the government branch which oversees such areas of recent unrest as Oakalla Prison, Fader talked to prisoners, talked to guards and talked to officials in his term that ended six weeks ago.

His position as editor of the B.C. Corrections Branch Quarterly got him an entree as did his casual looks and frequent failure to show up on time for interviews with jail officials well-briefed on what he should not see.

He says he finally saw most of it.

He says top-level corrections authorities had better look, too, because violence and hostage-taking will continue as long as human beings are submitted to conditions which foster violence.

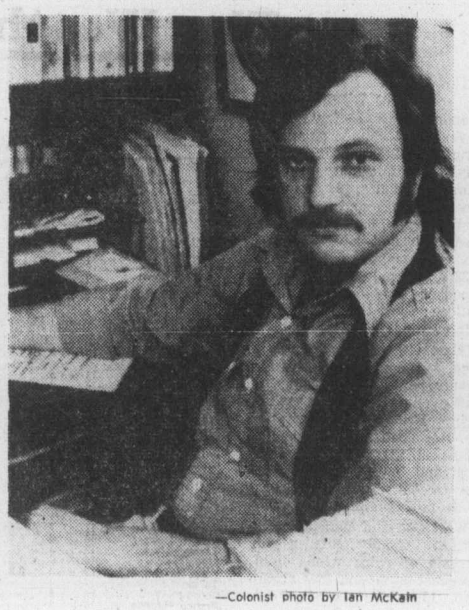

Not a "bleeding heart" with a stereotyped image of oppressed prisoners, Fader cites bad working conditions for prison staff members whom, he agrees with one inmate, "are doing life bits at 40 hours a week."

Prison staff in Oakalla's remand section put up with skimpy toilet facilities and a staff lounge Fader said "violates minimum health department standards as does the entire Oakalla kitchen complex."

As far as he could tell, "there are no clear-cut lines between inmates and guards."

With research concentrating on prisoners' treatment how-

phrase about "any other confidential information."

Worthington said he refused to give them the copy because it had come to him secretly.

"Once you start, where do you stop?" he asked. "You don't mix the security area with newspapers."

"I still haven't been charged," he said after the officers left.

Worthington said he received the photostat copy of the letter in the mail from an anonymous source.

He said the letter, marked confidential, was sent in February by Gen. Michael Dare, director-general of the RCMP's security service, to Robin Bourne, chairman of the government's security advisory committee.

The story quoted the letter as stating:

"The prime minister had issued certain guidelines restricting the security services' inquiries with regard to the Parti Quebecois."

Worthington said the search was conducted in a friendly manner.

He said he believed the RCMP had to go through the motioins of plugging information leaks, but added he wished they were as deligent in tracking down spies as they were in searching his office.

After The Sun published the story Wednesday, Solicitor-General Warren Allmand, whose office is in charge of the RCMP, said Gen. Dare had confused a decision by the cabinet intelligence and security committee.

He said the committee had not given guides to drop security screening of terrorists and Trudeau had never been involved.

Outside the Commons, Allmand said Friday he knew nothing of the raid in advance because the RCMP does not clear such actions with him.

However, Allmand said he had called for an investigation into the theft or release of the letter because "there certainly appears to be something illegal."

Supt. John Bentham, media liaison officer for the RCMP, said Friday he was not going to comment or confirm any RCMP investigative practices "in this or any other practice."

tually switch to rotating strikes.

"We may hit the Victoria General for three days, then Royal Jubilee, then the Gorge (if a vote was in favor of strike action at that hospital)," said Jack Gerow, secretary-manager of the Hospital Employees Union.

Gerow said 75.4 per cent of those attending Thursday night's and Friday morning's meetings of the union had voted in favor of strike action.

The strike vote at Royal Jubilee was 63.4 per cent in favor.

He wouldn't say how many members cast ballots, but added that "both meetings had fantastic turnouts."

After looking at the results of the strike vote, Gerow said, Victoria General was being considered as the union's first target Monday.

Gerow said the union didn't cause the confrontation and would still rather not strike, but management was determined not to back down.

The issue is over recommendations of industrial inquiry commissioner Bert Blair who had recommended a one-year settlement.

The recommendation was accepted by the union, but rejected by the Health Labor Relations Association, the hospitals' bargaining unit, on grounds it would increase costs by more than 15 per cent.

The union served strike notice on the Royal Jubilee at 12:50 p.m. Friday. Victoria General was served strike notice at 11:40 a.m.

The union will be in a position to legally strike after 72 hours, provided the Labor Relations Board has designated emergency positions and beds.

Between the two hospitals, the number of positions which must be maintained to "prevent immediate and serious danger to life, health or safety" is expected to be about 60 or 70.

C. A. Brown, administrator of the Eric Martin Institute and assistant administrator of the Royal Jubilee, said the hospital would do its utmost to ensure adequate services for its patients.

He said all arrangements in case of a strike would be coordinated with Victoria General Hospital.

James Fair, Victoria General administrator, pointed out that not all employees belonged to the Hospital Employees Union.

Operating engineers and x-ray technicians, he said, belonged to other unions and wouldn't be affected by any strike.

Meanwhile, the strike at Vancouver General Hospital is continuing and may soon spread to other hospitals.

Employees at Burnaby General Hospital voted 84.4 per cent in favor of strike action Friday and will be in a position to legally strike the hospital Monday.

There were contradictions Friday as to the effects of the Vancouver strike on hospital patients.

Dr. William Ibbott, president of the B.C. Medical Association, said the strike was resulting in patient suffering and causing bedlam.

Dr. Chaplin Key, executive director of Vancouver General Hospital, on the other hand, said that "essentially the quality of patient care was good."

Many staff members at VGH said Friday they had not been told of contingency plans and were waiting day by day.

VGH admitting staff, however, phoned more than 20 persons slated for surgery Monday and told them not to come in Sunday as planned.

More surgery cases may be cancelled today, staff members said.

Some employees who spoke to Colonist reporters at the hospital appeared to believe the hospital would not be struck, or that any strike would not significantly affect them.

B.C. Rail down by 30 per cent

VANCOUVER (CP) — A company spokesman said Friday that the B.C. Rail is running at about 70-per-cent efficiency because of a work-to-rule campaign by the United Transportation Union. Hugh Armstrong said most of the problems are at Prince George, where about 14,000 tons of southbound freight is backed up in the yard area, hindering the flow of goods from the north.

a North Atlantic Treaty Organization base in West Germany. The U.S. military flew in medicine and water from the U.S. Army base at Vicenza and supplied 10 medics.

President Giovanni Leone—sometimes sobbing emotionally—toured the quake area for an hour by helicopter, then returned to Rome.

The quake was felt in half of Italy and at least eight other countries—including Yugoslavia, Austria, Czechoslovakia, West Germany, Switzerland, Belgium, the Netherlands and western Poland.

There were no reports of major damage outside Italy and Yugoslavia.

In Venice, only a few chimneys were knocked down. Engineers checked key buildings in the canal city and reported no damage to foundations.

In western Italy, the famous Leaning Tower of Pisa was shaken but suffered no damage and its tilt of 17 feet off-centre remained unchanged, officials said.

"We had just turned on the television set after dinner when I felt a slight jolt," a survivor said in Buia, a town of 8,000 largely in ruins.

"Then the roof caved in on my mother. She died instantly. I found myself in the garden without knowing how."

The quake took its heaviest toll in Maiano where 58 persons lost their lives.

Among the victims was a young girl crushed when the village church's Renaissance bell tower fell.

"A cloud of dust covered everything and people were screaming and running," said Bruna Montanori, 58, who watched from a nearby balcony as the tower collapsed. "I'll never forget the sight."

The shock collapsed bridges, knocked out telephone communications and railway transport to the northeast.

The Italian government met in an emergency session for urgent relief measures. President Giovanni Leone flew to the quake zone to comfort the survivors.

In the small Yugoslaw town of Tolmin, about 2,000 residents camped out after their homes were destroyed by the earthquake.

The quake centre is about 36 miles east of the site of one of modern Italy's worst tragedies, the Vaimont Dam collapse which took nearly 2,000 lives in 1963.

Earth tremors are rare in northern Italy and occur more frequently in the central and southern sectors of the country. An earthquake in Sicily eight years ago killed 300—and led to one of Italy's biggest scandals. Survivors still are sheltered in makeshift barracks amid reports that millions of dollars earmarked for housing have been spent elsewhere.

In 1908, Italy's worst earthquake killed an estimated 123,000 people in Sicily.

Pride-stripped cons fail outside

ever, he is saying prisoners are forced to violence by conditions which contravene the Canadian Bill of Rights and United Nations minimum standards for the treatment of prisoners.

"I'm saying the treatment of untried prisoners, juveniles, sexual offenders, as well as just general prison conditions, constitute criminal acts that are not prosecuted," he said in a pre-conference interview.

The accusing finger doesn't stop at large institutions.

He cites Victoria's Juvenile Detention Home cells as closets of "sensory deprivation," and says "the use of the cells at the Victoria Juvenile Detention Home does not befit any human beings, least of all the troubled young people of Canada."

Detailed descriptions of Oakalla's isolation "steel tiger cages" are part of the paper.

Already copyrighted, the 13-page brief has been accepted by a criminology journal backed mainly by the University of Ottawa, University of Montreal and England's Cambridge University.

Journal and conference official Yvon Dandurand confirmed Crime et-and Justice's pending use of the article in a phone interview with the Colonist from Ottawa.

Fader knows people may find it hard to believe officials commit outright crimes in the corrections system.

"In a lot of cases it's not bad intent," he said. "They just don't know how to move the massive machine of government."

That is guards and wardens on one level.

Those on another level who wield power don't even go into the prisons often, he said, so don't see human faces on walls of isolation cells where Fader saw inmates locked a month after similar cells at the B.C. Penitentiary were ruled illegal by the B.C. Supreme Court.

Describing the "barn" isolation unit, he said: "With neither ventilation or natural light, walls smeared with faeces, and only a bucket for elimination, the prisoner in the barn suffers punishment completely prohibited by law."

Corrections authorities who don't often tour areas like the barn rely on information that is largely "folklore by the time it reaches them, if it reaches their Victoria offices at all," Fader said.

Seven years of university education including two at the University of Victoria didn't put Fader on idealism street where a soft approach is considered every answer.

There are people who must be locked up, he believes.

But he contends we shouldn't strip them of the pride they need to ever function normally again.

West-wing Oakalla houses prisoners two to a bathroom-sized cell, he states, "causing such claustrophobic mental anguish that some individuals request isolation."

That occurs at the safe time the United Nations rules say "untried prisoners (such as West-wing's) shall sleep singly in separate rooms," he said.

Sexual offenders at Oakalla are relegated to a "recreation" area that is a mere thin walkway fronting their cells.

Year after year of this treatment is B.C.'s rehabilitation method for these possibly seriously ill people "who in time will be suddenly released in the community and expected to act responsibly," he said.

It doesn't make a lot of sense, he said.

Its perpetuation is typical, though, in a system with so little communication — with what he terms "incarcerated information" as well as incarcerated people.

Public information and even that handed to senior administrators is "laundered" to present a happy picture of progressive rehabilitation programs, he said.

Wilderness outings for both juveniles and adults are a prime example, he said, often stressed to the public as part of a program that may only use them to a limited extent.

A much larger part of inmates' time is spent staring at close concrete walls that chip away at the human spirit, he said, causing the "riots which serve as much as cathartic entertainment as protest."

Further violent action will only be natural, he said, with society's continued inaction.

Your Good Health

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Several months ago I gave birth to my first-born. My husbnad and I were quite anxious to resume our sex life. It is, however, so painful for me that I would rather do without.

How long after a woman has a baby does she return to "normal" sexually? Or is it possible that I was stitched up too much? — M.S.

The post-partum examination is usually done at from four to six weeks, at which time the uterus and other structures have returned to normal and sutured areas have healed. Most obstetricians suggest abstinence for this interval.

You probably have had your check-up by now. But since you continue to have so much pain you should be checked to rule out some local problem. Sometimes there is a psychological factor involved in sex difficulties after pregnancy.

I suggest you return to your obstetrician, who encounters these matters daily. The need for surgical correction is rather rare in these cases.

Assaulting RCMP officer nets 60-day jail term

NANAIMO — A Nanaimo man, David Allen Timothy, 23, of 561 Drake St., Friday was sentenced to 60 days in jail after earlier being found guilty of assaulting a police officer.

Timothy was charged after an incident at the Balmoral Hotel on Haliburton Street Feb. 3. The court was told that RCMP corporal Leo Langlois, was in the process of arresting a man when he was attacked by a group of five or six other persons. He was knocked to the ground and, while on the ground, was kicked in the face by Timothy. Prosecutor Jack Gibson told the court that when "Langlois regained his feet, he was struck twice more by Timothy, also in the face."

Judge Donald Ward told Timothy that he felt constrained by the limitations imposed on him by the fact that the crown had decided to proceed with the charges by way of summary conviction which carries a maximum six month jail term. The judge said he would have preferred the charge to have gone by way of indictment which carries a heavier penalty.

"The courts must protect the police, just as the police are charged with protecting the public," the judge said. "I have to impose a sentence that will be meaningful. You must realize that when you are attacking the police, you are attacking all of society. You should have been helping him, instead."

He ordered Timothy to serve his term on Saturdays and Sunday in the Nanaimo RCMP lockup. He also placed the man on probation for one year.

Bandshell dream reality soon?

COMOX—Construction of a bandshell in Marina Park may, after all, become reality this year.

This announcement at this week's council meeting came as sweet music to the ears of Mayor Richard Merrick, who has long dreamed of a bandshell being erected in the popular downtown location.

Three weeks ago it appeared the dream was about to become reality with the announcement that the Comox Legion branch was volunteering the services of its 900 members to work on a community project.

Merrick suggested the Legionnaires build the bandshell with materials supplied by the town.

He was quickly brought down to earth, however, when later Ald. George Piercy told him that there was not enough money to build the structure.

However, Ald. Dennis Coleman, a member of the Courtenay Youth Music Society, has stepped into the breach and has told council that there is a strong possibility a member of the society will provide, free of charge, plans for the proposed structure.

This would reduce considerably the amount needed to finance the project, and the mayor is once again hoping that the sweet and mellow sounds of the CYMS and the Quadra Sea Cadet bands will be heard this year in the picturesque Marina Park here.

Suspension of licence for life proposed

NANAIMO—Coroner C. F. Newcombe said Thursday he will recommend to the attorney-general's department that the driving privileges of a 25-year-old Delta man involved in a fatal motor vehicle accident be suspended for life.

Newcombe made the statement after a corooner's jury blamed Vernon Mann for the death April 11 of Frank Gleadow, 56, of Victoria.

The inquest was told a pick-up truck driven by Mann collided with Gleadow's car about five miles south of Nanaimo. Gleadow died of a ruptured heart and massive bleeding.

Police testified Mann had a blood-alcohol level of .20 shortly after the accident. The legal level of impairment is .08.

Mann and a passenger in the car said they couldn't remember any details of the accident.

Nanaimo strike

Victoria talks Tuesday

NANAIMO — A new round of negotiations in the current civic-school district strike-lockout here began Friday afternoon, but lasted less than two hours.

The new talks were called for at a public meeting Thursday night, when about 400 persons in attendance voted nearly unanimously to tell both sides in the dispute that new talks aimed at settling the five-week old dispute must begin at once.

Nick Meiras, president of Local 606 of Canadian Union of Public Employees, said Friday afternoon that the talks have now adjourned until Tuesday morning when union and Mid-Island Public Employers Association will meet with provincial Labor Minister Allan Williams in Victoria.

The minister requested the meeting earlier this week, after talks broke down for the second time since the strike began.

Mediator Clark Gilmour suggested that an industrial inquiry commissioner be appointed to study the position of the two sides and recommend terms of settlement.

Although agreed to by the union, MIPEA officials rejected the suggestion, saying that the dispute is local in nature and would be best settled locally.

Meiras indicated that no progress was made during the brief Friday afternoon session.

When talks resume with the minister Tuesday, the strike will be in it's sixth week.

Section of beach on Gallagher property near Crofton

Scenic Smith Bay property may be lost to developers

CROFTON — The chance of preserving a 27-acre parcel of waterfront property in this community as a public park is becoming more remote, as the owner applies to have it removed from the Agricultural Land Reserve, so that it can be subdivided.

The North Cowichan municipal council supported the application submitted by the owner, Ray Gallagher of Crofton, to have the property on Smith Bay excluded from the reserve because it was not desirable farm land.

Gallagher, who only wants 27 acres of his 62-acre farm removed from the reserve, would rather see the waterfront property turned into a park, than take the financially more lucrative route of sub-dividing it into waterfront lots.

But attempts by the municipal and regional board officials to have it purchased by the provincial government as a park area have been unsuccessful.

In late April, regional board chairman Pat Clements asked the government to sell some of its greenbelt land in the Cowichan Valley to purchase the more desirable Crofton property, but he hasn't received a reply as yet.

Various local groups, including the North Cowichan recreation commission, the Crofton Community Association and the Cowichan Valley Natural History Society, are also supporting the retention of the property in its natural state.

Before the property can be removed from the Agricultural Land Reserve, Gallagher's application must also be approved by the regional board and the Agricultural Land Commission.

Although Gallagher would like to see his property preserved in its natural state, he had stressed he would not be willing to give the land away to the provincial government, and would expect a reasonable market price for it.

The market price has been estimated at more than $200,000.

$20,000 in debts

Members vote car co-op out of action

By JOHN HENDERSON
Colonist Correspondent

PORT ALBERNI — By an overwhelming majority, 213 members of the Alpine Car Co-Op this week voted the four-year-old operation into voluntary liquidation — as recommended by its executive.

The final vote on a written ballot was 197 to 16 in favour of the recommendation. Total membership in the Co-op was in excess of 1,100.

The Co-op has been in jeopardy since February, as the executive made efforts to get the operation back on a firm financial footing.

At a meeting in March, the membership had directed the executive to attempt to recoup the mounting debt of the Co-op by reducing the service to gasoline sales only and reducing the annual dues.

An all-out campaign to collect the reduced dues of $20 from a minimum of 950 members in order to reinstate the reduced operation failed however. Only 650 members paid up.

President of the Co-op, Rod Petersen, told the meeting that this failure was the final blow to the future of the Co-op. It had caused the executive to call the special meeting and recommend liquidation.

Petersen reviewed the reasons for the failure of the Co-op, the first known one of its kind in B.C.

He listed the principal reason as the failure of the membership over the past three years to maintain their annual dues, which were intended to make up the difference in the costs of operation and a no-profit income policy.

Inflationary costs in parts and labor had complicated the picture, and the failure of the service end of the operation to pay its way through non-use had also contributed, he said.

Rod Beavan, lawyer for the Co-op, explained the current financial picture to the meeting.

He said the operation was currently $20,000 in debt, with $80 a day being added to the figure while it remained in operative. $51,000 was still due on the original mortgage for the Co-op's property, and $4,000 in a bank chattel mortgage.

The Co-op still had sufficient assets, however, to pay off creditors, and still provide a fair return on the initial $90 per share paid by each member as an initiation fee.

Petersen assured the meeting that each member who had paid the annual fee of $20 this year would have his money returned to him as soon as liquidation procedures were initiated.

Beavan was chosen to carry out the liquidation.

Rezoning bylaw killed by protest

COMOX — A rezoning bylaw, already given first and second reading, was defeated on third reading Monday by council.

The bylaw covered rezoning from Residential —1 to Residential Multiple —1 to permit construction of 18 townhouses on Gull Avenue.

Area residents voiced strong opposition to the proposal at the recent public hearing claiming that when they purchased homes they were not told about the proposed townhouses.

They said they would like the area to stay single family and expressed concern over a low water problem in the area. Residents felt that adding townhouses would compound this problem and create serious lack of water for firefighting.

They also stressed the traffic problem which would ensue as a result of such development.

Ald. George Piercy noted that the proposed development is not near transportation routes — one of the guidelines for such development in the community development plan now being considered by council.

Ald. Crispin Morris failed to see the point of erecting multiple family housing in the area while Ald. Ronald Ellis said he had no objection to the proposal.

The housing would be developed on 1.4 acres of land, Mayor Merrick said as he observed that the 18 units would be far in excess of the seven units an acre prescribed in the town plan.

Horses sale soon

The saga of the starving horses seized by the SPCA near Nanaimo is nearing an end.

SPCA spokesman Norman Stephen told the Colonist Friday seven of the eight horses cared for by the society for the last three weeks will be sold privately.

One is in bad condition and will not be sold, he said.

It is hoped the animal will not have to be destroyed, he said, a veterinarian will check it today.

Stephen had asked the public for donations over the past week when he found maintenance and possible legal fees would be more than the society could pay.

It has now been decided no charges will be laid.

The animals were seized from a farm and were believed to be the property of an unidentified Nanaimo woman.

Father, son head recreation

CAMPBELL RIVER — A fatheh-son team now heads recreation departments here and in Comox.

Arnie Linder, newly appointed recreation director in Campbell River, is the son of Bert Linder, the Comox recreation director.

The younger Linder has been employed in the recreation field in Calgary and Delta.

Board asked to operate Valley's animal shelter

By BILL SMITH
Colonist Correspondent

COMOX — The Comox-Strathcona Region Board has been asked by Comox and Courtenay councils to assume as a function the operation of an animal shelter.

The move is seen as the first step in alleviating the serious dog problem which exists in the two municipalities and surrounding areas.

The shelter, which may be built on land which, until the end of the month will house the Comox dump, would have a permanent staff of three and one part-time employee for weekend and emergency duties.

It would cost $53,553 to operate the shelter for 1976-77, a budget summary presented to council this week showed.

For the past seven years the Comox Valley Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals has been functioning within the School District 71 boundaries, but demands for services have increased to the point where construction of a shelter must be seriously considered, Katherine Capes, secretary of the local society said.

The existing pound facility operated by the city of Courtenay, which serves Courtenay and Comox, is, to say the least, inadequate, she said, "and we feel it is our duty to offer something infinitely better."

The society proposes Cumberland, Comox, Courtenay and regional district Areas A, B, and C enter into contract negotiations with the local branch to enable construction of a modern, efficient pound-shelter complex.

The building would include a 16-run animal shelter for dogs as well as an indoor cage facility for cats and a small holding facility for horses.

Around-the-clock emergency service would be available for injured animals with the SPCA being responsible for all veterinary costs.

Enforcement of municipal licensing regulations would be undertaken as well as the district pound act and the domestic animal protection act, as far as it is within powers of the society.

The shelter staff would be responsible for collecting animals killed on local roads and the investigation of reports of cruelty to animals.

The shelter would provide a service for adoption of unwanted animals, humane disposal of unsaleable dogs and cats and staff would conduct daily patrols of dog problem areas and collect stray animals.

Money derived from sale of licences would be handed over to the municipalities involved with money from sale of animals retained by the society.

Salaries, the proposed budget shows, would account for $37,513 with shelter expenses totalling $11,000. Vehicle expenses for the first year including non-capital outlay is estimated at $6,640.

Contracts signed with municipalities and electoral areas would be subject to annual negotiation.

Mayor Richard Merrick took issue with the staff proposed. He felt it was "pretty big" and wondered, "aren't they asking a bit too much?"

Ald. Crispin Morris pointed out, however, that the area being served was a "large chunk of real estate" and "the volunteer members of the society are going to be kept pretty busy. He felt the budget was realistic and suggested "it's been cut to the bone."

The pound-shelter structure would house an isolation kennel ward, examination and treatment room, facilities for keeping cats, additional and separate facilities for puppies and a lethal room.

Schedule reduced

DUNCAN — Kindergartens in School District 65 reopened Friday on a reduced schedule for the first time since April 21, when 85 janitors, maintenance staff and bus drivers went on strike.

A spokesman for the school board said the 490 children will be attending the eight kindergartens for one and a half hours a day instead of their usual four hours.

Pupils who attended the morning session before the strike, will be attending from 9 to 10:30 a.m., while afternoon pupils will be attending from 11-12:30 a.m.

Other schools in the district, except the Charles Hoey school for the mentally handicapped, which remains closed.

Nanaimo police report

Nearly double—key words

NANAIMO—Nearly double, were the key words in a statement released this week by RCMP here with regard to traffic statistics in Nanaimo last month.

Cpl. Luke Mulder, head of the traffic section, released figures showing that there were three persons killed in traffic last month compared to only one in April, 1975, an increase of 300 per cent.

The number of impaired drivers nearly doubled to 50 charges from last year's total for the month of 26.

Also nearly doubling is the number of people killed in traffic in the city this year. So far, there have been nine compared to five at the same time in 1975.

Also last month there were 40 persons injured in accidents, compared to 33 last year in April and there were a total of 456 accidents in the month. In April of 1975, there were 148 accidents.

Police laid a total of 391 charges last month and 343 in the same month last year. The average breathalizer reading among the 26 impaired drivers last year was .18 per cent and this year it dropped to .16 per cent.

Mulder also said that in light of the increased penalties for impaired driving and driving with a blood alcohol reading in excess of .08 per cent, which came into effect with other changes in the criminal code last Monday, "it is gratifying to hear that fines are being increased accordingly.

"Something must be done," he added, "to remove the menace of impaired drivers from our roads."

Earlier this week in provincial court in Parksville, fines of $750 and $1,000 were handed out against two persons who admitted to impaired driving.

The criminal code changes allow for a maximum fine of $2,000 for the offence. The maximum was $1,000 before May 1.

Tennis tourney starts today

COURTENAY — The first tournament of the season is being held this weekend as the Comox Valley Tennis Club hosts the North Island closed event. The tourney is open only to North Island members of the Vancouver Island Lawn Tennis Association. Matches will be played at Lewis Park courts, G. P. Vanier high school and at Anderton Park in Comox.

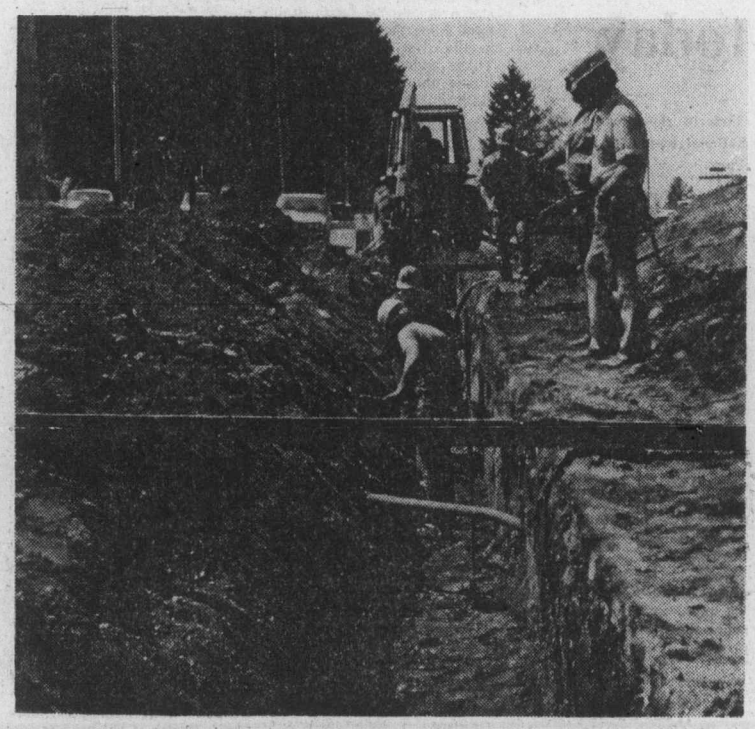

Municipalities discuss increases of ferry rates

CAMPBELL RIVER — Resolutions dealing with the recently announced ferry rate increases and stalling of construction on the long-awaited North-Island Highway, will be discussed at the spring meeting of the Association of Vancouver Island Municipalities which started Friday.

Consumer Affairs Minister Rafe Mair was guest speaker at Friday night's banquet here.

Business sessions today start at 8:30 a.m. with discussion on 25 resolutions sent in by councils.

New Westminster Mayor Muni Evers, president of the Union of B.C. Municipalities, or a UBCM spokesman will be guest speaker at today's luncheon.

Work on sewer line in Qualicum

Qualicum sewage job progressing

QUALICUM BEACH — Chew Construction of Victoria has started installation of the sewage collection system in the middle section of the village. The company has 270 days to complete the work.

Associated Engineering of Nanaimo, which drew the plans for the sewer collection system, is timing installation so that work crews will not be in popular areas, such as along the beach, during the summer months.

Village council has received nine bids for installation of the sewer collection system's third and fourth sections. Alberni Rentals' bid of $382,485 is the lowest, and well below the engineers' estimate.

The village's engineers are considering the bids, and will make recommendations to the village council.

'Very crucial year to be finance minister'

By George Gibson
Colonist Staff

Fnance Minister Evan Wolfe in his office
. . . appointment "complete surprise." ". . . I'm enjoying the challenge."

'It takes a little while," he admitted. "But aside from naturally having a bent for following politics — which you never get rid of once you get involved from the inside — I knew who the NDP ministers were. But it's true. I even had to get tuned into some of the new procedures in the House."

And as finance minister, Wolfe has been well to the fore this session after having brought out a restrictive budget last March 26 and being involved in the ordering of the Clarkson Gordon report on the government's finances. His budget address was the first for a finance minister, who wasn't also the premier, since 1952.

Premiers W. A. C. Bennett and Barrett both kept a tight hold on the finance portfolio although Barrett turned it over to Dave Stupich just three months before last December's election.

Did he know beforehand that he was to be minister of finance?

"No, I didn't. It was a complete surprise," Wolfe said. "But I feel that it's a terrific job that I'm really enjoying. I also feel that I have a lot more to do that I'm moving towards and I'm enjoying the challenge as I go along."

Even with all the flak he's been subject to?

"Yes, there's been strong criticism from the Opposition and the press but the letters and feeling that I get from the public hasn't been all that bad," Wolfe said.

"I think that you should keep in mind, the nature of my job being in finance and the whole accent of the previous election and our coming in as a new government, plus the situation that resulted in the Clarkson Gordon report developing into the new budget, involving a lot of new measures — well, the whole accent has been on finance.

"This has been multiplied by the fact that all of these new tax measures have required legislation that I've sponsored so you might say that I've been in the focus in a lot of criticism that the Opposition wants to contribute in a lot of ways.

"But I'd like to qualify the difference that the criticism that I get in the House is not what I get out in British Columbia.

"Sure, I get lots of letters, some of them critical, but not to the volume that you's expect. I think that people were conditioned to realize that strong measures were necessary and they're being very understanding about the whole matter as far as I'm concerned," Wolfe said.

The finance minister went on to say that he feels the appointment of a provincial auditor-general, the introduction of quarterly reports and other proposals will eventually do much to counteract the opinion that has come about today that is "suspicious and critical of public figures."

Wolfe was probed on his press relations. He said that he didn't employ an executive assistant and hasn't found one to be necessary to date.

But was the press proving to be difficult?

"Well, I'm not big news," he laughed. "I'm never really comfortagle with them. I've always had a respect for their ability to report.

"I don't hold the view that they mis-report a lot of news and I've always marvelled — especially when I was in the House before — and hearing things go on and then anticipating what I was going to read in the papers the next day. The good legislative reporters would generally get the meat out of what had taken place.

"The only thing is — I think more so now than then — depending on the medium, htey will play up a different feature. They will give two or three accounts of the same incident and highlight it in a completely different way.

"It's interesting to be involved more directly now where a certain incident occurs and then read four newspapers of what takes place," he added.

The session has Wolfe constantly in the House as his office has been the focus not only because of its estimates and the budget, but with other departments also under scrutiny.

This role of finance minister used to be one handled routinely by the premier.

Wolfe is chairman of the Treasury Board and is a member of the cabinet committee dealing with the federal Anti-Inflation Board negotiations.

He said that he expects to be travelling to Ottawa quite a bit in the next year. Among items to be finalized before the end of next March are the Fiscal Arrangements Act, the Revenue Guarantee and the education formula.

"It's a very crucial year to be finance minister," Wolfe said.

Would he rather have had any other portfolio?

"No, I very much like finance — most of the time," he said with a grin.

The finance minister — after he'd stopped laughing — treated the question quite seriously.

"No, not a bit," was Evan Wolfe's quick reply to question that came up during an interview this week. The question was whether or not he minded being identified as a member of the "car dealer" government.

Wolfe, 53, appointed B.C.'s new minister of finance last Dec. 22 after the Social Credit party ousted the NDP government after one short term, is one of seven car dealers among 34 party members elected.

He said that he was willing to go along with the gag. Then he was asked whether or not he felt that such a business background qualified him to be finance minister. He replied:

"It's all part of your work experience. Everybody has different experiences. I'm a charterd accountant and I've benefitted from my training in that way by being in the car business for 25 years.

"I've always made an effort to run a reputable, business, but aside from that, it's unlike many businesses — diversified, involving and dealing with a lot of people.

"It's a retail business and I think that people in the retail business are better tuned in to the citizen, generally speaking, and get more information . . ." Wolfe said.

"We've had a lot of fun poked at us as car dealers but I don't look upon it as being any disadvantage," he added.

As Wolfe said, he is also a chartered accountant, plays a jazz piano well enough to hold a musician's union card, curls (so well that he was a member of B.C.'s 1959 Brier rink), father of four, YMCA stalwart, ex-Flying officer and does a lot of other things. Also, he's batting three-for-four in the provincial election game.

Wolfe put in two previous sessions as a Soored backbencher and one of two members for Vancouver Centre. Then he and Herb Capozzi, running again as a team, lost to NDPers Gary Lauk and Emery Barnes in the 1972 turnaround.

Just 24 hours before the 1975 nominating deadline, Wolfe decided to try it again — but this time running in Vanncouver-Little Mountain with Grace McCarthy. This time they knocked off Phyllis Young and Roy Cummings, both NDP incumbents.

Was the 1972 loss a surprise?

Wolfe considered the question, then carefully replied:

"Well, I'm never one to get caught up in the euphoria of an election and start thinking things like you're going to win, you're going to win."

"One of the most unpredictable things ever is to predict the outcome of a constituency election. There are all sorts of expert opinions but very few are right on as to what the actual results are.

"You sort of think that you're going to win because you're one of the members at the time but when you view the thing in hindsight and the reasons the former government went down to defeat, it's not surprising because the degree of defeat is pretty widespread. The degree of swing was almost the same as that which happened this "last time," Wolfe added.

This widespread shift in public opinion was suggested to the minister as the indicator of yet another tough election fight, whenever it is called.

"Can you think of any election when it wasn't a tough fight," Wolfe asked.

"Remember back in '69 there was a lot of talk about a possible minority government? This feeling was in the party too, but we went from 30 seats to 39, I think it was. It was quite an outstanding victory and I think that it developed from the fear that it would develop into a defeat or a minority government. It once again indicates the unpredictability of an election," Wolfe said.

The minster was asked if he was finding it difficult to catch up with the House after having sat out for three years. He's never sat in opposition. Did this absence cause any problems for him as a new minister?

ann landers

Dear Ann Landers: Please forgive me if I sound crude. I don't know quite how to say this but I will do my best.

I was married at 19 and shared 46 wonderful years with my husband before he died. After I'd been alone for eight years a fine widower, one year my senior, asked me to marry him.

Actually, I would love to be his wife but fear and shame are holding me back. When I look at myself unclothed before the full-length bathroom mirror, I realize I would not be much of a prize for any man.

What can I do or say? We are very congenial. The subject of sex has never come up. Thank you, and God bless. — 73.

Dear 73: If the gentleman was interested in a firm, young body, he probably could have found one.

I hope you will not keep him waiting another moment. say "YES" today.

The picture HE presents unclothed before a full-length bathroom mirror will not be very different from yours.

Dear Ann Landers: My husband and Mr. K have become great golf buddies. I never cared for Mr. K but his wife is even worse. We have had them to dinner and cards three times in the last six weeks and each time they become more unbearable.

They both drink too much, want to quit playing cards and dance. I'm beginning to suspect they are really after a "switchman's picnic."

I've had to take Mr. K's hands off my backside and put him in his place regularly. Mrs. K hangs all over my husband and has a way of snuggling up to him that infuriates me.

The last time they were here, I ended up fixing breakfast. (They stayed until six a.m.!) When they left I felt exhausted, insulted and used.

My husband agrees the Ks are not our type, says we don't have to entertain them any more, but last night Mrs. K called and invited us to THEIR place and he accepted! What should I do? — Middle muddle.

Dear Mid Mud: Make it clear to your husband that the next dinner with the Odd Couple will be the last.

Tell him if he wants to play golf with Mr. K, fine and dandy, but the foursome is boresome, as well as destructive to your marriage, and you want nothing more to do with them.

Dear Ann: Our 23-year-old son told us last night that he and his sweetheart want to be married in July, in our living room.

Ella is a lovely girl. She and Don have gone together for three years. The problem: We have never met Ella's parents. Don says they are "peculiar' and will probably not come to the wedding. We feel uncomfortable about the situation and don't know what to do. Will you please enlighten us? — Quandry.

Dear Q.: Phone Ella's parents and invite them to dinner or brunch. If they decline, you will at least know you did the right thing. By all means invite them to the wedding. Regardless. If they don't come, again you will be secure in the knowledge that you behaved with dignity and correctness — even if they didn't.

Police search office of Toronto editor

TORONTO (CP) — Peter Worthington, executive editor of The Sun, refused Friday to surrender a copy of a controversial letter to four RCMP officers, sent from Ottawa to search his office.

But after a 4½-hour search, the officers found the letter and left without laying any charges.

The Sun used the letter as the basis of a copyright story published Wednesday. The story alleged that the RCMP stopped security screening of separatists in the federal civil service — required by government guidelines — because of interference from Prime Minister Trudeau.

Worthington said the RCMP arrived at his office about 9 a.m. Friday and began the search after he told them he would not surrender the letter.

He said the officers searched books and opened his morning mail, but did not extend the search to other areas of the building.

When he refused to hand over the copy, Worthington said the officers told him he could be charged under the Official Secret's Act.

The act, written in the First World War language, refers mostly to maps of earthworks and trenches or military installations. It contains one

Trudeau . . . 'can't believe ears'

'Out to destroy my reputation'

OTTAWA (UPI)— Prime Minister Trudeau says someone is out to destroy his reputation, and he is determined to find out who it is.

The Toronto Sun in an editorial alleged Thursday that Trudeau had ordered federal police to stop running security checks on Quebec separatists in the federal civil service. The editorial was based on a letter between two of Canada's top security officials.

Trudeau told the House of Commons Friday "The editorial in the Sun . . . is obviously scurrilous, inaccurate and venomous." He said it was "designed to destroy my reputation and credibility."

He said the letter between Gen. Michael Dare, head of the RCMP security service, and Robin Bourne, head of the federal security advisory committee, should not have been leaked to the press.

"I am obviously still distressed that a letter between the highest security officer and the second highest should be leaked that way."

When told by the opposition that the offices of the Sun had been raided, Trudeau exclaimed "I cannot believe my ears."

As both city hospitals prepare

Now strike leaders lean toward VGH

By HUBERT BEYER
Colonist Reporter

Implementation of emergency plans began Friday at both major Victoria hospitals in preparation for a strike which may hit either or both on Monday.

All elective surgery has been cancelled at both Victoria General and Royal Jubilee hospitals.

Urgent admissions are being deferred until further notice.

Preparations are underway for the evacuation of patients who may be safely transferred to levels of care other than acute.

The emergency measures went into effect shortly after the Hospital Employees Union served strike notice on both hospitals.

It was learned that Victoria General may be struck first, rather than the Royal Jubilee which was believed to be the union's initial target.

This last-minute change in strategy was attributed to a more decisive vote in favor of strike action by Victoria General employees.

Meanwhile, hospital officials were in an all-day huddle Friday with the Labor Relations Board to determine how many employees must remain on the job if a strike occurs and how many beds they must maintain.

The board's decision wasn't expected to be known until sometime this morning.

It was also learned Friday that Gorge Road Hospital is next on the list of the union's targets. A strike vote is to be held in the near future.

A union official said Friday while Victoria General may be the initial target for strike action, the strategy may even-

Drink age going up

REGINA (CP) — The Saskatchewan legislature gave final approval Friday to a bill that will raise the minimum legal drinking age to 19 from 18.

A last-minute amendment changed the effective date of the bill to Sept. 1, 1976.

Persons who become 18 before Sept. 1 will be allowed to continue drinking legally, but those turning 18 Sept. 1 or later will have to wait until their 19th birthday for a legal drink.

Enough oil under B.C. —Bennett

VANCOUVER (CP) — Premier Bennett said Friday that British Columbia could become self-sufficient in oil if the federal government allows the price to rise to world levels.

Bennett told a news conference that allowing the price of level of $13.50 a barrel from $8 would encourage exploration in B.C. (See also Page 6)

"We're not self-sufficient but we could be if there was an encouragement to find more oil," he said. "All of our people in the department suggest it's there but has to be sought and found."

Bennett said B.C. has asked the federal government to eliminate part or all of a federal 10-cent tax at the pump to soften pending increases.

House summons ex-MP for mass-bribes charge

OTTAWA (CP) — Irritated members of Parliament decided Friday to call one-time member Auguste Choquette on the carpet for saying half of them take bribes

Choquette, Liberal member for Lotbiniere from 1963 to 1968, was defending a lawyer accused of bribing an immigration officer when he said in court in Montreal Thursday:

"If everybody who had ever taken or given $600 or $700 bribes in their life were arrested, 50 per cent of the MPs would no longer be sitting. I know it because I was an MP for five years."

In Montreal, Choquette said Friday he would "gladly" appear voluntarily before a Commons committee to explain the allegations.

The Commons, in rare agreement, passed a motion by Walter Baker (PC—Grenville-Carleton) to refer the allegation to the House committee on privileges and elections.

A steering committee meeting rapidly agreed to have its clerk check the transcript of the trial to see whether the comments, reported in newspapers, could be verified.

A letter would be sent to the court reporter so he could be called to verify the remarks if necessary.

Choquette would not be called before the committee until the case has been heard — a courtesy to the court.

"I would appear before the committee with the greatest of pleasure," the former Liberal MP said in a telephone interview Friday.

"I also want to say that the whole situation is so widespread that there is really no need for overdramatization of the facts.

"I can't comment further on this until I see transcripts or hear tape recordings of what exactly was said."

Commons Speaker James Jerome said he didn't have the slightest doubt that a valid question of privilege had been raised by Baker.

Liberal, New Democrat and Social Credit spokesmen agreed.

In Quebec City, the provincial national assembly demanded a retraction from Choquette.

H.R. left $23 million

VANCOUVER (CP) — The late H. R. MacMillan, former chairman of MacMillan-Bloedel Ltd., left an estate with a gross value of $23.6 million, his will shows. He died Feb. 9 at 90.

Filed for probate in Vancouver, the will, which is dated July 27, 1973, lists beneficiaries including his two daughters, nine grandchildren, Oxford and Cambridge universities, the Vancouver Art Gallery, his secretary and his gardener.

The main beneficiaries are MacMillan's two daughters, Edna Marion Lecky and Gertrude Jean Southam, with $250,000.

The daughters also receive all household furnishings and first choice of all paintings in MacMillan's collection.

After the daughters have made their selection of paintings, the will states, the remaining paintings will go to the Vancouver Art Gallery.

MacMillan's son-in-law, Gordon Southam, was left the sum of $50,000, and each of his surviving grandchildren got $50,000.

MacMillan left $750-a-month for life to Dorothy Edith Dee, his secretary, and $500 each to 17 different public libraries, mostly on Vancouver Island.

1,000 coffins said ordered in quake city

VENICE (AP) — Italian national police announced figures Friday that more than double the death toll from northeastern Italy's disastrous earthquake—from fewer than 300 to 628.

There were unconfirmed reports of more than 1,000 dead and police put the number of injured at about 2,000. Officials said more than 110,000 were left homeless.

Rescue workers, including Canadian and U.S. military medics, dug through the rubble of northeast Italian towns and villages, searching for bodies.

"We were finding bodies in every ruin," said a police official in charge of rescue operations after Thursday's quake. "We will not know the total until we get to the basements."

The quake demolished or severely damaged more than a score of towns in the Alpine foothills 40 miles northeast of Venice. The villages—strung out in a valley—were hit by aftershocks Friday afternoon. The tremors caused no serious damage.

Tens of thousands—fearing more tremors—spent the night in tents, in their cars and under makeshift shelters in the open. Late evening rainstorms increased their misery.

The state radio reported before midnight Friday night that the death toll might exceed 1,000, but there was no official confirmation. There are reports in Udine—the provincial capital in the centre of the worst-hit area—that 1,000 coffins have been ordered.

Aid arrived from throughout Italy and from abroad. Two hundred Canadian troops were rushed to the area from

Former corrections branch employee:

Pride-stripped cons fail outside

Jail officials commit 'criminal acts that are not prosecuted'

By ELEANOR BOYLE
Colonist Reporter

It wasn't the first time Steve Fader refused the advice of a government official.

This time a corrections branch authority, blowing ink dry on a humanistic, philosophical treatise about prisoners' rights, told Fader "not to be so sensitive" that inmates were stuffed into concrete cubicles, relieving themselves in open buckets.

Now Fader, an anthropologist and former corrections branch employee has himself gathered information he says proves that corrections officials commit criminal acts every day treating prisoners.

Fader's refusal to keep quiet isn't landing him in the same trouble that outspokenness did in his Berkeley, Calif., radical days.

Sanctioned to speak Friday to the Second Canadian Conference of Applied Criminology, he shared time on an agenda with officials such as B.C. police commissioner Dr. John Hogarth, who gave the conference's opening address Wednesday.

The 28-year-old Victoria-area resident researched prison conditions during 22 months when he was among few in B.C. with a licence to see both sides of the incarceration system.

Information officer for the government branch which oversees such areas of recent unrest as Oakalla Prison, Fader talked to prisoners, talked to guards and talked to officials in his term that ended six weeks ago.

His position as editor of the B.C. Corrections Branch Quarterly got him an entree as did his casual looks and frequent failure to show up on time for interviews with jail officials well-briefed on what he should not see.

He says he finally saw most of it.

He says top-level corrections authorities had better look, too, because violence and hostage-taking will continue as long as human beings are submitted to conditions which foster violence.

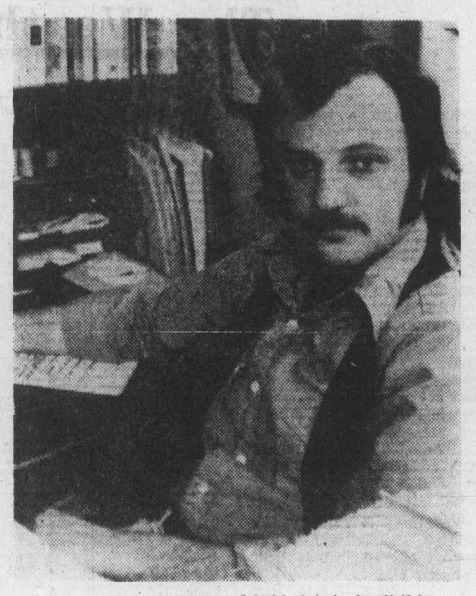

Not a "bleeding heart" with a stereotyped image of oppressed prisoners, Fader cites bad working conditions for prison staff members whom, he agrees with one inmate, "are doing life bits at 40 hours a week."

Prison staff in Oakalla's remand section put up with skimpy toilet facilities and a staff lounge Fader said "violates minimum health department standards as does the entire Oakalla kitchen complex."

As far as he could tell, "there are no clear-cut lines between inmates and guards."

With research concentrating on prisoners' treatment how-

Province accepts union rules on summer jobs

Provincial Secretary Grace McCarthy said Friday she's convinced the problems surrounding the employment of university students this summer are over.

John Fryer, head of the B.C. Government Employees Union, said he was happy the impasse of the past few weeks had been resolved.

But Scott Wallace (PC—Oak Bay) said he wanted solid evidence that "the government knows what it's doing" before he believed the summer student program was back on track.

The latest sequence in the summer student epic started two weeks ago when the union and the government were unable to reach agreement on pay rates for summer help.

The government wanted to pay student rates; the union insisted union rates be paid.

That phase of the battle ended Friday with Mrs. McCarthy sending a telegram to Fryer to state the government would abide by the conditions of the union-government master agreement.

"It is not the government's intention to appoint students to classified positions at a rate lower than that set out in the collective agreement," the telegram stated. "It appears, therefore, we have no areas of disagreement and I trust that the union and government can co-operate to make the program successful."

Fryer said he was pleased the problem appeared to be resolved and that he was anticipating early meetings with the government to determine which jobs would fall within union classification and which would be unclassified.

But Wallace remains unimpressed.

"There has been incredible confusion on the summer student program this year," he said. "Every day I receive complaints from students who were promised jobs weeks ago, assured they had those jobs, and are now receiving phone calls or telegrams telling them the jobs are not available.

"I hope the problem is solved, but I'm fearful that this (Mrs. McCarthy's telegram) is just another government smoke screen."

Wallace said he didn't care how the government tried to "look good, the fact is that they cut about $11 million from the student employment program this year and that has to mean fewer jobs."

Mrs. McCarthy said the government was doing the best it could with the dollars available but pointed out that this year no federal funds were being made available for the student work program.

When a student occupies a union-classified job the pay rate remains at the union level.

Unclassified jobs can earn $485 a month for students below the Grade 11 level; $539 for Grade 12; $593 for first-year university; $620 for second year; $649 for third and $701 for a fourth-year university student. Graduate students get $809 for unclassified positions.

Neither Fryer nor Mrs. McCarthy was able to estimate how many students would find work with the government this year.

Come Give Cheer and thousands did

More than 6,000 people attended a musical Friday night at Memorial Arena, sending the three-day Victoria High centennial celebrations off to a rousing start.

About 2,300 attended the opening performance of Come Give A Cheer and the second performance, restricted to registered former students and staff members, played to a capacity audience of 4,000.

Vic High, believed to be the oldest public high school west of the Great Lakes and north of San Francisco, is celebrating its 100th birthday this weekend.

Today, close to 10,000 people are expected to return to the school during an open house starting at 8:30 a.m. and finishing at 5 p.m.

Officials expect such a large crowd that a park-and-ride bus service has been instituted with hopes that people will park their cars in lots near Memorial Arena and take the free bus service from the front of the arena to the school and back.

Highlight of today's events is a centennial ball, featuring Mart Kenny and his Western Gentlemen. Again restricted to registered former students and staff, the dance has been sold out.

Sunday's highlight will be Government House garden party starting at 2:30 p.m.

Besides the two stage shows ot the arena, a reception for invited guests was held Friday at University House by Dr. Howard Petch, president of the University of Victoria.

Celebration of Vic High's centennial will be capped May 24 by the Victoria Day parade, which will have as a theme "Victoria High School Centennial ... 100 Years of Education."

The following is a list of events scheduled today and Sunday:

TODAY

8:30 a.m. — Breakfast With The Champions. Breakfast will be served by former sports champions from Vic High.

8:30-5 p.m. — Open House. Rooms organized into years, decades and eras, while athletic events, divided by age, will take place outside between 10 a.m. and 3 p.m.

11:30 — Lunch. Baron of beef luncheon will be available.

2-4 — Pioneer tea. Invited "pioneers" of the school in Room 103.

9 p.m.-1 a.m. — Centennial ball.

SUNDAY

2 p.m. — Netherlands Centennial Carillon Concert. Provincial carilloneur Herman Bergink will perform half-hour concert in honor of celebration.

2:30-4:30 p.m. — Garden party at Government House. Guests will be admitted only by registration card and music will be by Vic High concert band, directed by John Murray.

Nostalgia kept in high gear for two shows

By KING LEE
Colonist Reporter

Nostalgia didn't drip Friday night at Memorial Arena — it flowed.

Victoria high school reviewed its first 100 years with a splashy, well-done show produced by teacher Tommy Mayne and directed by Sylvia Hosie, who also choreographed the show.

Mayne was the thread which kept the production Come Give A Cheer together, playing the part of Old Vic, the legendary Spirit of Vic High.

When there wasn't any music coming from John Murray's orchestra or Maureen Archambault's choir, Mayne carried the show, narrating the story of the school with visual help from slides.

The second-show audience, consisting mostly of former students, gave generous applause to almost every aspect of the production and joined in the spirit of the show by standing, applauding and singing the school song as the cast snaked its way through the audience.

Among the most nostalgic pieces was a salute to the 1930s, dubbed the sports era. The biggest hand for all the sports heroes who attended Vic High during that decade went up for George (Porky) Andrews, a longtime staff member.

The delightful show was opened and closed with the singing of the "old school song," which brought back many fine memories for those present.

Come Give A Cheer may not be your everyday Broadway musical.

But it was certainly a long way ahead of your average high-school production.

FORMER STUDENT Norma Fitzsimmons of Island Florists donated this three-tiered arrangement for today's pioneer tea at Victoria high school and also gave huge arrangement made from 200 gold chrysanthemum plants for tonight's centennial ball at Memorial Arena.

Cadillac buyer free, gives thanks to jury

Barry Earl Lehna, 33, walked from Victoria county court a free man Friday night after a jury found him not guilty of knowingly possessing a stolen Cadillac.

"Thank you very, very much," he exclaimed to the jury after the verdict was given to the court.

Judge Montague Drake, in a rare comment after a jury verdict, said "I must say I agree with your verdict."

Lehna, of 3852 Wilkinson Road, Saanich, told the court in his four-day trial the charge had temporarily cost him his livelihood as a security patrol operator.

"My complete livelihood has been cut off by this charge and I am awaiting the outcome to see where my future lies," Lehna had said. He was president of Western Home Guard Patrol Ltd., until requested by the RCMP to resign and give up his shares in the company.

After the jury's verdict, he said he will appeal to the cabinet to get his licence reinstated.

The verdict came after three hours and 50 minutes deliberation.

Defence counsel Dermod Owen-Flood told the jury in his summation that the only issue was the charge that Lehna knew the 1975 Cadillac Eldorado convertible was stolen.

Lehna said he went to Montreal on two occasions last July and on the second visit paid a man named Paul Dube $9,500 cash for the car in a deal made in a hotel. He then drove the car to Victoria.

"We say that he did not know it was stolen; he was duped, conned," said Owen-Flood.

He described Lehna as "simply way out of his league" in a big city with "sophisticated criminals."

While Lehna admitted he did not check the serial number, Owen-Flood pointed to several defence witnesses who said car dealers do not usually do this, depending on the documentation.

He said Lehna's business partners in a used-car company, who had provided money for the Montreal trip, stood by him and testified as to his good character and reputation, as did a senior Saanich police officer and Brian Small, manager of the Greater Victoria Chamber of Commerce.

He said the business partners "have been through hell because of the publicity of this case" and they must "have suffered grievously from the publicity" yet they still came forward to testify for Lehna.

Owen-Flood called the jury's attention to a number of points which he said were "telltale signs that point to guilt or innocence."

These included the fact that Lehna, hearing police were making inquiries about the Cadillac, immediately called the police himself.

Then, when police went to his house and told him it was a stolen car, he said, "Oh my God, you have got to be kidding," according to a police witness.

Lehna then co-operated with police and answered their questions.

"This man has been guilty of stupidity, incompetency and idiocy, but he is not guilty of the crime for which he stands charged," he said.

Crown counsel Dwight Whitson, who was assisted by Peter Hull, said Lehna had 17 years experience in buying and selling cars and the jury had to ask itself whether his explanation could reasonably be true.

He said a reasonable person would have checked the dealer from whom Dube allegedly bought the car earlier the same day it was sold to Lehna and that a check made for liens would hardly disclose any on such a recent prior transaction.

Dube was a stranger and the sales document said it was for a sedan when it was in fact a convertible. This, said Whitson, would put a person on his guard.

Whitson described Lehna's actions as "not stupidity, that's wilful blindness, that's closing your eyes to the obvious."

Beautification body spared scrimping

The Capital Improvement District Commission's 1976 budget didn't fall victim to the provincial government's scrimping spree, Victoria Mayor Michael Young said Friday.

A total of $400,000 have been allocated to the CIDC for various projects this year, the same amount as last year.

Young said Provincial Secretary Grace McCarthy attended Thursday's meeting of the CIDC and he felt certain that she would continue to support the aims and aspirations of the commission.

The commission consists of representatives from the provincial government and the four core municipalities — Victoria, Saanich, Esquimalt and Oak Bay. The financing comes from the province.

The commission's last major beautification project was construction of the Lower Causeway.

Young declined to speculate on the CIDC's future projects, but he added that besides determining this year's goals, some long-range plans would be worked out.

The CIDC is to assume greater responsibilities. Mrs. McCarthy announced recently that the commission would be in charge of all provincial land holdings at the Inner Harbor development.

Arty life for The Beanery?

Artists and crafts people may get permission this summer to display and sell their wares at The Beanery, Victoria Mayor Michael Young said Friday.

In case you forgot, The Beanery is that colorful building by the Inner Harbor which was converted to a fast food takeout from a service station by the former NDP government.

Young said the possibility of using the building for arts and crafts people to display their work was discussed at Thursday's meeting of the Capital Improvement District Commission.

The mayor wouldn't commit himself, but he said there was a definite chance the plan might go ahead.

The CIDC is a provincial body with representatives from Greater Victoria's four core municipalities. It is in charge of beautification of the capital district and projects carried out under its auspices include the Lower Causeway at the Inner Harbor and the Gorge waterway beautification.

The possibility of using The Beanery as a miniature arts and crafts centre was first raised by Young in a letter to John R. White, a Victoria craftsman.

The mayor's letter was in response to a letter by White to Social Credit MLA Sam Bawlf, copies of which were sent to Young and Human Resources Minister William Vander Zalm.

White's letter said that crafts people had no place where they could sell their wares.

"He (the craftsman) has worked all winter long to prepare for the tourist season, his head full of dreams of working his way off government money and onto his own. The dream of a man to be self-employed and free, even though poor," it said.

White asked Bawlf to demonstrate "that Social Credit is a valid medium for the people of little personal power."

Searchlights go on trial for rescue helicopters

Search and rescue helicopters on the West Coast may soon be equipped with the searchlights that a Vancouver Island rescue co-ordinator has said they desperately need.

The move is one outlined in a recent letter from the national defence department to Campbell River's Dr. Bob Somerville.

The Island resident, who voluntarily co-ordinates rescue work, has said the searchlights are among equipment needed on search aircraft. He also contends this coast has far less equipment than the East Coast.

"Trials will begin this month on the feasibility of mounting the Night Sun searchlight on SAR helicopters," defence department executive assistant M. G. Cloutier wrote.

"When funding is obtained, action will commence to equip all SAR aircraft with marine VHF-FM radios," he continued.

The radios were also on Somerville's list of equipment he told DND recently was necessary for safe search and rescue on the B.C. coast.

DND believes West Coast facilities are generally adequate for rescue, the letter said, although Cloutier said the department "will continue to update and augment the resources to the utmost of our capabilities."

FIREMAN INJURED

Another building 'torched'

Two fires in Victoria Friday were attributed to vandalism and arson.

The latest of nine blazes in the city in 48 hours—several of which fire officials believe were deliberately set—occurred just before 6 p.m. in an empty house slated for demolition in the 2800-block Nanaimo.

"We assume it was torched," a Victoria fire department spokesman said of the fire in which acting department lieutenant Ray Campbell was injured.

Campbell was treated and released from Victoria General Hospital Friday after receiving a minor shoulder injury while fighting the blaze.

No one else was injured.

The home, in the middle of a large empty lot and owned by Victoria's Danmac Enterprises Ltd. had been unoccupied for several months.

Firemen, who cleaned up the blaze in less than two hours, said several children were reported to have been playing in the house before neighbors saw the smoke and flames.

A neighbor, 15-year-old Daren Page, said he ran into the house shortly before 6 p.m. when he saw smoke, and threw a burning cushion and some papers out a back window.

Thinking the fire was out, he went back to dinner but saw flames a few minutes later, he said. By that time, the fire department had been called.

One Victoria policeman at the scene said the worst part of the fire were the dozens of people, mostly children, standing around laughing and playing. He said they treated it too lightly.

Earlier Friday, city Fire Chief Eric Simmons said vandalism was the probable cause of a $2,500 fire in a downtown building.

Someone apparently dropped a cigarette into a letter-box slot in the front door of the building at 751-753 View used by Standard Furniture as a storage centre and by the Eagles fraternal organization.

Most of the $2,500 damage was to the two-storey building and some furniture. A passerby phoned in the alarm at 3:47 a.m. Friday, almost exactly 24 hours after the alarm for the second of two major fires Wednesday night and early Thursday.

The Yearling, a family drama about a boy and his love for a wild fawn, will be telecast on Sunday at 7 p.m. on Channel 7 and 12.

Today's Movies

Mad Monster Party, on 2 at noon. A 1968 puppet fantasy for children.

The Little Princess, on 11 at 2. Shirley Temple plays a straight dramatic role in this 1939 movie about a small child who haunts army hospitals looking for her father.

State Fair (xx), on 5 at 3. Pat Boone, Ann-Margaret and Bobby Darin star in this 1963 remake of the forties musical about a turn-of-the-century family visiting their annual state fair.

The Blob (x), on 7 at 3:30. An adolescent 1958 thriller about a jellyfish-like creature terrifying the inhabitants of small town. Steve McQueen would probably rather forget he starred in this one.

Brenda Starr, on 4 at 8. Television premiere of a new 1976 made-for-TV movie starring Jill St. John in the title role of the comic-strip heroine, a crusading journalist who becomes involved in foreign intrigue, blackmail, voodoo and murder. (See page 11 for a background article on Miss St. John and the making of this film.)

Joe Kidd (xx), on 5 at 9. A moderately interesting 1972 Clint Eastwood western with the star giving still another of his "quiet cowboy with a quick gun" portrayals. The setting is the Spanish-American war in New Mexico and supporting cast includes Robert Duvall, John Saxon and Don Stroud.

Bedazzled (xxx), on 6 at 9. A funny, irreverent modern variation on the Faust theme about the seven deadly sins, filmed in Britain in 1967 and starring Peter Cook and Dudnely Moore. It doesn't all work, but the jokes, both visual and verbal, are presented at a rapid, non-stop pace, and enough of them are sufficiently inventive to reward comedy fans. Raquel Welch and Eleanor Bron co-star.

Gemini Man, on 8 at 9. An unpreviewed 1976 pilot for a proposed NBC fall series starring Ben Murphy as Sam Casey, a daredevil secret agent with the ability to remain invisible for a small part of each day.

The Crowd (xxxx), on 9 at 9. A 1928 silent classic about an average Manhattan couple and their daily battle with life in the big city. (See page 3 for background article.)

Kiss Me, Kill Me, on 4 at 9:30. Another unpreviewed made-for-TV movie, this one a 1976 crime-drama starring Stella Stevens as a private investigator involved in the case of an ex-con wrongly accused of murdering a young lady schoolteacher. Supporting cast includes Claude Atkins and Robert Vaughn.

The Silent Gun (xx), on 12 at 10. Routine 1969 made-for-TV western about still another reformed gunman who helps rid a small town of the bad guys, starring Lloyd Bridges and Ed Begley.

Coogan's Bluff (xx), on 7 at 11. A familiar, fast-paced 1968 detective story about an Arizona deputy sheriff sent to New York to extradite an escaped killer, starring Clint Eastwood, Don Stroud, Lee J. Cobb and Susan Clark.

Night of the Sorcerers, on 11 at 11. No rating available on this 1970 European-made thriller about a cult of vampires in Equatorial Africa.

Gemini Man, on 6 at 11:20. (See earlier this evening for details.)

The Stripper (xx), on 12 at 11:30. Joanne Woodward does the best she can with a maudlin script in this 1963 movie version of a bad William Inge play, A Loss of Roses, about a showgirl working in a run-down touring road show who decides to try for a new life and ends up falling in love with a younger man. The play was a quick, deserved flop on Broadway.

The Wheeler Dealers (xx), on 4 at 11:45. An entertaining 1963 comedy about the rocky romance between a Texas tycoon and a sophisticated New York lady stock analyst, starring James Garner, Lee Remick and a good supporting cast that includes Louis Nye, Jim Backus, Pat Harrington and John Astin.

Little Murders (xxxx) on 8 at midnight. An impressive 1971 film version of Jules Feiffer's devastating off-Broadway hit satire about one New York family's unexpected reaction to crime in the streets. The plot's absurdities will keep you laughing until they hit home and make you stop and think in wide-eyed astonishment. Brilliantly directed by Alan Arkin, with excellent performances by Elliott Gould, Donald Sutherland, Marcia Rodd, Vincent Gardenia and Elizabeth Wilson. Director Arkin plays a small cameo role as a detective.

Chato's Land (x), on 5 at 1. A violence-ridden 1972 western starring Charles Bronson as an Apache half-breed on the run after killing a white sheriff in self defence.

My Father's House (xx), on 8 at midnight. Cliff Robertson turns in an excellent performance in this 1975 TV drama about an ambitious young executive who has a serious heart attack and is forced to re-think his life.

TOM WATSON is the defending champion of the Byron Nelson Golf Classic, which will be televised exclusively by Channel 4 on Saturday at 12:30 p.m. and Sunday at 1:30 p.m. Watson, who also won both the World Series of Golf and the British Open in 1975, finished in last year's Byron Nelson with a record-tying 269.

Car Race Unites "First Family"

The "First Family" of stock car racing faces a new challenge when CBS Sports Spectacular goes trackside at Alabama International Motor Speedway in Talladega for the Alabama 500, to be broadcast Saturday, May 8 (4:30-6:00 p.m.) on the CBS Television Network.

Lee Petty, winner of 54 Grand National races and three times national champion prior to his retirement in 1962, joins Ken Squier, CBS Sports motor sports editor, as expert analyst for the broadcast.

And, shooting for a second victory in the 500 will be Lee's son, Richard, the king of stock car racing, winner of 178 Grand National races — some 90 more than his closest competitor — and an unprecedented six times national champion.

Father and son have been cast in just about every other possible relationship on the track in one of sport's more compelling stories.

Richard was in the pit crew as a grade-school boy when his father started racing in pre-NASCAR days ("the wild west stage of stock car racing"), graduated to become a mechanic with brother Maurice, who now builds the Petty engines, and raced against his father before Lee's retirement as a driver.

In his autobiography, Grand National, written with Bill Neely, Richard recalls his father's fascination with cars from the day he traded his bike for a Model T when he was 16, back in 1928. The father later ran a small trucking business, but Richard remembers "Daddy's front-yard speed shop," with automobiles in various stages of dismemberment, through the years Richard grew up in Level Cross, near Randleman, just south of Greensboro, N.C.

"They didn't have too many races in those days," Richard writes, "but daddy and my uncle Julius were right there . . . for every event, cheering their heads off . . . then they would get back in the car and drive faster than any of the race drivers had done all night."

Soon "drivers were coming from as far away as Atlanta, just to try to beat daddy drag-racing on the highways," including some who'd honed their skills out-speeding "revenooers" in search of moonshine.

In 1948, "daddy won the first race (on a track) he was ever in, but after three races discovered he had won $900 but spent $4,000 buying and improving the cars." After a brief retirement, Lee Petty began competing in the earliest events sanctioned by the National Association for Stock Car Auto Racing when that body was organized in 1949. Even then, the son remembers, "we raced out of the trunk of the family car," which held all the accessories necessary. The mother, and later Richard's wife, served as chief cook and cheerleader as the family built an empire.

Together, the Pettys participated in the growth of the sport from the small dirt tracks which are still the backbone of business to the super speedways at Charlotte, Daytona and Talladega.

"One day, shortly after my twenty-first birthday," Richard writes, "I walked over to where daddy was working on a race car and said, 'I think I'd like to try driving a car in a race,' He didn't even look up from what he was doing, but he said two things. 'Okay, there's an Oldsmobile convertible over there . . .' and 'hand me that five-eighths socket.' "

Father and son forgot family ties when they competed against each other most notably when the father, finishing second, successfully protested a race Richard had won in Atlanta. Before a nearly fatal accident in a horrifying crash prompted the father's retirement at age 47, he set records destined to be broken by the son, was three times named "most popular driver," and won a third NASCAR championship in 1959, the year Richard was named "rookie of the year."

Going into this season, Richard had won more than $2,000,000 in 17-plus years of racing. His best year was last year when he took home some $340,000, winning 13 of 30 NASCAR events. Only David Pearson shares the father-and-son accomplishment of winning three Grand National titles, and it was Richard who broke Lee's record of 54 Grand National victories in 1967.

Statistics can be numbing. But a look at Richard's record, put together on 50 tracks in 17 states, reveals his command of the sport. He has won 42 races at 250 miles, five at 300, eight at 400, 27 at 500, and one at 600.

A new chapter in NASCAR history is written, then, every time the Petty family takes to the track. But it will be a very special one May 8 on CBS Sports Spectacular when Lee helps call his son Richard's race.

Youth Concert Features Ives

Charles Ives was born 102 years ago, on October 20, 1874, in Danbury, Conn. It was during his centennial year that he became increasingly recognized by musicians and audiences alike as one of the most original, creative, and, in more ways than one, thoroughly American composers this country has ever produced. And the recognition continues to soar.

Young audiences will be afforded the opportunity to experience the life, color and sheer gusto of Chareles Ives' music when The New York Philharmonic Young People's Concert is presented on The CBS Festival of Lively Arts for Young People series, Saturday, May 8 (1:00-2:00 p.m.) on the CBS Television Network.

The Ives' work, variations on America, will be utilized to illustrate the concert's theme, Variations on a Variation, one of music's most basic forms.

Ives spent decades writing music that was unrecognized, both for its inherent quality and for its startling modernity. For years, hardly anyone played it, or even knew about it. Towards the end of his life in 1954, a few people began to appreciate Ives' achievement in 1947, when he was 73 years old, he was awarded the Pulitzer Prize for his Third Symphony, written in 1911.

As Ives' artistry continues to be heralded, the commotion would have appealed to the composer's sardonic sense of humor. Ives always contended that there were certain advantages in not having his music played.

"As I look back," he once said, "I seem to have worked with more natural feeling when I knew the music was not going to be inflicted on others."

Unlike many great composers, Ives never suffered financially from the neglect which greeted his music. A Yale graduate, when he chose a profession it was not as a composer but as a life-insurance executive. He had almost as much creative energy in insurance as in music, and was highly successful in the field.

Ives began to compose in a fiercely independent style while at Yale, which didn't exactly endear him to his academic authorities in New Haven. One of his professors, horrified by his failure to follow traditional harmonic procedures, asked him testily, "Ives, must you hog all the keys?"

Ives eventually created music uniquely American in its texture and inspiration. Coming from a New England background that encompassed everything from the sounds of village band music to the texts of transcendentalist authors like Emerson and Thoreau, he wrote music that reflected the coloration and the thought of his Yankee heritage.

VIDOR CLASSIC

King Vidor's epic of the American middle class — The Crowd — is the May 8 feature on Public TV 9's The Golden Days of MGM. This classic, which airs at 9 p.m., was one of the few silent films which tried to deal with reality, to capture the life of an average family.

To gain an air of authenticity, King Vidor, who both wrote and directed the film, used unknown actors or professionals of ordinary appearance who were not likely to be recognized. Also, he shot many of the exteriors of New York with a then rarely used hidden mobile camera.

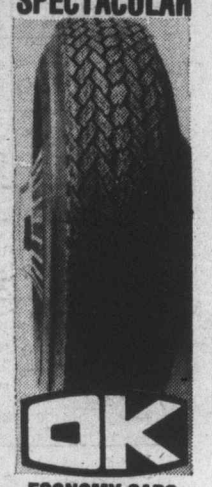

The Crowd also is a love story — essentially the tale of two people, how they meet, their romance, their marriage, their dreams and their tragedies.

Today's Movies

Project M-7 (xx), on 5 at 3. An interesting 1953 English-made drama about an isolated team of dedicated researchers working on a jet plane that will fly at fantastic speeds. Excellent aerial footage and a competent cast with James Donald and Herbert Lom.

Death of a Gunfighter (xxx), on 7 at 3:30. A slow-moving, but well-acted 1969 character study of a small town marshall who is no longer needed by his townspeople, starring Richard Widmark. Offbeat, quiet and highlighted with an excellent performance by Lena Horne in the non-singing role of Widmark's long-time mistress.

The Yearling (xxxx), on 7 and 12 at 7. The whole family will enjoy this multi-Oscar winning 1946 drama, adapted from Marjorie Kinnan Rawlings' Pulitzer Prize-winning novel about a farm boy, his family and a pet fawn in post-Civil War Florida. A special Oscar was awarded child star Claude Jarman, with nominations going to Gregory Peck and Jane Wyman. Recommended.

Summer of '42 (xxx), on 4 at 9. A warning that this movie may not be suitable for all members of the family comes with this 1971 comedy-drama about the adventures of three teen-agers vacationing on a New England coastal island in 1942. The focus of the drama is on one of the boys and his adolescent crush on a pretty young war bride. Cast includes Jennifer O'Neill and Gary Grimes.

Maytime (xxx), on 12 at 9. Music lovers will enjoy this lavishly-filmed 1937 romance about an opera star reminiscing about her career and tragic love life, starring Jeanette MacDonald, Nelson Eddy and John Barrymore.

Kiss Me Kate (xxx), on 4 at 11:30. Another treat for music lovers is this excellent 1953 film version of the Broadway hit about a theatrical troupe doing a musical version of Shakespeare's Taming of the Shrew, starring Howard Keel and Kathryn Grayson.

What's New Pussycat? (xx), on 5 at 11:30. Woody Allen wrote the script (and plays a small cameo role) for this 1965 farce, about a neurotic, girl-chasing editor who seeks advice from an equally neurotic analyst, starring Peter O'Toole, Romy Schneider, Capucine, Paula Prentiss and Ursula Andress.

The Story of Pretty Boy Floyd, on 12 at 11:35. No rating available on this 1974 made-for-TV drama, starring Martin Sheen as the Depression-era farmboy who became an infamous bank robber and murderer. Supporting cast includes Joseph Estavez (Sheen's real-life brother), Michael Parks and Kim Darby.

Five Branded Women (xx), on 2 at 11:45. A 1960 Italian-made drama set in Nazi-occupied Yugoslavia, about five women condemned for consorting with Germans, starring Van Heffin, Silvana Mangano, Jeanne Moreau and Vera Miles.

Little Murders (xxxx), on 6 at midnight. An impressive 1971 film version of Jules Feiffer's devastating off-Broadway hit satire about one New York family's unexpected reaction to crime in the streets. The plot's absurdities will keep you laughing until they hit home and make you stop and think in wide-eyed astonishment. Brilliantly directed by Alan Arkin, with excellent performances by Elliott Gould, Donald Sutherland, Marcia Rodd, Vincent Gardenia and Elizabeth Wilson. Director Arkin plays a small cameo role as a detective.

My Father's House (xxx), on 8 at midnight. Cliff Robertson turns in an excellent performance in this 1975 TV drama about an ambitious young executive who suffers a serious heart attack and is forced to rethink his life.

Mister Roberts (xxxx), on 7 at 12:30 a.m. A flawless 1955 screen version of the acclaimed Broadway play about the rowdy life aboard a Second World War cargo ship, centering on a battle of wits between Henry Fonda, James Cagney and Jack Lemmon. William Powell proves once again to be a master of comedy timing as "Doc", the ship's medic. Recommended for late night viewers.

Svengali (xx), on 6 at 2:10 a.m. Donald Wolfit and Hildegarde Neff star in this 1954 film version of the story of a hypnotist who casts a spell over a girl and makes her a famous singer.

MUSIC FANS will enjoy this lavishly-filmed 1937 movie set in Paris, about a former opera star reminiscing about her career and tragic romance, to be telecast on Sunday at 9 p.m. on Channel 12. Starring in the film are Nelson Eddy, Jeanette MacDonald and John Barrymore (far right)

Today's Highlights

Meeting Place, on 2 at 11 a.m. Dean Herbert O'Driscoll officiates from Vancouver's Christ Church Anglican Cathedral, at a service on the theme of Habitat, the upcoming UN Conference on Human Settlement. (60 mins.)

Opera Theatre, on 9 at 2. A performance of Trouble in Tahiti, Leonard Bernstein's light-hearted, but pointed satire of 1950s suburban sophistication and marital discontent. (60 mins.)

Clark Gable: The King Remembered, on 6 and 8 at 2:30. A salute to Clark Gable, hosted by Peter Lawford, with reminiscences offered by those who knew him, including directors Frank Capra and William Wellman, journalist Adela Rogers St. John, and actors Andy Devine and Yvonne DeCarlo. The program also includes film clips from Gable's home movies, newsreel footage and Hollywood films. (90 mins.)

Dying, on 9 at 3. A two-hour documentary exploring the ways in which three terminally ill people and their loved ones adjust to the reality of death. This program is an intense emotional experience and is recommended for a mature audience only. (See background article on page 5.) (2 hrs.)

Science Magazine, on 2 and 6 at 5. Host Dr. David Suzuki looks at how bacteria become resistant to drugs; and also examines how the body moves, with the focus on exercise and body types. (30 mins.)

World of Disney, on 5 at 7. Ducking Disaster with Donald and His Friends—an hour of animation with cartoons from the 1940s and 50s, including Chicken Little (1943) and Motor Mania (1950). (60 mins.)

Ellery Queen, on 5 at 8. Ellery (series star Jim Hutton) becomes involved in the case of an heiress who died while reading one of his novels. Her last actions, including a fatal plunge off a balcony, duplicated those of a character in the book. Guest cast includes Ida Lupino, Susan Strasberg, Anne Francis, Don Ameche and Craig Stevens. (60 mins.)

Nova, on 9 at 8. Benjamin—a documentary about the first six-months in the life and development of a normal healthy baby. This BBC produced program includes graphic footage of Benjamin's birth; follows his progress body movements and speech patterns; and concludes that babies are much more aware of their environment than previously thought. (60 mins.)

Columbo, on 5 at 9. Tonight's episode finds Columbo (series star Peter Falk) being followed and bugged by his own suspect — an intelligence agent who murdered a colleague, and doesn't want Columbo to prove it. Guest cast includes Patrick McGoohan and Leslie Nielsen. (60 mins.)

Days Before Yesterday, on 2 and 6 at 10. Continuing in the seven-part documentary series about the history of Canada. Tonight: The Best of Times . . . The Worst of Times, an examination of the period from August 1930 to October 1935. (60 mins.)

Risko, on 7 at 10. A crime-drama pilot for a possible series, starring Gabriel Dell as an ex-con who works as an investigator for a defence attorney. In this story he searches for evidence that will clear a famous race-car driver positively identified as a sex-murderer. (60 mins.)

First Churchills, on 9 at 10. Return of the 12-part series based on Sir Winston Churchill's biography of John Churchill, the first Duke of Marlborough. In this first chapter, Marlborough (played by John Neville) begins his army career. (60 mins.)

Dying—A Powerful Documentary On Life

DYING, a film that tries to confront the reality of death and life airs on Public TV 9 May 9 at 3 p.m. Over a period of two and one-half years, a film crew from WGBH/Boston followed the lives of three people who were going to die. During that time, these people shared with a camera some of the most precious, most personal moments of their lives so that viewers might know and understand something very important about life.

Film producer Michael Roemer, who himself was terrified of death before he began this project, believes that "dying is personal." As he explains: "You don't die someone else's death. You die. Dying isn't something you're apt to generalize about — not if you're the one who is dying. Like sex, it is a direct and personal experience, and the fact that it is happening to others also — that your experience may be typical of one thing or another — isn't of much help or interest to you."

A FAMILY agonizes with the fact that the husband is dying of cancer in this scene from the documentary film, Dying, the story of three people who have come to terms with their impending deaths. Although it has been termed a profound and meaningful experience, PBS warns that it may not be suitable for all members of the family.

In order to capture this unique experience, Roemer set out to meet the dying and to try to share a part of their experience. According to the producer, "each one of the many men and women we met in the next year and a half is clearly and separately etched into memory: a one-armed man from Yugoslavia — a Catholic who has been through the concentration camps — lying in a ward at Boston City Hospital, looking at us through the smoke of his cigarette and say "Dying time!"; a man with terminal cancer, raging at his wife and sons in a hospital corridor; a woman weeping and trembling in terror at what was happening to her; a dying twenty-three-year-old man holding the hand of his grandmother."

The film crew realized that there were many responses to death: some people seemed comfortable, at ease with their own death, while others were frightened or angry. According to Roemer, "we learned that in the crisis of death the dark qualities in a person often become darker, and the bright qualities brighter. We learned to suspend our tendency to moralize and to judge. For it was our privilege to be in their presence, and we knew that if we were confronted by their fate, we might acquit ourselves far less well."

PBS Encores Acclaimed First Churchills Series

THE FIRST CHURCHILLS, the 12-part series about John Churchill and his shrews and saucy wife Sarah, returns to Public TV 9 May 9 at 10 p.m. This highly acclaimed series, which faithfully recreates 17th-century England, stars John Neville as the first Churchill to bear the title of Duke of Marlborough, and Emmy-winner Susan Hampshire as his wife.

The story begins at the court of Charles II, as Churchill is beginning to make his mark. Handsome, courteous and ambitious, he falls in love with Sarah, a lady-in-waiting. Their courtship is difficult, but in 1677 they marry, and together begin their ascent through English political life.

John, as Groom of the Bedchamber to James, Duke of York, shares his master's hazardous future: although a potential ruler of Protestant England, James adheres fanatically to the Roman Catholic faith. Having to choose between personal loyalty, and the good of the country, John joins William of Orange in 1688.

Meanwhile, Sarah has made an important friend: drawn to her magnetic personality, Princess Anne has made her the Chief lady-in-waiting. When Anne finally becomes Queen, the Marlboroughs rise to positions of pre-eminence.

But their good fortune was not to continue. Anne's and Sarah's differences of political opinion are manipulated by Tory politician Harley until Sarah is dismissed. The subsequent fall of the Whig party leaves John politically isolated. He continues to serve England in the war effort, until a peace made behind his back renders his services useless. He and Sarah go into exile, but are restored to their old eminence on the accession of George I.

The First Churchills, originally shown on Masterpiece Theatre, was produced and written by Donald Wilson, directed by David Giles, and filmed by John McGlashan. It was produced by the BBC, and currently is distributed by Time-Life Films, from whom KCTS/9 acquired broadcast rights. This acquisition and broadcast of the series was paid for my Members of Nine.

Nova Watches A Baby Grow

Babies know a great deal more about what is going on in the world than child psychologists — or parents — ever realized. That is the conclusion reached on NOVA, airing May 9 at 8:00 p.m. (also seen May 11 at 8:30 p.m.) on Public TV 9.

The Nova film crew, in the company of child development experts, watched Benjamin closely for the first six months of his life. Benjamin showed them that many of the things that babies do can have remarkable similarities to the way adults behave. For example, with the use of slow motion film, Nova shows that babies are tuned in to human speech from birth. The rhythm of adults speaking around them can be synchronized to their body movements: they are trying to join the conversation.

The program also demonstrates that motions that seem like random arm wavings actually are attempts at grasping. Benjamin even shows that by the time he is two weeks old he has begun to associate food with his mother's smell.

Benjamin is a BBC production, presented on Nova by WGBH/Boston, with the advice and co-operation of the American Association for the Advancement of Science. Its presentation on KCTS/9 is paid for in part by Members of Nine.

CBC-TV Series Surveys Canada's Religious Views

Recently the CBC-TV series Man Alive co-sponsored a research project to look into the religious and spiritual climate in Canada. Nearly 2,000 persons, representing the ten provinces in about equal number, filled out questionaires in this survey which was conducted by Prof. Reginald Bibby of the University of Lethbridge, Alta.

Despite the impression that today's citizens are cynical, materialistic and selfish, the study indicates that Canadians are still deeply concerned with fundamentals. Here are some examples of what the study found:

—Forty per cent have a firm beliefe in the existence of God, and a total of 85 per cent belief in the existence of God, power of some kind at least some of the time.

—Forty-four per cent are sure or think they have experienced the presence of God, and 11 per cent are sure or think they have experienced the presence of the devil.

—At least 70 per cent say they think about such questions as: What is the purpose of life?, How did the world come into being? AND What happens after death? About 20 per cent say they think about such questions often.

—Thirty-four per cent pray privately (as opposed to praying in the course of a religious service) at least once a week and another 43 per cent sometimes say prayers in private, for a total of 77 per cent who pray privately sometimes.

—There is also widespread interest in other aspects of the supernatural in such things as extrasensory perception (78 per cent think it certainly or probably exists), spiritualism (36 per cent think it certainly or probably occurs), and astrology (44 per cent think it does or may have something to do with their destiny, and 73 per cent regularly or occasionally read their horoscopes). However, this extensive concern with spiritual matters is not matched in church attendance or membership figures.

—Fifty per cent are formal members of a church or synagogue, compared with 29 per cent who belong to a sports club, 26 per cent who belong to a labor union, and 21 per cent who belong to a service club.

—Thirty per cent attend religious services at least once a week and another 49 per cent go at least several times a year. However, attendance figures are higher than this for older people and lower for younger people.

—People who were once active in a religious group but are not now were asked why they had dropped out. The main reasons given were 'disenchantment with what religious organizations are doing' and "increasing awareness of hypocrisy." The number of people who cited personal failures of belief or problems of belief was much smaller.

—Concern for the future of children was widespread. Forty-one per cent of adult Canadians think children have less chance of a happy life than their own generation had, while only 35 per cent think they have a better chance. Five years ago the split went the other way; more people were optimistic about their children's future.

The Man Alive program looked at some of these questions, and also examined other research studies, including one recently done for the Canadian Catholic Conference of Bishops by Grant Maxwell.

Man Alive's host Roy Bonisteel interviewed a number of churchgoers and church leaders including Archbishop Ted Scott, Primate of the Anglican Church of Canada; the Rev. Lois Wilson, United Church Minister and Roman Catholic Bishop Bernard Hubert from Ste. Jerome, Quebec.

Birds of Prey (xx), on 6 at midnight. Routine 1973 made-for-TV crime-drama starring David Janssen as a helicopter-borne traffic reporter drawn into an aerial duel with a gang of bank robbers.

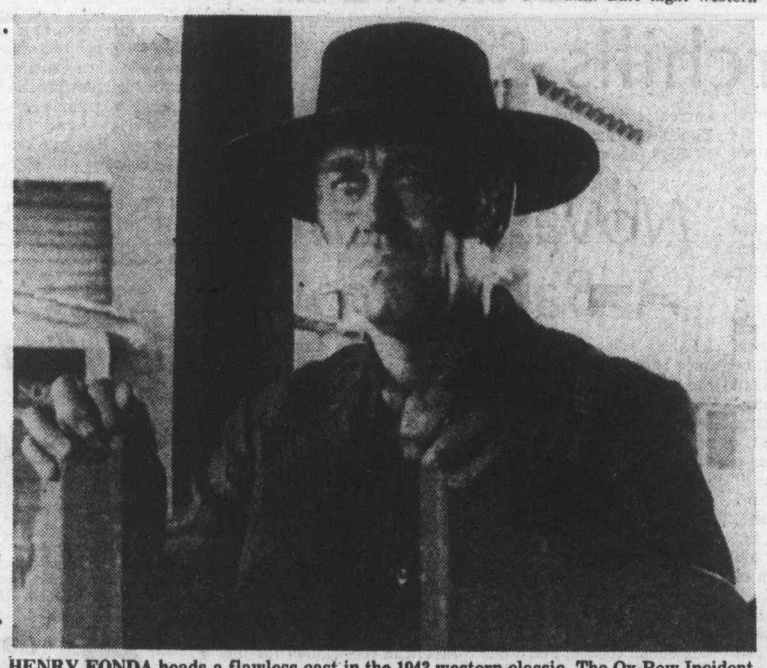

Psych-Out (xx), on 8 at midnight. Susan Strasberg and Jack Nicholson star in this 1968 drama about a deaf young runaway girl searching for her brother among the flower children in the late-sixties San Francisco. The pop music score is by the Strawberry Alarm Clock.

The Jokers (xxx), on 7 at 12:30. A sparkling, 1967 English-made comedy about a pair of well-to-do brothers who come up with a wild plot to steal the British Crown Jewels—and then give them back! There's a twist to the ending which adds to the film's bite. Cast includes Oliver Reed and Michael Crawford.

No Sad Songs for Me (xxx), on 6 at 1:45 a.m. High class histronics best describes this well-acted 1950 soap opera about a fatally ill wife and mother planning the future for her family when she is no longer with them. Margaret Sullivan, in her last film role, stars with Wendell Corey and Natalie Wood.

The Last Posse (xx), on 8 at 2 a.m. Late night western fans will enjoy this well-produced 1953 adventure tale about cattlemen, ranchers, robbery and murder, starring Broderick Crawford, Charles Bickford, Wanda Hendrix and John Derek.

The Howards of Virginia (xxx), on 7 at 2:30 a.m. A spirited 1940 historical saga about a colonial family at the time of the American Revolution, starring Cary Grant, Martha Scott and Sir Cedric Hardwicke.

HENRY FONDA heads a flawless cast in the 1943 western classic, The Ox-Bow Incident, about the terrors of mob violence and lynching, to be telecast on Monday at 10 p.m. on Channel 12. Directed by William Wellman and co-starring Dana Andrews and Anthony Quinn, the powerful story is told with a simple force that leaves you limp.

Olympiad— The Africans

On Monday at 8:30 p.m. on Channel 8, CTV's Olympiad series presents, The Africans, a documentary tracing the early beginnings of East African participation in the Olympic Games, including their monumental victories in Mexico City and Munich.

It is only 20 years since East African countries first competed in the Olympic Games.

It was in Melbourne in 1956 that Ethiopia, Kenya and Uganda sent teams to compete. None of their athletes were able to win any medals.

In 1960 in Rome, a corporal in Emperor Haile Selassie Imperial Bodyguard, Abebe Bikila, ran barefoot in the historic 26 mile 385-yard run to give East Africa its first Olympic medal, a gold medal.

Four years later in Tokyo, he repeated his victory to become the only East African to stand on the top step of the victory platform.

That same year in Tokyo, Kenya won its first medal, a bronze, when Wilson Kiprugut came in third in the 800 metre run.

It was Mexico City 1968, that East African athletes amazed the world in running events from the 1500 metres to the marathon.

Kenya's incomparable Kip Keino won the classic 1500 metre run while his teammate, Neftali Temu, came in first in the 10,000 metres. Keino and Temu added to their laurels by winning the silver and bronze medals respectively in the 5000 metre run.

In the marathon, Mamo Wolde gave Ethiopia its third successive victory in that event.

Four years later, in Munich Kip Keino won his second gold medal in the 3,000 metre steeplechase and his second silver medal in the 1500 meters. Mamo Wolde of Ethiopia, attempting to duplicate Abebe Bikila's successive marathon victories, finished 3rd, behind Frank Shorter's great victory.

John Akii-Bua of Uganda upset the theory that Africans could only compete on an international level in long distance running by winning the 400 metre hurdles. The Kenyan 4x-400 metre relay team won the gold medal by breaking the world and Olympic record.

To date, in five Olympiads, East African runners have won 8 gold, 6 silver and six bronze medals.

The East African explosion on to the Olympic scene is probably the most dramatic in the history of the Games.

Raw, unpolished speed and endurance in the beginning has been transferred into a polished talent that makes East Africa a formidable threat for Montreal.

Featured in The Africans are the famous 'foreign' coaches who brought Africa to the point where home grown coaches have taken over.

ABEBE BIKILA the famed "barefoot runner" shown here with one of his two gold medals, is among the athletes profiled in the The Africans, a segment of CTV's Olympiad series to be shown on Monday at 8:30 p.m. on Channel 8. Bikila became permanently crippled in later life and died of a cerebral hemmorage at age 46, making him one of the most admired and tragic Olympic figures.

Today's Movies

The Wacky World of James Tont, on 8 at 12:45. No rating available on this 1966 Italian-made spy spoof about a secret agent who clashes with a master criminal. Cast is dubbed into English.

Shoot Loud, Louder . . . I Don't Understand, on 11 at 1. Marcello Mastroianni and Raquel Welch star in this zany 1966 Italian-made comedy about the misadventures of a daydreamer who reports to the police the non-murder of his gangster neighbor.

The FBI Story (xx), on 5 at 3:30. (Part 1) A 1959 drama tracing the history of the U.S. Federal Bureau of Investigation as seen through the eyes of one dedicated agent, starring James Stewart and Vera Miles. This film is shown in two parts, with the conclusion tomorrow.

These Three (xxx), on 12 at 7. A watered-down but superbly-acted 1936 film version of Lillian Hellman's provocative play, The Children's Hour, about a scandal which ruins the lives of three people. A fine cast includes Merle Oberon, Miriam Hopkins and Joel McCrea. This film was directed by William Wyler who also did the 1961 film version which starred Shirley MacLaine and Audrey Hepburn. Recommended.

The War Lord (xx), on 11 at 9. Action and romance in 11th-century Normandy, filmed in 1965 and starring Charlton Heston and Rosemary Forsythe.

A Beautiful Killing (xx), on 4 at 11:30. The attractive husband-and-wife acting team of Christopher George and Lynda Day George star in this made-for-TV mystery about a pair of private investigators probing the death of a wealthy guest at an exclusive health spa.

Hawkins on Murder (x), on 12 at 11:45. James Stewart plays the title role in this 1973 pilot for the now-defunct crime-drama series about a shrewd country lawyer defending a girl accused of triple murder. Supporting cast includes Canadian actress Kate Reid, Bonnie Bedelia and Strother Martin.

The House of Rothschild (xxx), on 2 at midnight. Famed character George Arliss brilliantly portrays both the father and son in this interesting 1934 historical drama about the illustrious Jewish banking family. Others in the excellent cast include Loretta Young, Robert Young and Boris Karloff.

The Subject Was Roses (xxx), on 6 at midnight. A well-acted 1968 film version of Frank. D. Gilroy's Pulitzer Prize-winning play about a troubled New York family in post-Second World War New York, starring Patricia Neal, Martin Sheen and Jack Albertson. This film marked Miss Neal's dramatic comeback after a near-fatal stroke.

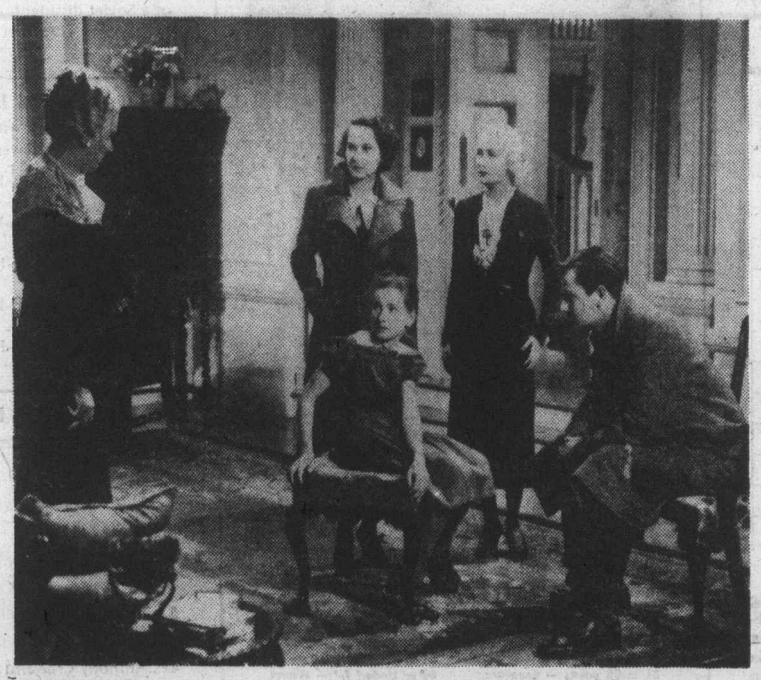

Innocent Bystanders, on 8 at midnight. No rating available on this 1972 British-made adventure about espionage and intrigue, starring Stanley Baker, Geraldine Chaplin, Dana Andrews and Donald Pleasence.

Who's Minding the Mint? (xx), on 7 at 12:45. A cast of comedy pros (Jim Hutton, Milton Berle, Joey Bishop, Dorothy Provine and Walter Brennan) highlights this 1967 farce about a mintworker's innocent plan to replace the $50,000 he accidentally destroyed which backfires into a madcap heist.

Safari, on 6 at 2:15 a.m. Victor Mature and Janet Leigh star in this 1956 jungle adventure about a hunter leading a safari party into dangerous Mau Mau territory.

Mr. Soft Touch (xx), on 8 at 2:15 a.m. A 1949 drama about a gambler on the run from racketeers who takes refuge in a settlement house and is reformed by a social worker, starring Glenn Ford and Evelyn Keyes.

The Long Hot Summer (xxx), on 7 at 2:40 a.m. An all-star cast (Paul Newman, Joanne Woodward, Orson Welles, Lee Remick, Anthony Franciosa and Angela Lansbury) highlights this excellent 1958 film version of William Faulkner's novel, The Hamlet, about a wealthy Southern family ruled over by a tyrannical patriarch.

SUPERB PERFORMANCES by Merle Oberon (standing, centre), Miriam Hopkins (immediate right) and Joel McCrea (far right) highlight These Three, an excellent 1936 film rendering of the acclaimed Lillian Hellman play, The Children's Hour, about malicious schoolgirl gossip that ruins the lives of three people, will be telecast on Tuesday at 7 p.m. on Channel 12.

Today's Highlights

A Question Of Values

In a personalized look at New York City, Correspondent Michael Maclear argues that the real concern over the city isn't the lack of money, but the pursuit of it.

"The cry of New York," he says, "is that of a fiscal junkie who is addicted welfare and costly bureaucracy. In ten years, welfare handouts are up almost 500 per cent. Between social services and the highest paid Civil Service of any city, costs have risen from 2 billion to 12 billion dollars a year.

"The never-ending chase for a dollar becomes a disturbing example of a make-and-take way of life which permits too many losers."

Maclear's report (Thursday at 9:30 p.m. on Channel 8) contrasts the monied magnificence of Manhattan with the fear and poverty in the surrounding slums. On the once prestigious Grand Concourse of the Bronx, an old lady tells how her 78-year-old husband was mugged four times in seven months. Community workers describe conditions among the Puerto Rican immigrants that are worse than in Puerto Rico itself.

Maclear finds that New York's much publicized plight is less a monetary crisis than a crisis of values.

"The golden promise of New York", he says "became corrupted. Millions remain poor, huddled in a city that is fiscally and morally bankrupt. What New York offers today isn't opportunity but welfare. The dream has been devalued."

Maclear with Correspondent Michael Maclear, is produced by Don McQueen for CTV's News, Features and Information Programming Department.

MICHAEL MACLEAR (left) looks at the financial crisis in New York City contrasting the money magnates of Manhattan with the poverty of surrounding slums, and concludes that rather than a monetary failure, it is a question of values in a report to be seen on Thursday at 8:30 p.m. on Channel 8.

Actress Realizes Life-Long Dream Role of Comic Heroine

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — "Be careful what you wish for," said Jill St. John, "you're liable to get it."

The gorgeous redhead, who may be the most beautiful woman in show business, has idolized comic strip heroine Brenda Starr since childhood. Now she will be seen playing the glamorous newspaper gal in a television movie.

Jill advises caution about wishes only half in jest. The 90-minute film, Brenda Starr, to be aired by ABC May 8, didn't turn out exactly as she'd hoped. It was made to be a series but fell short of expectations.

"I've associated myself with Brenda since I was a little girl," Jill said. "And we do have a lot in common.

"We both have red hair. Our faces and figures are pretty much the same. We travel around to exotic places — I leave for Tahiti and Bora Bora next week — and we both wear beautiful clothes.

"I've read the comic strip all my life. Some of my friends still call me Brenda. Brenda has stars in her eyes and, oh, did I want to be Brenda Starr."

In the television show Jill plays Brenda as a single girl although the comic strip heroine has married Basil St. John — no relation to Jill — after two decades of courtship.

"Basil has raised black orchids as a hobby since I can remember," Jill said. "But I had to convince everyone connected with the show there is no such orchid. I know because I raise them myself. So they had to dye some orchids black."

Jill was personally responsible for the television movie to begin with. Two years ago she made a guest appearance on The Hollywood Squares and was asked by a friend what she'd really like to do for movies or television.

She replied, "I'd like to do Brenda Starr."

The matter was forgotten. But the man who had asked the question was producer Joe Sigman. Eight months later he telephoned Jill to say he acquired rights to the property.

It is the first television movie Jill has made in six years and one of the few roles she has accepted since making her permanent home in Aspen, Colo., four years ago.

"I backed off for awhile because I'd been working in radio, movies and television since I was four years old," Jill said. "I'm the daughter of the greatest stage mother of all time. She was determined that I would have a career.

"I've worked hard all my life and it came to a crisis in England four years ago. I'd just finished doing the James Bond picture, Diamonds are Forever, and went right into Sitting Target with Oliver Reed.

"Two pictures in a row was exhausting. I woke up one night screaming and couldn't get back to sleep. I decided I needed a new way of life.

"I chose Aspen because I'd found it pleasurable visiting on and off for six years.

"I bought a three bedroom house on six acres in the mountains. I have a potting shed right in the house and have filled the place with orchids and other plants.

"I'm close to nature surrounded by beauty you know didn't come from Disney. I raise my own vegetables, ski, walk in the woods and jog a mile and a half every day. It's the healthiest possible life."

JILL ST. JOHN portrays Brenda Starr, a 1976 TV movie based on the adventures of the comic-strip crusading lady journalist, to be telecast on Saturday, May 8 at 8 p.m. on Channel 4. Ms. St. John feels she has much in common with the orchid-loving newspaper heroine.

POPULAR POETRY

An influential 20th century poet — e. e. cummings — and poetry lovers from four centuries are the subjects of the last two programs in the ANYONE FOR TENNYSON? series airing on Public TV 9.

On May 10 at 7 p.m. (rebroadcast May 13 at 9 a.m.), Anyone For Tennyson? concentrates on the poetry of cummings, one of the most innovative and influential American poets of this century. Although he is known for the eccentricity of his typography and the punctuation he employed to reinforce the rhythm and meaning of words, his poems usually dealt with familiar subjects. He wrote about the beauty of spring, the wonders of love, and the triumph of the individual over the man of the masses. But for e. e. cummings, the way words were said made all the difference.

The 22 poems selected for this program are performed in a springtime setting recreating New York's Greenwich Village, where the poet lived for nearly 40 years.

The program ends with everyone joining in singing a cummings' poem set to music by the Anyone For Tennyson? executive producer William Perry: "Sweet spring is your/time is my time is our/time for springtime is lovetime/and viva sweet love . . ."

On the concluding program of the Anyone For Tennyson! series, airing May 17 at 7 p.m. (rebroadcast May 19 at 10:30 p.m. and May 20 at 9 a.m.), the members of the First Poetry Quartet portray characters from four different centirues.

The four poetry-lovers compare poems from their times on such subjects as love, death and the beauties of nature.

Today's Movies

The Challenge, on 8 at 12:45. No rating available on this 1970 drama about an American and an Asian fighting a two-man war on an unhabitated Pacific island, starring Darren McGavin and Mako.

In Search of Gregory (xx), on 11 at 1. A muddled 1970 psychological drama about an unhappy young woman living in Rome, who travels to Geneva in the hopes of finding romance at her father's wedding. The fact that she has a disturbed younger brother doesn't help the plot much either. Two attractive actors, Julie Christie and Michael Sarrazin, are wasted.

How Awful About Allan (xx), on 5 at 3:30 Anthony Perkins and Julie Harris star in this 1970 suspense thriller about a near-blind man living with his spinster sister, who thinks someone is trying to kill him. Be prepared for a twist ending.

F. Scott Fitzgerald in Hollywood, on 8 at 7:30. An unpreviewed 1976 made-for-TV biography of the famed American writer, centering on Fitzgerald's frustrating comeback try as a screenwriter in the late 1930s, his alcoholic binges and his stormy relationships with his mentally ill wife, Zelda and his supportive mistress, Sheilah Graham. Cast includes Jason Miller as Fitzgerald and Tuesday Weld as Zelda.

Brian's Song (xxx), on 4 at 8. Five Emmys were awarded this 1971 made-for-TV drama which tells the heartbreaking true story of former Chicago Bears running back Gale Sayers and his teammate Brian Piccolo, who died of cancer in 1970. There's plenty of NFL action footage, but the real story centres on the growing friendship between the Bears' first interracial roommates. James Caan and Billy Dee Williams star.

The Snows of Kilimanjaro (xxx), on 11 at 9. A short story by Ernest Hemingway serves as the basis for this glossy but entertaining 1953 film version, starring Gregory Peck, Susan Hayward, Ava Gardner and Hildegarde Neff. The rambling plot centres on a hunter-writer in Africa and the various women in his life.

Dr. Strangelove: or, How I Learned to Stop Worrying and Love the Bomb (xxxx), on 7 at 9:15 (time approx. after basketball). Award-winning director Stanley Kubrick did a flawless job with this brilliant 1964 doomsday satire about an international nuclear crisis, featuring superb performances by Peter Sellers (in several roles), George C. Scott, Sterling Hayden and Keenan Wynn. Recommended.

Can-Can (xx), on 17 at 9:15 (time approx. after basketball). A heavy-handed 1960 film version of the Cole Porter musical hit about a lawyer defending a turn-of-century cafe owner when she is accused of presenting the Can-Can, supposedly a lewd dance, starring Frank Sinatra, Shirley Maclaine, Maurice Chevalier and Louis Jourdan.

Return to Earth, on 4 at 9:30. An unpreviewed 1976 made-for-TV true-life drama, starring Cliff Robertson as Col. Edwin E. "Buzz" Aldrin Jr., the Apollo XI astronaut and the second man to walk on the moon. Hazardous as it was, the Apollo mission was easily managed compared to the readjustment that Aldrin faced on his return to earth — a difficult time which eventually led him to seek psychiatric help. porting cast includes Sh Knight, Ralph Bellamy Stefanie Powers.

Strategic Air Command on 12 at 11:50. James Ste and June Allyson star in 1955 drama about a fo pilot-turned-baseball pl who is recalled to active The film is highlighted by spectacular aerial footag a good supporting cast.

Part 5: Vancouver Recital — Dale Reubart, piano: Sonata in B minor (Liszt).

TUESDAY
AM Network

8:03 p.m. CBC Tuesday Night — Part 1: Sacrifice. A play by young Vancouver playwright Brenda White. Set on the Prairies in an extended care hospital, one brother, dying, talks to his visiting brother. Their reminiscences are less dialogue than simultaneous monologues on the same subject — their hatred and mistrust for each other, going back to their boyhood. Cast: Walter Marsh and Robert Clothier. Part 2: The Baroque Strings of Vancouver — Norman Nelson, conductor and violinist; Jerry Domer, oboe: Concerto for Violin and Oboe in C minor (J. S. Bach); Concerto Grosso in F major, Op. 6, No. 6 (Corelli); Concerto Grosso, Op. 6, No. 11 (Handel).

10:30 Touch the Earth — The first of four programs originating in the Atlantic Provinces featuring singers, poets and just plain folk such as Jim Bennet, Helen Creighton, Marty Reno, Clary Croft, Gene MacLellan, plus recordings of "a kitchen time" in Newfoundland, a ceilidh in Cape Breton, a milling frolic, and a live concert from The Turret coffee house, Halifax.

FM Network

8:03 p.m. Ideas — First of four evenings' repeats of the 1975 Massey Lectures, Limits to Science, given by J. Tuzo Wilson, Director General of the Ontario Science Centre, former head of International Geophysical Year and preeminent authority on Continental Drift. Tonight: The Eye of the Revolution — after the emergence of the Limits to Growth debate, will the next topic be the Limits to Science? Lecture followed by a panel with Patrick McTaggart-Cowan, former executive director of the Science Council of Canada, and former president of SFU; Dr. Charles Godfrey, NDP member of the Ontario Legislature, and head of the citizens' group People or Planes, which successfully opposed the planned Pickering Airport; Dr. Melvin Kranzberg of the Georgia Institute of Technology, and editor of the journal Technology and Culture.

WEDNESDAY
AM Network

8:03 p.m. Quirks and Quarks — World famous geneticist Mr. David Suzuki is host of this series whose theme is to prove that science can be simple, exciting and fun. The program will aim at satisfying the layman's curiosity on a variety of scientific subjects. Regular features include phone-ins, a science fiction segment, visions of the future, and answers to listeners questions.

FM Network

8:03 p.m. Ideas — Second of four evenings; repeats of the 1975 Massey Lectures. Part I — Science the Technological Change — Science can flourish only in rich countries which can afford it. The three great discoveries upon which our lives are primarily based today were technological ones, and had little to do with what we call science. Part II: The Future of Science — it is clear that no one has known how to finance scientific revolutions. Perhaps progress in every branch of science becomes more and more expensive and less and less productive until there is a fresh scientific revolution. If this is so, might science itself be finite? Are we coming to its end?

THURSDAY
AM Network

8:03 p.m. Themes and Variations—Part I — Huguette Toruangeau, mezzo-soprano; Alexandra Maunn, piano: La Rachellina (Paisiello); Paga Fui (Winter); La Rondinella Dove sei (Handel); Le Soir (Gounod); Regrets (Delibes); Tristesse de l'Odalisque, and Reviens, Reviens, David; Oh! Quand je dors, and Comment disaientelles? (Liszt); La nuit (Bizet); Nuit d'Espagne On dit, and Elle s'en est allee (Massenet); Chason de Florian (Godard); Aimons-nous (Hahn); La Perichole, O mon cher amant, and Ah que diner (Offenbach) Recorded at the CBC Halifax Festival, at the Rebecca Cohn Auditorium at Dalhousie University. Part II — A 95th birthday tribute to operetta and film score composer, Robert Stolz, prepared and presented by Tony Thomas.

FM Network

8:03 p.m. Ideas — Third of four evenings' repeats of the 1975 Massey Lectures. Part I: Energy Riddle — No one likes to admit it, but the combination of rising populations, and scarcer and more expensive energy spells unhappiness for the developed world and disaster for the undeveloped. Part II — Dialogue with Starvation — They say Malthus was wrong when he said in 1798, "The Power of population is infinitely greater than the power in the earth to produce sustinence for man." Unfortunately it is now apparent that he was wrong because he was not pessimistic enough.

9:03 p.m. Opera Time — Host: Ruby Mercer. Opera in Germany Today: Excerpts from Lulu (Berg); Elegy for Young Lovers, and Der Junge Lord (Henze); Der Goldene Bock, Da kommt davon and Jonny spielt auf (Krenek); Help! Help! the Globolins (in German) (Menotti). Intermission guest: Stefan Minde, conductor, Ernst Krenek, composer.

10:30 p.m. Classical Guitar — Ramon Ybarra, guitarist: Son de Carrilhoes (Pernambuco); La Comparsa (Lecuona); Habanera (De Puentes); Minuet (Haydn); Contra Danza, and La Zamba Alegre (Cervantes); Vale Venezolano (Borges); Two Prelude (Ponce) Impressao de Rua (Savio).

FRIDAY
AM Network

2:03 p.m. Canadian Schools Broadcast — People of This Land: Ontario.

2:30 p.m. Canadian Concert Hall — Early Music Consort of London: Five Centuries of popular music. A program ranging from the popular chansons of the Renaissance court to medieval pop music.

8:03 p.m. Between Ourselves — The B.C. Ferry Fleet, by Jurgen Hesse.

FM Network

8:03 p.m. Ideas — Last of four evenings' repeats of the 1975 Massey Lectures. Part I: Four Billion White Elephants — Three ideas which were launched 200 years ago and have been the keys to our present western civilization, applied in the special circumstances of the times. For the long range, they are all in error and will produce our downfall unless they are abandoned for a new philosophy. These are Adam Smith's ideas, in The Wealth of Nations, that growth can continue; Thomas Jefferson's premise, in the U.S. Declaration of Independence, that mankind's end is the pursuit of liberty and happiness; and Watt's invention of the steam engine, which led to a belief in unlimited cheap energy. Part II: Panel with Dr. Arnold Pacey, historian and author of the Maze of Ingenuity; Dr. Magnus Pyke, secretary of the British Association for the Advancement of Science. Taped in London.

9 p.m. Radio International — Hosts: Jan Tenant and Harry Mannis. The Obligations of Love — third chapter of a 5-part radio biography of John Howard Griffin, the American author of Black Like Me, and other varied works. Tonight: The Great Silence — A study of Thomas Merton — Father Louis Merton, the Trappist monk, poet and fellow-photographer (Griffin too is an excellent photographer). Father Louis Merton's biography was recently completed by Griffin, and the readings in this program are from it; also from a book of photographs and biographical notes called A Hidden Wholeness; and from a paper based on the journal entries written in Merton's hermitage.

Tweaking Eagle's Tail

Pat Barclay

Who reads cookbooks? (I mean, really reads them, as opposed to consulting them in a more or less professional capacity whenever the rhubarb plant's outdone itself again or the boss is coming to dinner.) Somebody certainly must. A glance at the cookbook section of any bookstore will reveal dozens of the things, all of them claiming immense practicality and most of them achieving nothing of the sort.

All any household cook really needs to get by on is one general purpose manual (the kind that understands how it feels to boil an egg for the first time) and common sense. So buying anything more for oneself is likely to be either personal indulgence or wishful thinking. The best cooks, as the world keeps telling us ad nauseum, never use any recipes at all. (Some of the worst ones don't either, but nobody ever tells us about them.)

Please don't misunderstand. I'm not knocking the compulsive cookbook buyer, I'm just pointing out that he (and she) most certainly exist. I know because I'm one myself. A quick glance at the bookshelf (and through one incredibly untidy drawer, if the truth were known) reveals that for some unfathomable reason I once thought I couldn't live without:

Fast Feasts: A Cookbook for Hurried Gourmets

The Complete Yoghurt Cookbook

The How to Make Your Husband Happy Cookbook (I could have told her the secret myself: Have the meals ready on time)

The Good Fare and Cheer of Old England

Chafing Dish Magic, and

The Naked Gourmet.

Now, much as I would like to believe the contrary, I have to admit that none of these cookbooks has done me or my cooking any good whatever. (With the possible exception of The Naked Gourmet, which is co-authored by Ben Wicks. Interestingly enough, it would make a great companion on a desert island.) Why, then, do I hang onto them with all the passionate zeal of a nostalgia buff at a Saskatchewan auction sale?

If you know the answer to that one, you may also be interested in the new Canadian cookbooks described below. Perhaps I should point out first, however, that for dedicated cookbook readers it's the style that counts. When, for example, Ben Wicks and Peter Worthington of The Naked Gourmet decide to impart an actual recipe, it comes as an anticlimax. ("Everyone has heard about beef strogonoff, but few people do anything about it" . . . "This is a screwball cake" . . . "Actually chicken heads are exceedingly tasty, once one becomes accustomed to being stared at by dead eyes.")

The four books described below should provide something to everyone's taste, for among them they cover most of the cooking bases. Helen Gougeon's Original Canadian Cookbook (Tundra) is the all-purpose, family standby variety. It's also attractively illustrated by Carlo Italiano and contains chatty little accounts of festive traditions in the Gougeon family.

The only trouble with the Original Canadian Cookbook as I see it is that I haven't liked any of the recipes I've tried so far. But we cookbook fans are ever optimistic. There's still 677 more to go.

The Cooking of Provincial Quebec, by Mirelle Beaulieu (Gage, $9.95) is an attractive example of the ethnic specialty genre. Its generally plain and hearty instructions (Stewed Pigs' Feet, Ham with Beer, Baked Beans) include five ways to serve pork as an hors d'oeuvre. But to try half the desserts, I'm going to have to cultivate a sugar maple grove in the backyard.

The early habitants must have been prodigious eaters. (Some of the recipes in this book are over 350 years old.) Imagine, if you will, a fricassee of six perch and four catfish, plus five or six pounds of vegetables, to serve four!

Blanche Pownall Garrett's A Taste of the Wild (James Lorimer, $9.95) should delight the growing number of folk who live, or like to dabble in living, off the land. It contains recipes for 42 wild plants, from Nettle Soup to White Clover Cream, and it looks every bit as good as it sounds.

Finally, there's Blanche Redman's Recipes for Healthier Families (Gage). This one is for those of us who enjoy being hectored into giving up those wicked "refined goods" every now and then. Blanche Redman is an outspoken champion of sensible nutrition and family meals ("The exchange of ideas nourishes our minds as well as our bodies"). Her book steers a dignified middle course between the nut cutlets of the lean left and the hot fudge sundaes of the rotund right.

That's what's so appealing about cookbooks as escapist reading — they come in every conceivable mood and taste. And now if you'll excuse me, I've got some vicarious eating to do.

Tweaking Eagle's Tail

By GEORGE OAKE

As the excesses of the United States Bicentennial celebrations reach epic proportions this summer Gore Vidal's "1876" provides a perfect anodyne to an event that will enfold even our Calgary Stampede in a lather of stars and stripes.

Vidal must take caustic glee in the stir caused by the novel. Not too many years ago Time magazine refused to review his work because of its overt sexual nature. Now he is the subject of a cover story lauding his books. Yet many Americans feel his earlier historical work Burr, followed by 1876, belittle all that is holy in U.S. tradition.

The author admits 1876 is the final volume of a trilogy including "Washington D.C." and "Burr" which "record in sequence the history of the United States from the Revolution to — well, the beginning of Camelot."

In 1876 Charles Schuyler, an illegitimate son of Aaron Burr and narrator of the earlier novel by the same name, is fictionally resurrected. After 30 years in Europe Schuyler returns to his native land with his widowed daughter Emma, the Princess d'Agrigente by marriage. Blitzed in the "panic of 1873," he hopes to improve family fortunes by arranging a suitable match for his attractive daughter, and ingratiate himself with Samuel Tilden, the favored presidential candidate of 1876. Schyuler hopes this strategy will net him the position of minister to France in the Tilden regime.

An aristocratic daughter, combined with his own "small but elegant literary reputation," provide necessary credentials to rub shoulders with notables, including President U.S. Grant, Mark Twain and the aristocratic Astor family. Through the neat technical device of making Schuyler a political reporter, readers are swept through the 1876 election campaign on a froth of intrigue and pretentious society.

It's a fascinating floodtide, not to mention an eerily familiar metaphor for recent U.S. events. In place of Vietnam and Watergate the Americans of 1876 had the vicious civil war still fresh in their minds. A generalized political corruption held the whole country in a cynical grip.

As one Tilden lieutenant points out with studied candor: "The American electorate deeply dislikes the idea of reform, of good government, of militant honesty."

If that sounds more like the Vidal of the television talk shows than a 19th century politician, remember the 1876 election was literally stolen from Tilden.

The former New York governor had a 250,000 popular vote plurality, only to see it dissolve after President Grant sent troops to the reconstructed south, ostensibly to maintain order. In fact, the presence of the troops allowed agents of Tilden's opponent, Rutherford B. Hayes, to freely roam the south buying off the former's electoral votes. Eventually a congressional committee, bolstered by supreme court judges, awarded the election to Hayes, an action that nearly caused riots in the streets.

"Fierce looking troops lined every approach to the Capitol. There is rebellion in the air, but nowhere else," a saddened Schuyler laments just prior to the inauguration.

Yet there is far more here than fear and loathing on the campaign trail 100 years ago. Vidal's research is precise down to the smallest delicacy served at Willard's Washington bar a century past. In the age of robber barons, a worldy Schuyler observes, "Not only is there a fascination in amassing huge quantities of money, preferably by illegal means and at the expense of everybody else in the country, but there is also a marvelous comfort and privacy that these riches confer."

Amid a presidential election campaign he is also confounded that, "... the country has been entirely preoccupied with the Centennial Exhibition, with sewing machines, Japanese vases, popped corn, typewriters and telephones, not to mention incessant pr for those paladins who cre this perfect nation, this en Eden, exactly one cent ago."

Gourmet fare for those like to see the American e squirm.

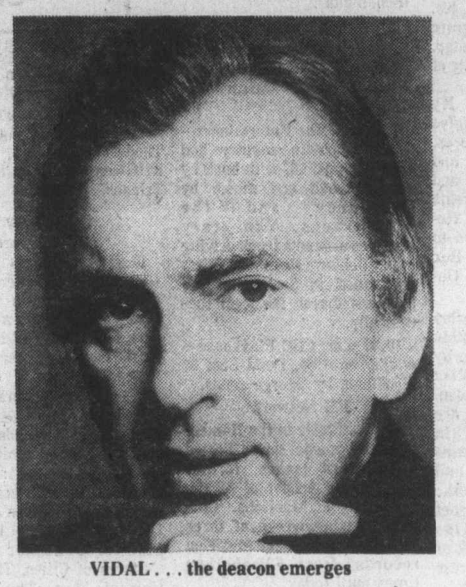

But some poignant food thought is also impli Schuyler's daughter Em born and raised in Paris, i first horrified by raw cr hess. Yet slowly and su she is sucked into the vorte the American dream. We left with an implication t she may have engineere friend's death in childbirt order to marry her husban

In this final subjugation Emma's aristocratic nobi to the new world's u materialsim, Vidal seems t telling us the disease is in tious. There is no escape f the greed and meann engendered by the avarici American system.

It is not a new theme. M than 140 years ago Alexis Toqueville worried about same vice in his seminal w Democracy in America. Y is unlike Gore Vidal to le his readers with a mo Perhaps all those expatri years on the banks of the Ti have brought forth the dea in this foremost Ameri writer.

Whatever, the book stand an elegant revelation of American character. Vi strips away the sentimenta in which his countrymen us ly soak their past. It is alm as though he wants to pu America for its immatu and ignorance. Behind literary sneering, however, detects a parent's fondness a feisty if unruly child.

Few writers of any ge could take such an arrog stand and still manage produce an excellent novel.

800 Years of Rockets

By JULIAN REID

"Rochetta," they were called in 1379, when the Genoese deployed them in a war against Venice. The word, from which we derive our modern "rocket," means "little distaffs" — and even today there is something distaff-like in the contours of our latest ICBMs and space-probes.

In The Rockets' Red Glare, Wernher von Braun and Frederick I. Ordway III chronicle the 800-year story of rock[illegible] with the help of a fine selection of illustrations, many in color. Their text, unfortunately, is rather sketchy at times, particularly when it comes to the momentous developments of our own century—it can't hold a candle to Willy Ley's classic Rockets, Missile, and Men in Space. But the pictures compensate; if only there were more of them!

The earliest dates from the 13th century, when the first authenticated reference to a rocket appears in the Book of Fire, traditionally attributed to one Marcus Graecus. Marcus, however, was not the rocket's inventor—it was almost certainly an import from the East, probably China, but perhaps India or Arabia.

From the beginning, rockets had two main functions, both vividly portrayed on these pages—as weapons, and as fireworks. In the 19th century, they assumed a new role: between 1871 and 1962, in the British Isles alone, an estimated 15,000 people were rescued from shipwrecks by means of life-saving rocke All in all, despite World Wa and the German bombardm of England, the rocket probably preserved more li than it has so far claimed.

In our own generation, already-ambiguous role grown further complicat Guided missiles maintain dubious cold-war "balance terror," and at the same ti bear Man upward on greatest adventure yet, into beckoning depths of terplanetary space. All that needed to round off the tale one climactic image; a view our planet, small, vulnerab and very much all-of-a-piec the increasingly famili rocket's-eye-vision Spaceship Earth.

THE ROCKETS' RED GLARE, by Wernher von Braun an Frederick I. Ordway III. Doubleday. $11.50.

Mind-Boggling Story

As an old hand at the reviewing game I never believed the day would arrive when a book would leave me at a loss for words. That day has now come and, frankly, I don't know how to deal adequately with A Man Called Intrepid in the space available to me.

This story is so outstanding that I cannot think of anything of its kind remotely comparable and any praise I could lavish on it, however extravagant, would still fail to do it justice. For this reason I will skip the superlatives, ask you to accept the praise as read, and try to give you some idea of the content, which held me spellbound.

The book is an authentic account of the most significant secret diplomacy and decisive intelligence operations of the Second World War. It is packed with action, adventure and astonishing revelations, any one of which could be expanded into a marvellous book. Taken together, they are almost too mind-boggling to digest in one gulp.

Let's start with Professor Frederick Lindemann, later Lord Cherewell, who way back in 1920 began sounding the alarm about the revival of German militarism in an atmosphere of pseudo-scientific racism backed by advanced science and military technology. Lindemann was the leader of a small circle of scientists who were unofficial advisers to Winston Churchill.

A member of this elite group was a young Canadian, an air ace of the First World War who was also a mathematician. In the early 1920s young William Stephenson pioneered public broadcasting in Canada, marketed receiving sets for BBC listeners in Britain, wrote papers on what he called "Tele-vision" and proved by mathematical equations that pictures could be transmitted as easily as sound.

Stephenson was an extraordinary mixture of scientist and man of action. He invented things, built up businesses and made fortunes with apparently no effort (he was a millionaire before he was 30), was an intimate of the world's leading scientists — and was an amateur lightweight boxing champion until he retired undefeated in 1928!

Stephenson worked closely with two refugee German-Jewish scientists, Charles Steinmetz and Chaim Weizmann (who became Israel's first president), but he was most influenced by his friend H. G. Wells, who convinced him that in the science-fiction wars to come, rapidly conveyed information would be the first line of defence.

Churchill thought in terms of conventional forces but Stephenson convinced him that knowledge used as an early warning system could be utilized as a co-ordinated intelligence service. In those years the professional British Secret Intelligence Service was virtually non est, and an American equivalent didn't even exist.

Between 1924 and 1933 Stephenson travelled the world, expanding his business interests, establishing contacts, always thinking, always learning. Churchill, conscious of the coming dangers, languished despondently in the political wilderness. He needed prodding and this was Lindemann's role, but it was Stephenson who supplied the facts to support the professor's fears.

STEPHENSON . . . unique talents

Churchill sounded his warnings publicly but no one listened. But in 1940 he joined Chamberlain's cabinet as First Lord of the Admiralty and from that peripheral post initiated the intelligence service which was finally to win the war.

Working alone, Churchill needed authority and funds and, in secrecy, he obtained both from King George VI. This is just one of hundreds of astounding revelations in this astonishing book.

So armed, Churchill gave Stephenson a mission. He was instructed to establish and maintain the closest possible but most guarded covert communication between Churchill and President Roosevelt (whose country was not at war), then set up headquarters in New York and establish, from nothing, a world-wide intelligence network that would challenge the staggering force of the Nazi juggernaut. His code-name, said Churchill, would be Intrepid.

Roosevelt gave Stephenson his full support. Considering that the U.S. was neutral, Congress isolationist, and the joint chiefs of staff against becoming embroiled in a European war, the presidential cover given to Stephenson and his team (there were finally some 30,000 operatives) was nothing short of heroic, particularly as Roosevelt repeatedly laid himself open to impeachment.

How the tireless man called Intrepid (his grueling schedule averaged 20 working hours each day of the war) set up his world-wide network and how he organized a matching American organization (Office of Strategic Services under the brilliant General William "Wild Bill" Donovan) and meshed the two, is a fascinating story but too complex to go into here.

Stephenson hand-picked his team. They consisted of scientists, industrialists, businessmen, a small army of mathematicians, royalty, university dons, actors (such as Noel Coward and Leslie Howard), magicians, astrologers, safe-crackers (taken from Canadian and British jails), beautiful seductresses, film producers (notably Alexander Korda), set designers, eccentric characters chosen for specific jobs—and resistance leaders who commanded thousands of anonymous brave men and women who worked in occupied Europe, many of whom suffered frightful tortures and hideous deaths at the hands of the Gestapo.

Intrepid's accomplishments are too numerous to list here, but they included cracking the "unbreakable" German master coding system, stealing (in New York) the Italian naval cyphers, using psychology to cause Hitler to commit fatal errors, planning (in Canada) and executing (in Czechoslovakia) the assassination of the fiendish Heydrich, ending the U-boat menace, delaying the German attack against Russia for six weeks (which doomed it to failure), fooling the Germans during the North African and Normandy landings, masterminding the resistance movements, and hundreds of other vital tasks, including preventing Germany making the first atomic bomb, which it was ready and able to do.

A Man Called Intrepid makes every other war book insipid by comparison. It is now clear that without the genius of the modest, almost anonymous, Stephenson there would not have been any acclaimed Allied heroes or victories to celebrate for, quite simply, Nazi tyranny would have triumphed.

With a determined will and singular charisma this quiet Canadian persuaded Churchill and Roosevelt into a communality of views, became the most effective intermediary between them, and without fuss, and without pay either, changed the course of history. Not even the members of Churchill's and Roosevelt's own administrations, let alone bureaucrats and service chiefs, ever learned of his existence.

In addition to being the most stimulating record about the infinite complexity of modern warfare, and a work of profound historical importance, A Man Called Intrepid is a great and glorious adventure story with facts (now disclosed after the lifting of an official 35-year silence) that are more sensational than any fiction, including the James Bond novels whose plots and characters were based on Ian Fleming's experiences while working as an aide to Stephenson.

A MAN CALLED INTREPID, by William Stevenson. Longman. $14.50.

Old Stuff, But Told Well

"You won't have Richard Nixon to kick around any more." — said (prematurely) by Nixon when he was defeated in race for governor of California, 1962.

By AL FORREST

During the final days of his administration, Richard Nixon drank heavily, talked to portraits of past presidents and considered suicide, according to Washington Post reporters Bob Woodward and Carl Bernstein.

He cried, he prayed and he shouted at this friends.

This is the only new information contained in this sequel to All the President's Men and it isn't much. And it hangs by the slenderest of threads.

The source appears to be Sen. Robert Griffin, Republican, who got it from Edward Cox, husband of Tricia Nixon Cox. The only two references to possible suicide are in two telephone calls from Cox to Griffin.

It is not much to build a book around.

But the value of The Final Days is not the new information, it is the splendid summing up of facts already known.

Woodward and Bernstein, in a brief foreword, say that most of the characters co-operated in supplying information but a few did not. The other material was obtained by secondary sources. The ones who did not co-operate are not indentified but they might be deduced by their treatment in the book.

The two characters who fare most poorly in this account, besides Nixon, are Elliot Richardson, the attorney-general who resigned in protest when Nixon fired special prosecutor Archibald Cox, and David Eisenhower, husband of Nixon's daughter Julie. Richardson in this account is less than noble and rather weak, but not as soft as Eisenhower, who is always referred to simply as David by Woodward and Bernstein. (By contrast, Nixon's other son-in-law is Cox, not Ed.)

Eisenhower is portrayed as simple-minded, quivering, disloyal and totally dominated by his wife Julie. By contrast she is one of the three heroes of the piece, along with Al Haig, who succeeded Bob Haldeman as chief of staff, and Fred Buzhardt, a Nixon lawyer.

Julie is portrayed as being bright, determined and fiercely loyal to her father even when the worst was revealed. A photograph (included in the book) of Julie hugging her father on the day he announced his resignation is genuinely moving, a rare emotion in the Nixon saga.

Haig is portrayed as another loyalist who decided it would be better for the nation if Nixon resigned and it is he who paves the way for Nixon's ouster in a carefully orchestrated series of leaks of incriminating information to senators and other Nixon supporters.

Buzhardt is the ultimate hero of the book, in the centre of everything and trying to do what is right for his country.

Woodward and Bernstein have never indentified the mysterious Deep Throat, the administration official who met Woodward in parking lots in the middle of the night and helped him unravel the Watergate cover-up. Presumably Deep Throat gets his reward in The Final Days.

It seems safe to rule out Julie as Deep Throat, leaving Haig and Buzhardt as prime candidates. In this connection, the following from page 22 of The Final Days is interesting:

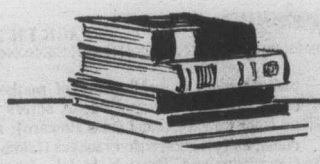

As an aide to Republican Senator Strom Thurmond in 1960, "Buzhardt had developed an extensive network of informants among the Pentagon's officer corps, meeting them at times in all-night drug stores."

A second interesting sidelight in The Final Days is the constant theme of Pentagon influence that runs through the Nixon administration. As well as Gen. Haig and Buzhardt as two key advisers, about half of Nixon's other confidants have military connections. This could help explain why former president Eisenhower complained that the military-industrial complex was more powerful than any president. They have their representatives surrounding the president at all times, regardless of who is in the White House.

THE FINAL DAYS, By Bob Woodward and Carl Bernstein. Musson. $12.50.

Sins of the Sons Visited on Fathers?

By CHRISTOPHER LEHMANN-HAUPT

"The literature on the Rockefellers is basically Manichean," point out the journalists Peter Collier and David Horowitz in a "Bibliographic Note" at the end of their captivating biography, The Rockefellers: An American Dynasty. And: "Those who find it profitable to exaggerate the family's 'hidden empire' are as firmly imprisoned in the Rockefeller myth as the kept biographers."

It is therefore with some pride that Messrs. Collier and Horowitz explain that "When (George Taylor Jr., the current head of public relations for the Rockefeller family) asked us what our 'thrust' was, we told him that in our opinions the Rockefellers had suffered from being treated as either saints or demons, and that our book would be part of neither camp." ("Nothing better summarizes the family's attitude towards books and the people who write them," the authors add, "than the fact that our answer . . . could never really satisfy him.")

Their claim of impartiality is largely valid. Despite having had unprecedented, though by no means unimpeded, access to material on file at the family headquarters at Rockefeller Center, they have not written anything remotely as laudatory as Allan Nevin's well-known authorized biography, John D. Rockefeller: A Study in Power. Nor have they indulged in such motiveless malignity as do two recent books published by Lyle Stuart: William Hoffman's David and Ferdinand Lundberg's The Rockefeller Syndrome, the latter of which, published last fall, is essentially a silly expose that starts off as if it were going to lay bare some dark secret behind the Rockefeller success and ends up with the bland conclusion that "there seems to be no better way to describe the Rockefellers than as the modern Medici." ("They are not ordinary Joes, even if some of them tread the sidewalks in bargain basement clothes.")

Still, it is by no means a completely neutral book that Collier and Horowitz have written. In fact, they often appear on the verge of outright muckraking, particularly when the treat the third generation of Rockefellers, the brothers John D. 3d, Nelson, Laurance, Winthrop and David. For it was this generation, the authors maintain, that expended the good will that its forebear John D. Rockefeller Jr. had labored so mightily to store up. Laurance, with his habit of turning an interest in conversation into profitable enterprise; David, with his financial support of regressive governments in South America, Africa and Asia, on the principle that what benefits bad rulers also avails those who are ruled; and Nelson, most of all Nelson, with his sins laid bare during his vice-presidential confirmation hearings: it was these Rockefellers who exposed the mercenary motives that underlay the celebrated philanthropy; it was they who showed that their honor had been won with profit in all countries.

Indeed, by the time Collier and Horowitz are finished with "The Brothers," you get the feeling that it was all they could do to resist writing outright demonography, that it was only by gritting their teeth that they kept from blaming the Rockefellers for all the world's present troubles.

Yet the tension created by the authors' determination to remain neutral is perhaps what is most interesting about their biography. For one thing, it enables us to see the family's history from the point of view of its fourth generation, the 21 young men and women (not counting Nelson's two sons by his marriage to Happy Murphy, or his son Michael, who died in 1961) known collectively as the Cousins. For this biography ultimately belongs to the Cousins. Their particular personal problems are what the entire narrative has been leading up to (if one were to streamline the family's history and apply to it the old quip about the business tycoon, one might say that in four generations the Rockefellers got on, got honest, got honored and got analyzed). And the authors' view of the past finally coincides with that of the Cousins.

So by telling the worst of the third generation without ever slipping into outright condemnation, Collier and Horowitz make more poignant the Cousins' dilemma—a feeling of ambivalence toward their forebears that combines love with hate, respect with disrespect, pride with shame, and a desire to escape the family name with a knowledge that escape can never really be accomplished. No wonder these people have had more than their share of troubles and psychoanalysts.
